SHORTAGE OF $70,928 IN NIGHT AND DAY LIQUIDATION

Audit Shows Deputy State Finance Commissioner Ross, in Charge of Looted Institution's Affairs, Drew Checks on Funds Meant for Depositors.

HIS ARREST ASKED FOR BY SIDENER

Inquiry Discloses That on Jan. 15 He Invested $50,000 in Kansas City Bank Which Failed Month After He Assumed Presidency.

A discrepancy of $70,928.99 has been discovered in the accounts of Donald W. Ross, special Deputy State Finance Commissioner, for the liquidation of the Night and Day Bank. The audit which disclosed that checks in that sum had been drawn on the liquidating account, but not for the benefit of the liquidation is incomplete and the shortage may yet be found to be larger.

Statement of the discrepancy was made yesterday by State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh, who said that he had revoked Ross' appointment and turned over facts disclosed to the Circuit Attorney.

Circuit Attorney Sidener at 12:30 this Sunday) morning telephoned to Capt. Nally, assistant night chief of police, and asked for the arrest of Ross and requested that he be held for the Circuit Attorney, "suspected of embezzlement." He said that Finance Commissioner Millspaugh had requested the arrest.

Ross on Jan. 15, last, invested $50,000 in the West Side State Bank of Kansas City and became its president. The bank failed a month later due to the presence of an excessive amount of cattle loan paper. Ross, though nominally still in the employ of the State, spent much of the last two months in Kansas City, and an audit of the Night and Day accounts in his absence brought disclosure that he had drawn large personal checks upon the liquidating accounts.

He said yesterday in conference with Commissioner Millspaugh that the sum of the checks was covered by deposits elsewhere to his personal account, but he did not disclose where these deposits were.

Was Chief Witness for State.

Ross was the chief witness for the State in the prosecution of officers of the Night and Day Bank, and was the custodian of the funds to which depositors have been looking for reimbursement of some part of the $1,000,000 which they, with stockholders, lost in the bank's failure in January, 1922. To date depositors have received 50 per cent of their deposits.

When disclosure of the condition of Ross' accounts was made to Circuit Attorney Sidener, he declared that he was "inexpressibly shocked." He said that he would await further disclosures of the audit before determining his course of action.

Statement by Millspaugh.

After a conference in the offices of the firm which audited Ross' accounts, Commissioner Millspaugh gave out the following statement:

An audit of the accounts of Donald W. Ross, special Deputy Commissioner of Finance in charge of the liquidation of the Night and Day Bank, discloses that a number of checks have been drawn by Mr. Ross against the bank account of the special deputy which appear on their face to have been drawn for purposes other than payments for which Mr. Ross was authorized by law to draw such checks, viz., the payment of the expenses of liquidation and payment of dividends to creditors of the bank.

The matters handled by Mr. Ross as special deputy were so numerous and so complicated, and his accounts were in such shape, that it was impossible for the Finance Department to spare the number of investigators necessary to make this audit, and hence the Commissioner employed a firm of certified public accountants to make it, and they have been engaged on this work for several weeks. Their work is far from complete, so that it is impossible at this time for me to state the precise condition that obtains with reference to the funds of the bank.

The checks above mentioned which were drawn against the

ATHLETICS HERALDED AS SURE CURE FOR SPOONING PARTIES

Physical Culture Experts Told of Anti-Petting Effects of Outdoor Sports.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Spooning and petting parties are not indulged in by those who take regular exercise. So Miss Elizabeth Burchenal, of the American Folk Dance Society, told the women who met here today to formulate a scientific system of physical exercises for American women in general.

"It just isn't done, that's all," Miss Burchenal repeated as she told of her observations and inquiries at schools where athletics had been made a part of the compulsory routine. She told of a school at Colorado Springs where, she said, physical and mental development went hand-in-hand and petting parties thereby had been eliminated.

"Every student was obliged to take a prescribed amount of exercise," she said, "but it was given in such a manner that the students loved it. The percentage of spooning parties in that school was zero. Both boys and girls—especially the girls—simply forbade spooning when they became interested in athletics."

The age of frail, fainting women is past, and the day of scientific physical culture is here, she said. She recommended as good petting party antidotes horseback riding, golf, tennis and canoeing, if taken regularly.

The conference, called by Mrs. Herbert Hoover under the auspices of the National Amateur Athletic Association of which she is a vice president, brought together physical culture experts from universities, schools and associations throughout the country. They plan to formulate a physical culture program that will be available to all women.

POLICEMAN SUSPENDED FOR SUBMITTING TO HOLDUP

He Had Been Detailed to Protect Filling Station From Which Robbers Got $29.14.

Patrolman Philip J. Schmit of the Deer Street Station was suspended last night on a charge of neglect of duty in that he submitted to being held up by two robbers at a filling station to which he had been detailed as guard.

The robbers, two young men with drawn revolvers, entered the filling station about 9:40 o'clock and forced James O. Ralls, 21 years old, of 2830 Dalton avenue, who was in charge, to hold up his hands. Then they pushed Ralls against a partition, behind which Patrolman Schmit was sitting.

Peeking into the room the robbers saw Patrolman Schmit. One of them held a revolver against Schmit's body while the other took $29.14 from the cash register. Both robbers escaped on foot.

GUSHER BESIDE FRISCO TRACKS HALTS ST. LOUIS TRAINS

High Wind Spreads Oil and Gas From Well Near Bristow, Ok., Across Rails.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., April 7.—A gusher brought in near Bristow today alongside the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad right of way caused stoppage of train service.

A high wind spread oil and gas from the well across the tracks, making it dangerous for engines to pass.

Passenger train No. 7, from St. Louis to Oklahoma City, and No. 10, from Oklahoma City to St. Louis, were halted.

The well started off making 1000 barrels of oil, according to estimates of the drillers.

Ammunition Explosion Starts Fire.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, April 7.—Heralded by the explosion of 100,000 rounds of small arms ammunition stored in the basement of the Hurd Sporting Company's store, fire early today destroyed the building, spread to the Butterworth block and damaged the Sparks Chambers, causing a total loss of more than $300,000.

BODIES OF 8 RUM RUNNERS PICKED UP AFTER SHIPWRECK

Tragedy of Contraband Fleet Disclosed When Drowned Men Are Found Floating Among Ale Barrels.

SINKING PROBABLY RESULT OF COLLISION

No Evidence Found to Indicate Other Vessel Also Went Down in Vineyard Sound Accident.

By the Associated Press.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., April 7.—A tragedy of the rum-running fleets was disclosed today when the bodies of eight members of the crew of the sunken steamer John Dwight were found floating in Vineyard Sound with barrels of bottled ale.

The steamer, which went down within sight of the Cuttyhunk coast guards yesterday, was believed to have been damaged by collision with another vessel. Whether the second ship also sank was not determined, but lacking wreckage to indicate parts of a vessel other than those of the John Dwight, coast guards and the fishermen who found the bodies believed that only one craft went down.

All indications were that the John Dwight carried contraband cargo.

Vessel Had Been Source of Mystery for Several Days.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 7.—The steam lighter John Dwight which sank yesterday in Vineyard Sound, with all on board, had provided a water front mystery here for several days before news came of her loss. Tied up at a dock since early January, the steamer began to show signs of activity a week ago when Captain Carmichael appeared here with credentials and took her over. Early this week a crew arrived, made up of men unknown here. They would not talk. Wednesday night the John Dwight slipped out of the harbor, nobody knew whither.

Before it was learned that barrels of bottled ale had been found floating where the steamer went down, the water front theory was that the vessel had gone out on rum business. Mysterious comings and goings of vessels had not been uncommon here. The arrival of the silent crew of strangers, eight or nine men in all, served to strengthen the impression. The new captain was a familiar figure here, having worked out of Newport on tow boats, for many years. Nobody, however, seemed to know his first name.

The Dwight, owned by the Navy during the war, later was bought by Capt. Lewis N. Blix, of New York, well known in yachting circles. Last fall the vessel was used in salvaging coal from sunken barges off Point Judith. When the weather grew too rough for this work she was tied up here and John K. Sullivan, a Newport contractor, who had been the partner of Blix in the coal salvaging enterprise, took charge of her throughout the winter. A week ago Carmichael came here and showed Sullivan papers giving him charge of the steamer. The crew came later.

The John Dwight cast off Wednesday but returned to port soon, owing to the dense fog. On Thursday morning she was gone, having moved out quietly in the night.

Once during the winter while the vessel was tied up the coast guard cutter Coushnet put in here and the crew searched the Dwight. No liquor was found on board.

HYDROGEN GAS FROZEN AT 430 BELOW ZERO

U. S. Bureau of Standards Tests Apparatus for Liquefying Element at Low Temperature.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A small quantity of frozen hydrogen and about two quarts of the same element liquefied weer produced today at the Bureau of Standards, in a successful test of liquefying apparatus conducted by Prof. C. W. Kanolt. This represented the result after chilling many thousand cubic feet of the gas to near absolute zero, where heat is entirely absent. Several experiments were made with the hydrogen ice and liquefied later before the Washington Philosophical Society, a scientific organization.

The frozen hydrogen was described as similar in appearance to snow, while the liquid was colorless. In order to liquefy the gas, a temperature of 253 degrees centigrade—about 420 degrees Fahrenheit—below zero, had to be attained. The hydrogen ice began to form a few degrees lower, at about 430 Fahreinheit below zero. All the low temperatures were produced by expanding the gas itself after it had been compressed under pressure of 3000 pounds a square inch, chilled by application of liquid air, and then allowed to expand.

NEW AIRPLANE ENGINE, GOING AT FULL SPEED, RUNS FOR 573 HOURS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

COMPLETION of a record-breaking test of a new airplane engine was announced tonight by the Navy Department.

For 573 hours the machine, known as a "Wright model E-4," ran without a stop with the throttle wide open, and data accumulated during the run indicated "a saving of 90 per cent in the operating cost of aircraft engines of this type." An indication of the endurance of the new engine will be given, engineers said, by comparison with the types used in the world war when 100 hours was considered a long run.

The engine was built by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation of Paterson, N. J. During the test it would have covered, at the usual cruising speed maintained by the navy at sea, approximately 60,000 miles, or two and a half times around the world at the equator, in a little more than three weeks, according to Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

"The improvement is the result of intensive work for more than a year in the engineering section of the Bureau of Aeronautics," Admiral Moffett said.

WEEKS REFUSES TO HALT RANDLE SUIT INQUIRY

Wife of Officer Suing Colonel Asks Discontinuance; Says Case Was Dropped.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Secretary of War Weeks will not halt the army investigation he ordered after Capt. H. Randle had brought suit for $100,000 against his commanding officer, Col. L. Conger, of the 20th infantry at San Antonio, alleging defamation of Mrs. Randle's name.

Mrs. Randle telegraphed Secretary Weeks today notifying him that the suit had been withdrawn and asking him to stop the army inquiry. Secretary Weeks sent back an answer immediately saying the charges constituted "a serious reflection on those connected with the military service and wished to know all the facts."

Reported Compromise Agreement When Case Is Dropped.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 7.—The veil of secrecy surrounding the withdrawal of a suit for $100,000 by Capt. and Mrs. Edwin Randle of the Twentieth Infantry against Col. Arthur L. Conger, commander of the regiment, was raised today, according to a story in the San Antonio Light, when it was learned the reasons why Capt. and Mrs. Randle agreed to drop the suit.

Three reasons were given. They are: First, it was agreed that the military investigation being conducted by Col. Lincoln F. Kilbourne, inspector of the Eighth Corps area into the Randle-Conger embroglio would be discontinued; second, Capt. Randle was assured of a transfer to another regiment, with a position equally as responsible as the one he held in the Twentieth Infantry; third, Capt. Randle also is assured that the unfavorable efficiency report submitted by Col. Conger would be rewritten.

THOUSANDS OF FISH KILLED WHEN ELECTRIC LINE BREAKS

Wire Carrying 22,000 Volts Falls in Creek Near Ozark, Mo.—Team of Horses Electrocuted.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 7.—Several thousand fish were killed in Finley Creek, near Ozark, Christian County, at 11:30 o'clock this morning when an electric power line carrying 22,000 volts broke and fell into the creek.

A team of horses driven by the two small sons of Mrs. Marion Stepp of Ozark, were instantly killed when the boys drove the team into a ford a short distance from the broken line. The boys remained in the wagon and were uninjured.

10,000 CASES OF LIQUORS VALUED AT $2,000,000 SEIZED

Raid on New York Warehouse One of Largest Since Prohibition Began.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Prohibition agents today made one of the largest raids since the Volstead act became effective when they seized 10,000 cases of champagne, wines and fine liquors valued at $2,000,000 and arrested seven men.

The liquors seized filled several ricors and the cellar of a six-story warehouse in Lower Manhattan. Most of the liquor, the prohibition agents said, had been in storage before the Volstead law went into effect and was all of the finest quality.

HERRIN CASE JUDGE RAPS MIDDLEKAUFF FOR STATEMENT

"He Is Trying to Fix Blame on Someone for His Failure to Convict," Hartwell Says.

"TRIES CASES WELL IN NEWSPAPERS"

Special Attorney - General Said "Justice Cannot Be Obtained in Williamson County."

By the Associated Press.

MARION, Ill., April 7.—Asserting Special Assistant Attorney-General Middlekauff of Illinois was attempting to "lay the blame on somebody for his failure to convict" in the Herrin trials, Circuit Judge D. T. Hartwell, who presided at the trials, tonight issued a written statement replying to that given out by Middlekauff in the afternoon:

Judge Hartwell stated Middlekauff "without regard for truth," took advantage of the "intense feeling" existing outside of Williamson County, adding "I admit his superiority in being able to make use of the newspapers. He tries his cases there better than in the courthouse."

Middlekauff's statement, issued following announcement that the state dropped all other Herrin riot cases as the result of failure to obtain convictions in the two already tried, asserted "Justice cannot be obtained in Williamson (this) County."

Hartwell's Statement.

Judge Hartwell's statement, in part, follows:

"I have just read Mr. Middlekauff's statement. The situation is about like this: 'What he says will be accepted away from here, and by a very few in this vicinity. The cases were nolled, and he is going away and he don't care much what he says or who he hurts, just so he can lay the blame on somebody for his failure to convict in the cases just tried.'

"I do not hold that a juror was incompetent if he had heard of these killings and had formed an opinion of the lawfulness or unlawfulness of the same, or the right and wrong of the same. On the contrary, I took the statute and read it in open court and I announced my ruling to be that no juror was incompetent, who had formed an opinion about the matter on the right and wrong or the guilt or innocence of the defendants, if that opinion was based upon rumor or upon newspaper articles and if the prospective juror had not expressed any opinion upon the truth of what he had heard and read.

"Most Miners Disqualified."

"It is not true that I held persons competent who had contributed to the defense fund. Every miner that was asked that question would either admit that he had contributed, or else state that he did not know whether he had or not. Almost without exception, every coal miner was disqualified. The State was in no instance or at no time forced to take persons on the jury who had contributed to the defense fund. In nearly every instance, the coal miner was disqualified on other grounds before the matter of his contribution was inquired about.

"I don't remember exactly, but my judgment is that there were no miners on the first jury. The prosecution had 100 challenges. They used 13 in the first trial. I think they had one man on the jury who had once been a miner, but they had 78 challenges left when the first jury was selected. In the second trial they took one or two miners, but they did so voluntarily. Nearly all the jurors were farmers. The prosecution in the second trial used about 38 challenges and had about 80 peremptory challenges remaining when the jury was selected.

"Rulings Incorrectly Quoted."

"In the second trial, one argument was made on behalf of the prosecution and that was made by Senator Glenn, of Murphysboro. He spent quite a long part of his argument in praising the court and telling how fair the court had been. At the conclusion of the former trial, Attorney-General Brundage was here, and stated to the newspaper men, 'We have had a square deal. We have no complaints.' No later than last Friday, Attorney-General Brundage stated to me that he thought all my rulings had been fair and that I had ruled according to the law, with one exception. I replied I thought I was right in this also.

"Nobody knows better than I do of the prejudice that exists all over the county, growing out of these killings. I have not condoned, justified or excused these killings. I do not do so now. I tried my best

PRESIDENTIAL BOOM FOR HYLAN INDICATED AS OBJECT OF SHOW

Politicians and Officeholders From Various Cities to Be Invited to New York.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Information obtained today indicates that the proposed Hylan show, projected to celebrate the twenty-fifth year of Greater New York, has been planned on an even more elaborate scale than heretofore revealed, and that in the minds of city officials who have attended secret conferences the main object is the launching of a 1924 Hylan presidential boom.

While there is no mention of this on the record, it was pointed out that by laying plans for drawing politicians and officeholders to this city from all over the country and presenting Mayor Hylan to them as the hero of the hour, Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, is greasing the ways for such a launching.

Whalen plans to invite department heads from other cities to come here and have a good time at the expense of the city or whoever it is that puts up the money for the Hylan show.

CHILDREN OF "UPPER 400" IN CONTEST FOR RING HONORS

"All Arts of Manly Self-Defense" Taught to Sons of Wall Street Rich.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—A new school of hard knocks, where the poor-little-rich-sons of Wall Street may learn to take punishment and grin, has been opened in New York.

Its location is aristocratic old Madison avenue. Its head master is Carl R. Temple, former champion wrestler gassed in the World War.

On the curriculum are boxing, wrestling, jiu-jitsu, fencing and "all the arts of manly self-defense." The main announcement at a recent exhibition, was "ladies and gentlemen, in this corner, we have Nathaniel Wales, II, weighing 39 pounds ringside, seven years old, of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, and Fifth avenue, New York.

"And in this corner, we have Stuart Davis Jr., weighing 41 pounds, ringside, eight years old, the pride of Madison avenue, who will meet today in a three-round bout for the child championship of the upper Four-Hundred."

O'Connell of New Haven, Conn., to death in a restaurant here last July during a quarrel between O'Connell and Mrs. Champion's husband, was ordered today by the Court of Appeals. The Appellate Court reversed the lower court, according to the court entry, for errors on the part of the trial Judge.

GERMANY READY FOR NEGOTIATIONS WITH ALLIES ON REPARATIONS

FORMER MAID IN THE LINCOLN HOME DIES

Mrs. Caroline Massears Was Fond of Relating Experiences When So Employed.

Mrs. Caroline Massears, who died Thursday at the home of her son, Albert, at North Alton, was for two years, when a girl, a maid in the home of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield. She was fond of relating her recollections of that period, with emphasis upon the increased duties which resulted from Lincoln becoming a candidate for the presidency.

Mrs. Massears was 15 years old when she took service with the Lincoln family. At first her duties were comparatively light. All that she had to do was the cooking and the washing and ironing and look after the children. The family, to show that they did not regard these duties as menial permitted her to eat with the family.

Different After Nomination.

When Lincoln was nominated for the presidency a change came over the household. The change set in the day he was nominated. There was to be a great reception at the house that night and it had to be scrubbed from top to bottom and made shining and spotless. Candles were used for illumination and the next day Carrie, as she was called, had the job of cleaning up.

Mrs. Lincoln told her that now that Mr. Lincoln was running for the presidency the family and the house would have to look nice. Carrie had to wash the windows and scrub the porches every day, along with the cooking and washing and ironing and looking after the children, and she had to be a great deal more particular with the washing and ironing, making Mr. Lincoln's shirts shiny with starch.

It was also important that the children might have the immaculacy which the public would expect of the children of a man who was running for the presidency, so every morning, before they went to school, Carrie had to inspect them and pull up their stockings, which had an indecorous tendency to wrinkle.

Had to Wear Starched Apron.

Carrie was not permitted to eat with the family any more and after a while Mrs. Lincoln achieved the social triumph of a call bell, with which she summoned Carrie from the kitchen as her services were required in the dining room. As a further badge of the increasing importance of the family Carrie also was required to wear a white starched apron and cap when she functioned as dining room girl.

Carrie stood it six months and then concluded that keeping the household up to the spick and spanness required of a nominee for the presidency was too much work and she quit. Not that she was afraid of work. She had known nothing else since the death of her parents in Milwaukee when she was 11 years old. She had a guardian who kept her in school until she was 14 but she had to work for her board.

She was married at 18 in St. Louis to Charles Massears and they went to live on a small farm in the Paradise neighborhood five miles northwest of Brighton, Ill. Her husband died in 1893 but she continued to live there until September, when she went to live with her son. Four other sons and a daughter survive, but the whereabouts of two of the sons are not known. The funeral will be this afternoon from the Brighton German Lutheran Church.

RUM RUNNERS DROP THEIR CAPTOR OVERBOARD, HEAD FIRST

Captain Has Them Lower Him by Heels to Rescue Sailor—They Let Go and Escape.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Two rum-runners, captured in the motorboat Defi, 13 miles off the Jersey coast, dropped Capt. Ryan of the coast guard cutter Manhattan, overboard as the cutter docked here today, and made their escape.

Capt. Ryan, who had seized the Defi after a chase which he ended by firing a shot across the Defi's bow, was taking his captives ashore, when a member of the Manhattan's crew fell overboard.

He ordered the two prisoners to lower him over the side of the boat by his feet in order that he might reach the sinking man. They lowered him overboard first, released their grip on his feet and fled.

The captain and the sailor were rescued by their comrades.

Berlin Government Notifies Mussolini of Willingness to Resume Discussions Before French Leave the Ruhr, a Reversal of Former Position.

BIG SEIZURES OF PAPER MARKS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, April 7.—The German Government has formally notified Premier Mussolini of Italy it is willing to begin negotiations with the allies for settlement of reparations before the French leave the Ruhr, the Post-Dispatch is reliably informed tonight. This is a highly important modification in the German position. It has been held that as long as Germany maintained the irreconcilable stand, there could be little chance of negotiations, as France is determined to continue her present regime in the Ruhr.

Signor Mussolini has long been pressing Germany—with full support of the British and probably secret encouragement of the Belgians—to make another reparation offer. Considered in connection with Louis Loucheur's visit to England, Germany's present pronouncement gives rise to a growing hope resumption of negotiations may be in sight.

80 Billion Unfinished Marks Seized by French.

DUESSELDORF, April 7.—The French have confiscated 80 billion marks in unfinished German paper money which they found yesterday at the printing plant in Mulheim of the General Anzeiger. At the same time Belgian troops seized two billion marks in paper money.

Ober-Burgomaster Schaefer of Essen, who appealed from the sentence of two years' imprisonment and a five million francs fine for resisting French regulations concerning the requisitioning of automobiles, was sent to Saarbrucken today with several other prisoners to serve time. On his appeal, Schaefer's sentence was increased to three years' imprisonment and a fine of six million francs.

Fritz Drum, president of the League Volkspolizei of Essen, was given a five-year prison sentence and a 5,000,000 francs fine for carrying on propaganda activities.

French Occupying Ten Mines Says Prussian Official News Agency.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 7.—Ten mines so far have been occupied by the military forces in the Ruhr, the Prussian official news agency announced today. According to German advices from Buer, it is feared that Prussia's largest state mine, Bargmannsglueuk will become flooded soon, as the workers have sent an ultimatum to the French occupying forces that they will abandon even the emergency pumps unless the patrols are immediately withdrawn from the property. The state owned mine at Waltrop is also reported endangered because the troops have cut off all outside connection.

Essen dispatches say that when the burial of the victims of the Krupp plant shooting takes place next week the trade unionists will form a continuous line on each side of the route the funeral procession takes from the morgue to the cemetery.

Germans understand that the French soldiers will be ordered to keep out of sight on the day of the funeral, along the streets the procession traverses. All the patrols in these localities will be instructed to conceal themselves behind the doors of nearby houses while the cortege passes and the other soldiers will be forbidden to look out of the windows of the billets along the streets, it is added.

The Berlin newspapers today carry a large display memorial inserted by the directorate of the Krupp firm in which the names of the 11 original victims of last week's shootings are listed under the caption:

"Fell in peace time as a sacrifice to French bullets."

Each man's occupation is designated in the list, which includes one

SENATORS TO MARK PATH FOR HARDING ON WORLD COURT

Old Guard to Tell President Reservations Must Make Plain America Will Not Enter League.

PROSPERITY DEEMED GOOD G. O. P. ISSUE

Leaders Think It May Be Wise to Dodge International Questions in 1924 Presidential Campaign.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—President Harding will return to the White House tomorrow from his southern trip with a staggering array of problems awaiting him, chief among them being the Old Guard perturbation over the international court. Senators of that description went into close conference today preparatory to a descent upon the White House to find out if their worst fears were true, and if so to deliver an ultimatum.

The upshot of the party powwow, at which some of the best minds of the G. O. P. were present, was a decision to notify Mr. Harding that if he and his Secretary of State are resolved to go ahead with their program, it must be with the understanding that certain reservations will be tagged to the treaty, or whatever the arrangement may be, making clear to the world that this country is not to be construed as entering the League of Nations, by the back door or any other.

Of all the problems, domestic and foreign, that have piled up awaiting the President's return, this question of the world court is agitating party leaders the most. To them it is divisible in two, and will be laid before him in about the following form:

1. How far is it proposed that the United States go in international affairs by joining the world court?

2. What will be the effect on the Republican party in 1924?

These are the main points they think should be kept in mind in determining the course of the administration. They are puzzled as to what was in mind when the project was advanced. Suggested near the adjournment of Congress, there was little opportunity for studying the plan. Everybody rushed off for a vacation, including the President, and none of the leaders sought a chance to get enlightenment.

Wonder About Court's Power.

Now they want to know whether Secretary Hughes intends to have this country take part in a court which gets its power from the League of Nations or whether a separate international court, thoroughly independent of the one set up by the League, will be acceptable. What methods does Mr. Hughes propose for putting the decrees of the court into effect, and how far does the administration think this country can go in exerting force, or equipping a "sheriff" to go out and execute?

In view of the announcement by Former Justice Clark and other leading Democrats that the League of Nations is to be made the chief issue in 1924, the Republicans are asking themselves why it would not be wise to dodge that proposition and rely upon the era of prosperity in the country. They contend that they are justified in attributing this prosperity to the legislation of Congress, including revision of the tax laws, the tariff, and the transportation act of 1920. They point to the general condition of employment, the rush of orders for industrial enterprises and the prospect of the heaviest freight traffic the country has ever known, and ask what more could be desired as campaign material.

Several Republicans are here or are planning to return next week to take up with the President this and other problems left in the rush to get away after Congress adjourned.

The plan of campaign generally, the program for next winter's session of Congress, organization of the House, the merchant marine policy, prohibition enforcement and whether the navy shall be used therefor, the question of changing gun mounts on ships, and the rules of the Senate are among the vexatious questions that await the President's views and action.

Freight rates and reduction and revision of the tax laws also are to be considered.

HARDING REVIEWS SCHOOL CHILDREN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—President Harding turned his back on his vacation pleasures tonight and with his friends left Washington, where he is due tomorrow at noon. Augusta, which seldom sees a President, gave him a rousing sendoff. His statement last night at a banquet given by local citizens that he would take under consideration a "winter White House" here caused much pleasure in this section of Georgia. George Washington and William Howard Taft were the only Presidents to visit this city.

Late this afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Harding motored down Broad street the principal thoroughfare, reviewing Augusta school children, who were drawn up for three blocks, waving flags and cheering. The President rode in an open car and responded by lifting his hat, while Mrs. Harding waved a bouquet.

EXPECTED TO REVIVE STATE WAR ON RUM

THE REV. DR. A. H. POST.

CHICAGO DRY WORKER TO FILL SHUPP'S PLACE

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Post to Become President of Missouri Antisaloon League.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Post of Chicago, who has been active in that city for five years as assistant superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Illinois, is expected here within a few days to take up his duties as superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Missouri. Announcement of his election by the Board of Trustees of the Missouri League at a meeting here Thursday was made yesterday.

He succeeds the Rev. Mr. W. C. Shupp, who resigned March 16 because of a nervous breakdown that followed inquiry into the prohibition enforcement raid at Hotel Chase early New Year's morning.

The Rev. Dr. Post has been the secretary of the Chicago Congregational Ministers' Alliance, and was ordained in that church. He has not filled a pastorate for about eight years, the period he has been a "dry" worker. Supt. F. Scott McBride of the Antisaloon League of Illinois, said in Chicago yesterday that the Rev. Dr. Post had been one of his most efficient workers, and was well qualified for his new position. He was nominated for the superintendency by a high official of the National League, in accordance with custom, the final decision being left with the State trustees.

Announcement was made also of the election of the Rev. L. H. Coffman of Springfield, to the superintendency of the Springfield district.

$70,928 SHORTAGE IN NIGHT AND DAY BANK LIQUIDATION REVEALED

special deputy's deposit account for purposes other than Night and Day Bank purposes, aggregate, so far as I know at the present time, $70,928.99.

Mr. Ross, when shown a number of the checks included in the above amount, admitted that they were improperly drawn by him, stating that he had used his deposit account as special deputy as a convenience, and that he had deposited in this account, from his personal funds, sufficient amounts to cover all of such checks.

At a conference between Mr. Ross and myself held last Tuesday, Mr. Ross stated that he could show where deposits had been made by him from his personal funds to cover all these checks, but that this data was in Kansas City. I then told him that I would give him an opportunity to go to Kansas City to get this data before taking further action, and he agreed to meet me at St. Louis Thursday morning.

Asked for Postponements.

On Wednesday night, he asked for a postponement of the conference until Friday, and on Friday asked for another postponement until Saturday.

Feeling that I had given him every opportunity to produce satisfactory evidence of his assertion that he had made deposits from his personal funds to cover these checks and that I could not brook any further delay consistently with the performance of my duty, I laid all the information in my hands before the Circuit Attorney today, for such action as he may deem appropriate.

Mr. Ross has spent most of his time in Kansas City during the past two months in connection with the affairs of the (suspended) West Side State Bank of Kansas City, a large block of the capital stock of which was owned by him. During this time he has been relieved of any active participation in the affairs of the Night and Day Bank, and Mr. Charles N. Gilles, one of the bank examiners for the department, who during which time has been in charge of the liquidation of the affairs of the bank, will remain in this capacity until the audit is completed.

I have formally revoked the appointment of Mr. Ross as special deputy.

Paid Salary of $350 a Month.

Ross was a State bank examiner at the time of the failure of Night and Day Bank and was given title of Special Deputy State Finance Commissioner to liquidate its affairs. His salary was fixed at $350 a month, the State Finance Commissioner estimating at the time that by placing Ross on salary he could save depositors between $18,000 and $20,000. The State law permits a liquidating officer to be paid from 3 to 5 per cent of all money collected. Prior to becoming a State bank examiner, Ross was a bank teller in Kansas City. He was bonded in the sum of $50,000 and Commissioner Millspaugh has notified the National Surety Co. of his discrepancies.

Early in the week, a committee of depositors called at the office which Ross maintained in the Odd Fellows' Building to learn when they could expect an added dividend, which they had expected in January. They found Gilles, a stranger to them, in charge, and wrote to Commissioner Millspaugh about the prospective added dividend.

He replied that most of the bank's unliquidated assets were "slow paper" and that no date for further distribution among depositors could be made. The stockholders' committee was told by Gilles at that time that an audit was in progress.

Dispatches from Kansas City yesterday stated that the bank in which Ross invested $50,000 had been reorganized and was reopening under a new name. When Ross was elected to the presidency of the old bank, he received $50,000 by wire from St. Louis and it was understood that it came from "St. Louis backers." The bank announced that until the Night and Day Bank in St. Louis was liquidated Ross would have only supervisory control over the Kansas City bank.

Ross could not be reached yesterday by the Post-Dispatch for a statement.

9 EAST ST. LOUIS POLICE OFFICERS WILL BE OUSTED

They Include Chiefs Mulconnery and Nevill, Four Lieutenants, One Sergeant and Two Detectives.

A shake-up in the East St. Louis Police Department, shortly to be made by Mayor M. M. Stephens and the newly elected Commissioners, contemplates the dismissal of the following officers immediately upon the advent of the new administration:

Chief of Police William J. Mulconnery, Chief of Detectives James Nevill, Lieut. Harry L. Walker, Lieut. Albert L. Wilson, Lieut. Henry C. Bishop, Lieut. Joseph Schrader, Sergt. Matthew O'Flaherty, Detective Harry A. Schuetz and Detective Luther Hellig.

The Commissioners, who yesterday took the oath of office, have not decided on any other changes.

A meeting of Mayor Stephens and the new commissioners—Ralph Cook, Michael J. Whalen, M. Paul Murray and John T. Connors—was held yesterday afternoon in Mayor Stephens' office in the city hall. They exchanged views and found themselves in harmony on matters of policy. They will have another meeting, possibly tomorrow, to effect the organization of the new administration, at which departments will be assigned.

None of the commissioners would commit himself concerning any item of business under discussion yesterday, all stating that they had decided to withhold a statement for the time being.

The police officers named as slated for dismissal are the ones who, on May 1 of last year, were the subject of a report by the former Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, in which their resignations were demanded following an investigation of the death of John Campanella, an Italian, in a cell in the East St. Louis jail, and reports of alleged police brutality against other prisoners.

Athough the City Council, comprising the Mayor and four Commissioners, ordered the investigation, a majority of the Council, consisting of Commissioners Veach, Leber and O'Leary, who were defeated at the election last Tuesday, set the report aside; fired the Police Board and appointed another Board that reinstated all the officers and dropped the investigation.

BODY FOUND HANGING FROM TREE NEAR COAL CITY, ILL.

Authorities Considering Possibility of Foul Play and Suicide—Naturalization Papers in Clothing.

By the Associated Press.

MORRIS, Ill. April 7.—The body of a man in whose clothing were found naturalization papers bearing the name of Frank Kamage of Wilburton, Ok., was found hanging from a tree on the farm of Arthur Seamon, near Coal City, today, theories of possible foul play and suicide while demented are under consideration b ythe authorities.

Kamage, ujmped from a Chicago and Alton train near Genoa, Ill., yesterday. At that time he was said to have $250. He escaped injury at that time and said that he had been followed by several negroes.

No money was found on the body when it was cut down today, but in the clothing was a legal document, said to be a warrant, bearing the name and address of Bass Remencz, 812 West Thirty-fifth street, Chicago.

Statements of Figures in Herrin Riot Trial

to give both sides a fair trial. The prosecution were loud in their praise of the court until now. Middlekauff knows that he can take advantage of the intense feeling existing away from here and he has done so, without regard to the truth.

"I admit his superiority in being able to make use of the newspapers. He tries his case there better than in the courthouse. I repeat that he has not stated the court's rulings correctly.

"I am satisfied every member of the bar will say that I held exactly according to the statute upon the qualifications of jurors."

"JUSTICE CAN'T BE HAD," MIDDLEKAUFF STATEMENT SAYS

The following statement was given out today by Special Assistant Attorney-General Middlekauff at the request of Attorney-General E. J. Brundage, explaining the State's action by which the untried indictments in the Herrin riot cases were nolle prossed:

"The prosecution is reluctantly obliged to admit that justice cannot be obtained in Williamson County. No impartial jury can be secured to try the men responsible for the murder of a score of men at and near Herrin last June.

"The law compels the State to prosecute in the county where the crime was committed, and for five months the prosecution has vainly striven to secure a conviction

"Jurors Were Intimidated."

"Witnesses, reliable and trustworthy, at great risk of personal violence, have courageously testified to what they beheld on that fatal day, only to be impeached by witnesses who were plainly interested in the defense, and who clearly were testifying falsely. Two juries have returned verdicts of acquittal regardless of the evidence.

"Intimidation, prejudice or downright dishonesty actuated them. Under the rulings of the trial court, when jurymen were being examined, any man who admitted he had an opinion, whether the massacre of the disarmed and helpless strip miners was lawful or unlawful, he was disqualified for jury service. In my opinion, this ruling is not the law of Illinois. On the other hand, men contributing to the defense fund, voluntarily or otherwise, have been held to be competent jurors, but in my view of the law, such men are not competent jurors and could not be impartial jurors.

"Every man in Williamson County has repeatedly heard or read the details of this horrible and revolting tragedy. If he has no opinion whether such killings were lawful or unlawful, he is, in my judgment, wholly unfit for jury service.

Views on Qualified Jurors.

"I must say that under my view of the law, citizens having an opinion as to the right or wrong of the massacre, but with no opinion as to the guilt of any defendant on trial, are qualified to sit as jurors.

"Otherwise the more horrible and the more tremendous the crime the less chance there would be to secure a fair, intelligent and honest jury. These obstacles are, in my judgment, insurmountable and under the conditions it is my opinion that further trials would be useless, result only in acquittals and continue the check-off from the wages of some 90,000 industrious men, many of whom are strongly opposed to murder. It would further jeopardize the lives of courageous and honest witnesses who have testified for the people of the state of Illinois solely because of their respect for law and order. At this time, it seems that further trials would be but farcial."

Statement by Defense Counsel.

A statement issued by "all the attorneys for the defense" regarding the Middlekauff statement, said that the Assistant Attorney-General had ignored the killing of three union men previous to the slaying of the mine guards, failed to acknowledge that the jury consisted mostly of farmers, that it was unjust to say the jurors based their verdict on improper motives, pointed out that the check-off system for the defense fund had been approved in open convention of the United Mine Workers, and declared that the results of the trials reflected the intelligence of the citizens of Williamson County.

Remaining Indictments Dismissed by the State.

The request that the remaining indictments growing out of the Herrin riot be nolled was made in court this morning by Delos Duty, State's Attorney of Williamson County. When court assembled A. W. Kerr, chief counsel for the Illinois Mine Workers, demanded an immediate trial for the 24 men still under indictment on charges of murder, conspiracy and assault.

"I am not going to try any more of these cases," Duty declared. "Right or wrong does not make any difference. I have done my duty and done my best."

"We have done enough, but the Attorney-General does not feel that these cases should be dropped until he has a chance to report to the Legislature," C. W. Middlekauff, Special Assistant Attorney-General, said. "We do not join in the motion to nolle."

"But you do not protest," Judge D. T. Hartwell asked.

"We do not," said Middlekauff.

Duty remarked that, while he felt strongly that a crime had been committed, he felt that further prosecutions were useless and a needless expense to the people of the county.

Judge Hartwell then entered the order nolle prossing all of the indictments.

Legislative Committee to Begin Inquiry Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., —April 7.—Investigation by the House of Representatives committee of the Herrin mine rioting stands out as the center of attention in the Legislature this coming week. Chairman Frank McCarthy and his associates—Representatives Pierce, Flagg, Phillips, Curran, Igoe and Rice—will begin their labors here probably Tuesday or Wednesday.

The investigators have been charged to make a complete inquiry and they plan to go into all phases of the disorders in Williamson County last June. Their first move will be to quiz military officers of the State, one of whom—Adjutant General Black—had authority to send the national guard into the riot area but who, it has been charged in the Legislature, was derelict in his duty.

REVERSIBLE ERROR IN HOGAN CASE CLAIMED

Appeal to Come Up for Argument in the Supreme Court Tuesday.

The appeals of James Hogan and Humbert Costello, St. Louis gangsters, from connections on which they were sentenced to 15 and 25 years in the penitentiary, respectively, will be argued before Division 2 of the State Supreme Court Tuesday. Both are at liberty on bond, and Costello has figured in recent incidents of gang warfare.

Hogan was convicted by a Franklin County jury, at Union, of having participated in the robbery of Erris Pillow, negro bank messenger, April 14, 1921. Pillow was afterward murdered, apparently to keep him from testifying against Hogan, whom he had identified.

Costello was convicted in St. Louis of holding up and robbing the jewelry store of William Mauch & Son, 1436 South Broadway, Dec. 18, 1920.

Reversible Error Claimed.

Attorneys for Hogan, who is a younger brother of Edward J. (Jelly Roll) Hogan, gang leader, appear to hope that they will convince the Supreme Court that a reversible error occurred in the trial at Union. The Attorney-General's office, which is handling the appeal for Circuit Attorney Sidener, may argue in reply that the error, if technically one was committed, did not prejudice the case, hence would not be proper ground for reversal.

Police Sergt. Gartland testified in the trial that, when Hogan was taken before Pillow at a police station, the day of the robbery, Pillow said, "that is the man that threw the coat over my head." Hogan, it appeared, made no comment at the time, his silence being within his legal rights.

Hogan's attorneys contend that Gartland's testimony as to what Pillow said of Hogan in the latter's presence was inadmissible as evidence, and prejudiced the case of the defendant, although Hogan was identified in the courtroom by an eyewitness to the robbery, William Lossemann, as the person who put a coat over Pillow's head.

The State will contend that the presence of other and competent evidence on identifictaion renders the Gartland testimony, even if erroneously admitted, harmless and unprejudicial.

Only a few weeks ago the Supreme Court reversed and remanded another St. Louis robbery case on nearly an identical set of circumstances. That was the case of William Dengle, who was convicted of having held up and robbed Roy J. Pysher of a pocketbook, diamond and $382, for which he was sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary. A policeman testified that after Dengle had been arrested and taken to a police station, Pysher had identified him.

Commissioner Davis, who wrote the opinion, in which the other Commissioners and all of the Judges of Division 2 concurred, in reversing the case, held that statements of a third party made in the presence of the defendant while the latter is in custody or under arrest, and which are not denied, are inadmissible as evidence at the defendant's trial.

Robert W. Otto, Assistant Attorney-General, is handling the Hogan case for the State, while James Booth and W. L. Cole of Union and Senator Frank H. Faris of Rolla are attorneys for Hogan.

GOLTRA WINS POINT IN BARGE SEIZURE

Federal Judge Faris Orders Fleet Returned to Jurisdiction of His Court.

Col. T. Q. Ashburn, chief of inland and coastwide waterways of the War Department, yesterday was ordered by Federal Judge Faris to return the fleet of four towboats and 19 barges which he seized from Edward F. Goltra to the jurisdiction of the court by April 21.

If he does not return the fleet by that date he is ordered to appear in court to show why he should not be cited for contempt. The fleet was seized from Goltra, lessee, beginning March 25.

Douglas Robert, attorney for Goltra, said that he had been informed that six of the Goltra barges already had been returned to the berth at Fayville, Ill., at which they were lying when seized.

The decision of Judge Faris followed a day of effort on the part of Col. Ashburn's counsel to bring out by testimony that the boat on which the Colonel was pasenger was nearer the Illinois than the Missouri shore when Deputy United States marshals presented copies of a writ forbidding the seizure. Goltra's counsel sought to prove that the boat was nearer the Missouri shore.

Judge Faris brushed both considerations aside in his decision that the United States and the states had concurrent jurisdiction over all waterways. "If this were not so the laws of none of the states could be enforced upon the Mississippi River," the Judge said. He cited a case in which a man had been convicted of a murder committed on the Mississippi.

"Besides," the Judge added, "I am led from the evidence to conclude that service was made on the west side of the channel."

At another point, he said: "I have no doubt about it. I am so thoroughly convinced that Col. Ashburn was served that no court and no argument could make me change my mind."

Lon O. Hocker, representing Col. Ashburn, endeavored to interpose his argument, presented in a motion Friday, that the court was without jurisdiction, because the defendant was the United States and that the United States could not be made a defendant without its consent. He urged that the Judge hear arguments on this motion before the date set for return of the fleet from Cairo, but Goltra's counsel objected.

The Judge at first declined to comply with Hocker's request, but later said that the matter might be taken up, though the inference was that he would not disturb his calendar to do so.

As has been told, Col. Ashburn seized the Goltra fleet on order of the Acting Secretary of War, upon the ground that Goltra, in failing to operate the barges as common carriers, had violated the terms of his contract.

MISSING AMENDMENT COSTS OFFICE OF AUDITOR $20,000

Section Allowing Travel Expense Fund Fails to Be Engrossed.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 7.—The Democratic Legislature unwittingly dealt a blow at the office of State Auditor Hackmann, despite the interference of Gov. Hyde in an effort to save to Hackmann his force of five traveling examiners. For although the Legislature intended to appropriate $20,000 to pay for the contingent expenses of the traveling auditors, by amendment of the last appropriation bill passed, the amendment was lost and does not appear on the enrolled bill as signed by the presiding officers of the two houses. Attorneys say there is no way to correct the record now.

LORD CECIL AND COX SPEAK AT BUFFALO (N. Y.) MEETING

Former Presidential Candidate Says League Will Be Issue in 1924 Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 7.—Lord Robert Cecil, British Liberal and exponent of the League of Nations, and James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President in 1920, spoke here today.

The United States, Cox said, ultimately will enter the league because of economic and moral reasons. Replying to a statement attributed to Senator Hitchcock that the league would not be an issue in the next presidential campaign, Cox declared:

"I have the utmost respect for Senator Hitchcock and his opinions, but I do not agree with him when he says the international question will not be an issue in the 1924 campaign. It cannot be avoided."

Installment Plan Adapted for Weekly Payments Upon Motor Cars.

Henry Ford has joined hands with St. Louis bankers to encourage saving for buying Ford cars. The plan, which he calls the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan, announcement of which he makes in the advertising columns of the Post-Dispatch today, is to open savings accounts at the co-operating banks and when sufficient amounts have accumulated to make the first payment on a car and pay for it by continuing the weekly installments.

A savings account may be started with $5. The amount needed for the first payment on the car depends upon the kind chosen. Interest will be paid by the banks at the regular savings rate.

NINETY-EIGHT $10 NOTES FOUND IN GREENVILLE STREET

Money Believed to Be Part of $36,000 Loot From Panama Bank.

Residents of Greenville, Ill., found $10 Federal Reserve Banknotes blowing down Sixth street in the residence section of the town yesterday. Ninety-eight in all were picked up. They were partly burned.

An empty safe deposit box lying in a clump of weeds by the street and serial numbers on the notes indicate they were part of the $36,000 loot taken in a holdup of the State Bank of Panama, Ill., Dec. 12, 1921. The cashier of the bank stated over long distance telephone to the Post-Dispatch that records of the numbers were in the hands of a national detective agency, but he recalled enough to say they undoubtedly were among the currency listed in the loss.

Greenville is eight miles from Panama, which is 37 miles northeast of St. Louis.

John W. Wilson of Greenville, former Sheriff of Bond County, and Ben Battelson, also of that place, with Walter O'Malley of St. Louis, were found guilty of participation in the holdup April 29, 1922. Wilson and O'Malley received indeterminate sentences of from one to 20 years in the penitentiary. Battelson turned State's evidence and was released.

TIMES VRANIAK STORY DENOUNCED BY K. OF C.

Articles Which Branded Missing Priest as Outlaw and Murderer Declared to Be False.

A resolution denouncing the St. Louis Times for its publication of articles declaring that the body of a dead robber had been identified as that of Rev. Father John A. Vraniak, missing Virden (Ill.) priest, was adopted by representatives of the Knights of Columbus Councils of St. Louis, gathered at the First Regiment Armory last night.

The resolution called a public meeting "to take proper action against the Times" for its publication, yesterday and in extra editions Friday, of the articles. The meeting is to be at, 8 p. m. Tuesday at Knights of Columbus Hall, 3143 Olive street. The robber in question was shot and killed in an attempted burglary in Webster Groves March 11.

There were about 40 Knights of Columbus representatives at the meeting last night, which was held in connection with the K. of C. carnival at the Armory. When announcement of the adoption of the resolution was made to the carnival crowd of about 3000 persons there were loud shouts of approval and bell ringing. The K. of C. is said to have a membership of about 12,000 here.

Articles Branded as False.

The resolution branded the articles in the Times as false and charged that they were printed "under sensational headlines, accusing a priest of the Catholic Church of being a murderer, a bandit and an outlaw." The bandit in question shot and killed a policeman before he died, and was afterward identified by finger prints as a three-time ex-convict, who was released from the Leavenworth penitentiary Dec. 18 last.

Miss Mary Matthias of 6360 Cates avenue, a nurse at Mullanphy Hospital, who said she had known the Rev. Father Vraniak for six years, last night told a Post-Dispatch reporter she had viewed the body at Kirkwood and stated positively it was not that of the priest. She asserted there was no facial resemblance.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—Pitching that had stopped the New York Yankees in spring exhibition games failed to check the Brownies this afternoon and the Fohlmen defeated the New Orleans Pelicans, 8 to 4, in the second contest of a three-game series. There was a new spirit displayed by the St. Louisans and for the first time this spring they delivered smashing base hit wallops when needed to clinch the verdict.

For two innings, Thomas, a right hander from the New Orleans lots, retired the Browns in order. The fans were singing his praises. He had achieved much fame during games with the Yankees. In 12 innings Huggins' men had been able to scratch only four hits off his delivery. Not once did the New Yorkers cross the plate while Thomas was on the mound.

Then, in the third inning, with one down, Herschel Bennett drew a walk, being the first Brownie to see first. Elam Vangilder then got the first St. Louis hit, a line double against the left field fence, which scored Bennett.

Redoubtable Thomas.

Thomas settled into his stride and that hit of Vangilder's was the only safety in four frames. In the New Orleans half of the fourth the Pelicans suddenly found the range on Vangilder. Bogart, first up, slammed a double to right, took third on a sacrifice and scored when Manager Gilbert lined a two-bagger to right. Schick beat out a slow roller to Gerber and Gilbert scored while Robertson was throwing out Ewoldt. Smith drove a base hit to right, scoring Schick, and Hurt singled to right, putting Smith on third. Hurt dashed for second on a delayed double steal, and when McManus made a low throw to the plate, Smith scored. Hurt was called out on strikes to end the inning.

There was a typical Vangilder session. For three innings he had it back the Pelicans without a first base and suddenly he was like a bush league pitcher.

Piker Alumni Defeats Varsity In Practice, 5-1

Trautwein Marquard and Lyons Hurl Good Ball for "Grads."

About 100 spectators who had gathered at Francis Field yesterday afternoon to witness the Piker-Alumni baseball game, were given an opportunity to see how the game was played "in the good old days," when the graduates, none the worse for age, trimmed the Pikers, 5 to 1.

The game was slow, and the outcome was never in doubt. The Alumni got to Bremser in the second inning, several hits giving them a pair of markers. DeBolt, the Pikers' hurling ace, worked the fourth and fifth, allowing one run. Levy, a newcomer, held the Alumni scoreless for two frames, but Fries, who took up the burden in the eighth, was rapped for two more runs.

In the meantime, Lyons, Marquard and Trautwein were holding Coach Davis' hitters helpless. Their only marker came in the last inning and was due to two errors. Several times they managed to get runners as far as second and third, but the punch needed to score them was wanting. The best the losers could do at bat was five scattered hits.

However, the most gratifying part of the game was the showing of the Piker infield, which exhibited an airtight defense. Apparently Coach Davis has succeeded in building up a good inner defense. All chances were accepted and handled with dispatch. A certain smoothness, to be sure, is still lacking and will only be supplied by much practice, but the play was highly satisfactory and promising in all respects.

The Pikers are not hitting yet, probably due to lack of practice during the bad weather. But there are a number of heavy clouters on the team who are sure to hit their stride before long.

Washington plays its first conference games Friday and Saturday at Francis Field. Iowa State College will be the opponent.

KANSAS CITY, KAN., HIGH SCHOOL BASKET TEAM WINS NATIONAL TITLE

CHICAGO, April 7.—Kansas City High, champions of Kansas, won the national invitation interscholastic basketball tournament of the University of Chicago here tonight, defeating Rockford, Ill., in the finals 42 to 21.

The Kansas team went down the floor in four and five-man formation time after time and their speed seemed to bewilder the Illinois team, which did not play the game that it had played in eliminating earlier contestants.

Zuber, Kansas center, and Schmidt and Proudfit, forwards, operated like clockwork, their accurate timing and pivoting being the most remarkable ever seen in an interscholastic tournament here.

Soldan Makes Only Three Hits but Wins From McKinley, 5 to 3

Champions Perform "Hitless Wonder" Act in Opening Game of High School League and Take Advantage of Ehrlick's Wildness—Central Defeats Cleveland, 17 to 5.

Soldan High, baseball champions of the High School League, paraded as "hitless wonders" in the opening game of the interscholastic season yesterday at High School Field and defeated McKinley, 5 to 3, although it made only three hits. In the second game Central took the other side of the debate and pounded out 18 hits that enabled it to defeat Cleveland, 17 to 5.

Soldan had few opportunities to score, but accepted the slightest encouragement offered by McKinley. Ehrlick was hard to hit, but he was wild and the champions just waited him out. On seven occasions he passed them to first and three times the runner scored with a damaging run.

Crause of Soldan held McKinley to a lone run until the ninth inning when the Crimson added two. Crause consistently slipped the first strike over and placed the Crimsonites in the hole. McKinley did not change hitting tactics thorughout the contest and secured its first hit in the fifth inning. It made only four during the game.

They Were Seven.

Ehrlick, pitching for McKinley, twirled a creditable game, but gave seven walks. In the opening inning he walked the first three men to face him and a short passed ball allowed one to score, before the side was retired. In the third inning a pass to Rawdon, an error and Stanford's hit to center gave Soldan another.

Again in the sixth, a pass started the fireworks. Stanford walked but was forced by Roberson, who took second when Condon heaved wide for a double killing. Left Fielder Jolly of McKinley dropped Muller's long fly and Roberson scored. Muller following a moment later from third on an infield out.

Cleveland Makes Ten Errors.

Cleveland's ten errors nullified the pitching ability of Walter Reinhardt and he left the box in the second inning after a series of errors and three hits accounted for seven runs. Central's attack was not to be denied, however, and pounded away at Reinhardt's successors. Kaiser and Beck.

Central, despite its heavy attack, did not play good baseball. It played loosely at times. Colligan showed good form on the hill and his occasional lapses probably were due to the large lead his team held.

Ty Cobb Throws Dust At Ump, Then Refuses To Leave the Field

The Georgia Peach Loses Temper Over Pfirman's Decision, After Teams Battle Six Innings to a 0—0 Score.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, manager of the Detroit club, and playing in his home town, was responsible for a rather disgraceful episode on the ball field here this afternoon. Cobb lost his head and with it a ball game, as Umpire "Steamboat" Johnson forfeited the contest to the Cards, 9-0, after the two aggregations had battled 0-0 for six frames.

Cobb, with two down in the sixth, singled. After being called out in an attempt to steal second, he threw a handful of dirt at Umpire Cy Pfirman, a regular on the National League staff. Pfirman warned him, but Cobb then completely lost his temper and started calling him names. This the official would not stand and ordered Cobb off the field.

The Tigers' manager, however, went to his position in center field and refused to leave. Pfirman appealed to "Steamboat" Johnson, umpire in chief for the day, and Johnson went out and told Cobb he was out of the game. Still Cobb refused to depart. Then Johnson drew his watch and gave Cobb five minutes to leave the field.

Crowd Surrounds Umpires.

Then the crowd started to swarm on the field. They surrounded the two umpires. Several Augusta "boosters" went to center field to talk with Cobb. But it did no good. Frank Barrett, president of the Augusta Club, appealed to the umpires to change their minds, pointing to close to 5000 spectators in the stands, who had turned out for the battle. But the arbiters had gone too far and could not back out.

There was no fighting, however, even after Johnson had declared the game forfeited. The fans remained on the field, but no blows were struck.

After the clubs had left the field and about half an hour had elapsed, Barrett decided to follow a new tack. He appealed to Manager Rickey of the Cardinals and came in front of the stand and announced that Rickey had been appealed to and would decide whether the St. Louis Club should go back on the field and continue the game. He was to make his decision in five minutes, or else the fans' money would be refunded at the gate.

Rickey, who has not yet entirely recovered from the effects of his appendicitis operation, was in a quandary. His Cardinals, at the time Cobb was chased, were willing to go through with the battle, as Jim Bottomley, hitting in his regular turn, was at the plate. However, he did not care to belittle the umpires. When Cobb finally refused to leave the field, Rickey definitely declined to allow his Athletes to continue the battle.

Fans Scramble for "Refund."

Following Manager Rickey's refusal to allow his nine to return to the field, there was a mad scramble for the box office by those who desired their money back. It was Manager Cobb who suggested that the money be refunded.

It was officially announced that Manager Cobb had ousted Johnson as the umpire for the Tigers for the remainder of the tour. He also was "on" Pfirman in the clubhouse after the battle. However, he announced that the Jungaleers would report tomorrow to continue the schedule with the Cardinals, which has five more days to run, the teams being scheduled at Chattanooga tomorrow.

All the trouble would have been averted had Cobb peacefully left the field when ordered to do so by the umpire. The play which started all the trouble was not even close, Clemons' good throw to Freigau, completely beating him, notwithstanding Ty's famous fall-away slide.

Cards in Great Form.

The game itself was the best the Cardinals have played in this season. Hits were as scarce as hen's teeth on both sides, as Bill Sherdel, the wee southpaw, and "Rip" Collins, the right-hander, obtained during the winter from the Red Sox, were going along in the well-known mid-season form.

Four safeties were made off Sherdel, while only three were garnered off Collins. Neither nine came close to scoring.

The Cardinals, in the six frames, put only five men on the bases, and only one man, Flack, in the first as the result of a single and passed ball, got as far as second base. The Tigers put six men on first; and one Tiger, Heilmann, on his double and a wild pitch, in the second, got around to third.

JOHNNY LATON IS VICTOR IN HIS MATCH WITH AUGIE KIECKHEFER

Johnny Layton of St. Louis, world's three-cushion champion, won his special match from Augie Kieckhefer of Chicago with a total score of 720 to 618. The final block was played at Layton's academy last night, Layton scoring the necessary 60 points while Kieckhefer was gathering 42.

Yesterday afternoon Layton won, 60 to 45, in 75 innings. He had a high run of 5 while Kieckhefer had a run of 6.

The evening block required 74 innings, Layton again getting a high run of 5 and Kieckhefer registering 6.

Kieckhefer played excellent billiards in both afternoon and evening. He was unfortunate in missing some difficult shots in the evening match.

Kieckhefer, former champion, is the only nationally known three-cushion player who was not entered in the Interstate League. His match with Layton had no championship significance.

Louis than they found it in 1922.

"We know how to play that team," said Fohl, talking for his players. "All I am going to say is that the Browns need not be picked as failures or broken down, because we are likely to lose Sisler."

It's a pucky manager who is handling St. Louis and if you talk with the players you will find they are a plucky lot, too. They've got fight in them.

Durst's Work at First Base Makes Deep Impression on Veteran Critic

Sisler's Substitute Displays Great Natural Aptitude for the Job and Looks Like a More Valuable Man at This Position Than Does Robertson at Third Base.

By John B. Foster.
(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 7.—The more one sees of Durst, the young outfielder who has been chosen to play first base for the St. Louis Browns up to any time that Sisler may appear—which grows more indefinite every day—the more one is impressed with the natural ability of the youngster who has this heavy task thrust upon him.

He is about the size of Sisler when the latter first left college. That makes his slender and well-proportioned from his heels to the top of his cranium.

He is left-handed, which is much to his advantage. With his gloved right hand he fields the fast ones with ease. Three of four times yesterday he sidled to the right, dipped quickly, flushed a skimming grounder squarely in the center of his glove and drew a lot of applause because he was so clever with it. Probably those who looked at him were ready to be enthusiastic because they wish to see what this youngster, who must fill Sisler's shoes, seems to have in his baseball make-up.

He snaps the hot grounders deep behind first with confidence. He didn't miss one in ten in practice and Leifield, the St. Louis assistant coach, was smashing the ball at him with all his might. To his left he gets over a little like Blue of Detroit. Perhaps he is not quite so quick as Blue, for the latter has developed into a jumping spark, through experience.

Becomes Flustered When Hurried.

He will give all the first basemen a chase this year if he has no bad luck. When hurried, Durst is a little flustered, but it is due to ignorance in playing the position. By hurried, is meant trying to make a quick play when the ball is thrown to him. He is not flustered when the ball is batted to him.

He is likely to cross his feet at the base. In fact he did do it once. He didn't know whether to play his left foot to the bag or his right foot, because the runner was on top of him as the ball was landing in his glove. He can overcome this.

What Durst will do with the ball, the fans will know better by the end of next September. They will find him a likable young man.

Lee Fohl discovered what he had in him and encouraged the boy to try, and try he certainly does. If he can hit well, he has a future in the majors whether Sisler plays or does not.

On the whole Durst seems to be a more natural first baseman than Robertson is a third baseman; but that does not alter Fohl's intention to make a third baseman out of Robertson.

Big Undertaking for Fohl.

In trying to work these two youngsters into the regular team, Fohl is undertaking a greater task than any manager is undertaking today in baseball.

Both manager and first baseman will have to run the gauntlet all the year, because losing a player like Sisler means just as much as losing one like Ruth or Cobb.

The speed of the team has not been affected by the change except that Durst will have to prove that he can run bases like Sisler. Yet the change has upset the pre-season calculations on the possibility of the Browns being runnersup, this year. They have so much confidence in the super-strength and skill of their batteries that they express no fear of any team and are schlak to get at the Yanks.

Sisler or no Sisler, the team is certain that they have "New York's number." Talk with the players and they'll tell you that the champions will find it harder going against St.

Browns Will Transfer Excess Players to Southern and Texas League Teams Because of Draft

Bob Coleman's Switch From Terre Haute to San Antonio Probably the Result of Three-Eye League's Stand—Lesser Leagues Should Be Benefited by Disagreement of A. A. Clubs.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—Baseball managers, owners and fans in the Southern Association and Texas League are congratulating themselves on the prospect of having a faster brand of baseball, better players, more seasoned players, than they have ever had before. They are jubilant over the situation brought about by the major league stand on the draft question and expect in a year to have players superior to the general run of performers in the leagues which are catalogued as Class AA organizations.

Here is the situation: Major league clubs are stocked up with flocks of young ball players and older players who have started to slip and will be replaced in the majors by youngsters. By June 15 the major league clubs must reduce their rosters to 25 players each. That means that every club in the big leagues will send a dozen or more players to smaller leagues. By the major league agreement a player cannot be sent to any league which does not agree to make that player subject to the draft.

Players who formerly were not quite ready for the majors or who had retrograded until they were no longer quite good enough, usually were sent to clubs in the American Association or International League and frequently to the Pacific Coast League. However, those three leagues, along with the Three-I and the Western, have refused to recognize the draft. Therefore, players cannot be sent there.

Case of Schmandt.

The case of Ray Schmandt illustrates the case and more recently the case of Chick Shorten, former Browns, who was sent to Cincinnati the waiver price. Cincinnati wanted to send him to St. Paul in the Rube Benton deal. Judge Landis immediately declared Shorten ineligible to play at St. Paul. Not because Chick had violated any of the rules of baseball, but because the American Association had refused to accept the draft, refused to accept Shorten subject to the draft and therefore Shorten must be shunted to a smaller league, some well-behaved league—well-behaved in the eyes of the major league—where he can be protected.

While such a state of affairs is not pleasant for the players, who suffer for something that somebody else has done, it is fine for the smaller leagues which accept the draft situation.

The Browns, for instance, have several ball players who are sure to be major league stars in a year or two. And yet the club can't carry all of them. They would be sent to A.A. clubs if that were possible, as the player can get better experience and usually can work under smarter managers in larger league. But, as things are now, the excess material on the Browns roster must jump from the big ring to the Southern Association or the Texas League. Mobile undoubtedly will get some men from the Pelicans, and Bob Coleman, at San Antonio will get some.

Terre Haute Barred.

Last year young pitchers were sent to Terre Haute for seasoning. Not so this year. Terre Haute is in the Three-I League and so is Bob Coleman, former manager there, packed up his shirts and took them to San Antonio to keep them clean in a fresh league.

Major league clubs will have to practice skullduggery to send players to any of the five blacklisted leagues. For instance, if Bob Coleman had stayed at Terre Haute the Browns might have released a player, given him a ticket to Terre Haute with orders to see Bob Coleman for a job. Bob might have signed the player and sold him to the Browns when the youngster was ready. But that would have caused a rumpus, fines and perhaps expulsion from organized baseball if it had been discovered. Bob Quinn would not think of working that way and so a job was found for Bob Coleman in the good Texas League.

Owners in the Texas League and Southern Association cannot understand why the other leagues object to the draft. Only one player from each club is subject to the draft and if a club has a star that star can be sold before the draft ever touches him. A club that wants a particular man had enough will not hesitate over the payment of a few thousand dollars more than the draft price. For if the club waits for the draft perhaps some other club will win in the drawing.

Columbus an Example.

Then look at the number of good players that reverted to Class AA clubs while the majors and minors were on good terms! Take the Columbus club, for instance! Dode Paskert, Grover Hartley, Burns, Schreiber, Palmero, Murphy and several others would have jumped to the Texas or Southern if they had left the majors this year. And yet this group helps to make Columbus a strong, well-balanced team.

Baseball owners in these parts freely predict that the five-club circuit leagues will see the light before another season passes and that it will not be long before the majors and minors are working again under an agreement with a draft provided for. And the same baseball owners are confident that if the majors would stand pat they could bring the minors to terms in a few years. It is pointed out that the minors cannot develop all their players. They can't stand to have a few youngsters on the payroll, but they must have some veterans with big league experience.

It is understood around the Texas League and Southern Association circuits that the Pacific Coast League already is prepared to vote for the return of the draft next fall. The Three-I and Western cannot hold out much longer and without help the American Association and International soon would be forced to surrender.

California Wins From Nebraska

Cornhuskers Fare Well in Track Events, but Bears Are Superior in Field.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., April 7.—The University of California defeated the University of Nebraska, 75 points to 56, in the East-West track and field meet here today, taking eight first places.

The Cornhuskers from the Missouri Valley Conference put up a stiff battle in the track events, but were swamped by the California Bruins in field events.

Coach Henry F. Schulte's Boys from Lincoln, Neb., took firsts in six of the nine track events, but took first in only one field event, the high jump.

Nebraska showed its superiority on the track taking 45 points to California's 30. On the field, however, the Bears smothered the Cornhuskers, taking 45 points to Nebraska's 21.

The high point men of the meet were Neufeldt and Becker of California, each piling up 9 points. Captain "Brick" Muller of California added seven points to his team's total, and Lloyd of Nebraska was high point man for Nebraska with 6 points.

The Bears made a clean sweep in both the shot put and discus. Witter Long and Neufeldt of California, cleaned up in the shot and Neufeldt, Long and Witter taking nine discus points, finishing in each event in the order named.

The time of 1:50 4-5 hung up by Gardner of the University of Nebraska for the 880 yard run was the fastest time made on the California oval in several years, according to officials. Cozier of Nebraska took the second in this race and Bauman third.

The summary:

100-YARD DASH—Won by Sherrard, California; Long, Nebraska, second; Parmenter, California, third. Time, :10 1-5 (tie).

BETHLEHEM IS VICTOR OVER BROOKLYN SOCCER TEAM IN CLOSE GAME

BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 8.—The Bethlehem Steel F. C. won a closely contested American Soccer League game from the Brooklyn F. C. here this afternoon by the score of 2 goals to none.

Within three minutes after the beginning of the game, Goldie took a pretty pass from Tarris and drove the ball to the far corner of the net, giving Shearon no chance to save. The assist by Tarris was as cleverly executed as the goal itself.

The second goal was made shortly before the close of the game when Ramsay, the Bethlehem captain, with his back turned towards the goal, headed the ball along the ground about 20 yards into the meshes, leaving Rogerson completely off his guard.

The lineup:

Bethlehem.	Positions.	Brooklyn.
Whitfield	Goal	Rogerson
Young	R. F.	Robertson

Ruttle	R. H.	Haigh
Carnahan	C. H.	Hogg

"Pitching Horse Shoes Every Day Helps Your Health in Every Way"

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 7. GOLF "horn yard golf!"

As an invigorating and healthful exercise, putting cows in the cheeks, nothing quite compares with horse shoe pitching, according to Mrs. Clarence A. Lanham, champion woman horseshoe pitcher of the United States.

"Pitching a horseshoe game a day will keep the doctors away," she said today.

Mrs. Lanham has a record of 35 "ringers" with 50-pound shoes. She said she never enjoyed good health until she began to swing an iron shoe.

Trio of College Golf Stars Meet

Bobby Jones, Jess Sweetser and Rudy Knepper to Clash for Title.

By Lawrence Perry.

NEW YORK, April 7.—With the assurance that some of our great trio of intercollegiate golfers will abandon his class room in favor of championship golf in England, the American Intercollegiate Golf tournament assumes great importance.

Indeed, with Rudy Knepper of Princeton, who is the team-Shakespeare and Iowa State champion; Jess Sweetser, the national amateur champion, and Bobby Jones of Georgia Tech and Harvard, there is no reason why the approaching intercollegiate meet should not be a close rival in point of general interest to the national amateur tournament itself.

Certainly with such players as Jones, Knepper, Sweetser, Pollak, Boyd of Dartmouth, holder of the 1922 intercollegiate title; Mark Cummings of Princeton and a lot of other youngsters who have yet to attain prestige but are dangerous performers, the links at Swampscott should be a center of great interest between June 28 and June 30.

Bobby Jones has never played in an intercollegiate golf tournament, although as a member of the Georgia Tech team in past years he participated in a number of dual meets. Sweetser has won the intercollegiate title but has never played against Knepper in the intercollegiates. All in all there will be plenty going forward at Swampscott to enlist the interest of golf fans generally as well as that of persons affiliated with the various institutions involved in the matches.

There is no question that the meet will do a great deal for competitive golf among the colleges. Its present status as a college sport will be changed when it is pointed out that very few institutions possess golf links and victory or defeat in dual matches have been matters of indifference to the great body of the students. But with all these leading golfers the amateurs involved in the forthcoming college meets undergrads and alumni enthusiastically will take their cue from the golf enthusiasts and display an interest which will be extremely expensive to a bumper gallery at Swampscott.

Youthful Bowler Star of Tourney

Twenty-Two-Year-Old Chicagoan Totals 1953 Pins for Fifth Place in All-Events.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 7.—A 22-year-old lad, Simon Look of Chicago featured today's play in the American Bowling championship tournament when he rolled into fifth place in the all-events. Look rolled with the Samuelsons last night and counted 653 pins for his three games. Shooting in the last squad of doubles today he counted 825, and came back strong in the singles with games of 295, 298 and 235 for a total of 443, the highest count of the day in the individuals and an aggregate total of 1953 for fifth place in the all-events.

W. Heimsling and G. Saturlie of Peoria, who in 1917 established a record score of 1545 in the two-man event, which held until the present meet, proved a disappointment today, the former champions scoring only 1154 pins, failing to play in the money.

FRANK NEWTON VICTOR IN NORTH-SOUTH EVENT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 7.—Frank C. Newton of the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., won the North and South Amateur golf championship today by defeating Charles (Chick) T. Lansing of the Knickerbocker Country Club, Tenafly, N. J., 6 up and 5 to play, in the final round of the annual tournament.

The match was closely contested on the first round of 18 holes, Newton leading 1 up when it was finished.

Lansing's game went to pieces in the afternoon round and Newton became steadier, starting with a birdie 4 on the first hole. He won the first three holes and wound up the match with a winning par 4 on the thirteenth green.

Temperament Is Vital to Golfers, Sarazen Writes

Many Players Defeat Themselves By Breaking Over a Bad Break.

By Gene Sarazen,
World's Champion Golfer.
Copyright, 1923.

If you aspire to be a champion golfer you must develop, in addition to a sound stroke and the proper knowledge as to how to play the shots, a good temperament for the game.

Some people are naturally gifted with a good disposition for golf, those who haven't the right kind of temperament must work on developing it as much as they would work on their shots.

Now, by a good temperament in golf I mean a calm disposition, the ability to take the breaks as they occur in a round and the determination to keep plugging constantly, regardless of the way the luck is running.

It is said this is a game of calculation. This is quite true. It takes courage and the determination to stick to your task to the last to be in any game. Who ever heard of a man's winning anything without fighting for it?

I certainly know I had to deal with all my might to win the game of championships. And had I not been brave along the way I would never have earned my honors.

Take that third round at Pine Valley, for instance, when I was hooking the shots. I tried everything I knew to correct the fault. But the hooking persisted, and the only thing I could go was to play all of my shots just a little better than usual in order to make up for my poor driving.

Several times during that fourth round I was ready to give up in despair. But I managed to keep at it and I am thankful now that I did.

Consider the fourth round, also, after I had got off to a good start and was out in 33. When my drive to the tenth green went into a trap I could have cried.

I was nearly heartbroken to see perfect shot such as I had just played go wrong. But I wanted to play about that on the next hole and a little further along I was rewarded with a break in my favor.

Hagen, the Philosopher.

Both Walter Hagen and Joe Kirchhoffer have wonderful temperaments for golf. Hagen has a philosophical disposition, which enables him to march serenely along regardless of how things are going.

Joe is of the plugging kind. No matter the going, the latter is on the job. On our recent tour he gave one of the most remarkable exhibitions of pluck in golf I have ever heard of or witnessed. In the Canadian Open championship.

Starting on the last round, he was three strokes back of the leader, Eddie Loos. As he started out he said to one of the Tournament Committee: "I'll be back soon for the money," meaning first prize.

So saying, he started off with a fine drive and got a birdie on the first hole. He had a putt for a birdie on the second hole.

But, at the third hole, just as he was warming up to a record-breaking round, he pulled his pitch shot to the green—some 180 yards away—the ball rolled down a steep bank in a heavy clump of bushes.

By the time Joe had retrieved the ball he had used seven strokes—a quee par! That was a blow from the most unexpected quarter. It would have rattled most golfers.

But this break only seemed to put the Dutch on. It made matters worse he missed a short putt for par four on the next hole. But did he quit? Indeed, he didn't!

Shows Fighting Spirit.

Beginning with the next, or fifth hole, Hutchison started on a rampage that swept everything in sight before it.

He began attacking par with a vengeance. They think "the Dutch" is out of it," he said, speaking of the imaginary opponent, I'll show them!"

Joe's went tearing along until he had finally caught up with Loos on the eighteenth hole.

But Eddie got a two on the seventeenth which gave him the lead again and the championship.

Joe's 32 in the incoming nine is not quite serve to turn the trick. But his performance in that meeting well shows what plugging will do.

Thousands of golfers beat themselves. So long as everything is going smoothly they smile and play well. But the minute a ball bounds into a trap and they take a few unlucky strokes they toss in the sponge, bend over their misfortune and figure how they might have won for their ill luck.

They never stop to think of the number of long puts they get down or the number of shots they make without suffering punishment for those misses.

In conclusion I say again that if you wish to become a champion in this game you must develop temperament as well as skill. You must learn to accept all breaks as a part of the game and to play along no matter how rough the going is.

The Wanderer.

Eddie Foster of the Browns, master of Strategy, who fills in at third base at odd moments, has been with five teams in the American League. He began with Philadelphia, then had a trial with New York and transferred his allegiance to turn to Washington, Boston and St. Louis.

Firpo Has Devastating Right But He Winds Up Like a Pitcher

South American Could Beat a Lot of Heavyweights by Sheer Fury and Determination, but Jack Dempsey Is Not Among Their Number.

By Robert Edgren.
Copyright, 1923.

The truth about Luis Firpo was concisely expressed by Billy Gibson just after Firpo knocked out Bill Brennan in Madison Square Garden.

"If Firpo fights Dempsey with no more experience than he has now, they'll shift his names around. Instead of Luis Angel Firpo they'll call him 'Luis Firpo, Angel!'" said Bill. "That's what he'd be after leaving Jack one of those yard-wide openings."

Firpo is spoken of as "another Jim never recovered from that knockdown and fought wildly until the finish of the eleventh round.

The knockout came when Jeffries had knocked Fitz nearly out on his feet with a jarring straight left on the chin. As Bob's hands dropped Jeff for the first time unlimbered that waiting right and sent over a terrific straight right-hand punch that would have dropped an ox. He knocked Corbett out the same way—caught him with the left and shot over the waiting right.

Firpo's Right Devastating.

Entirely unlike Jeffries, who was coached to fight scientifically under the direction of such old masters as Billy Delaney and Tommy Ryan, Firpo depends entirely upon his swinging right.

He leads with the right. Not only does he forget all about that left hand, but he draws his right back a foot or two, telegraphing the punch so that a fighter like Jack Dempsey would have plenty of time to step in and drive a short punch straight to Firpo's chin before Firpo's wild right had covered half the journey.

This is the hardest punch in boxing, for the receiver of it is throwing his head and body forward with his own right-hand blow, doubling the effect of the counter.

To fight Dempsey in the style Firpo used against Brennan would only invite a quick knockout. Brennan was too slow to take his opportunities, or there might have been a different result.

Either that or Bill was "bullied" by the threat of Firpo's tremendous right, and didn't dare take a chance. But Dempsey would take it the first time the opening showed.

Firpo's right swing is a devastating punch if it lands, but he is wild with it. He uses the right more like a club than a battering ram. Dempsey's right goes straight across. Firpo's travels in an arc—a slower and less accurate way of hitting. Less jarring, too, because a straight driven blow with the forearm lined behind it carries more momentum at the point of impact. A straight blow is also much harder to block than a curving blow.

Dempsey is fully as hard to hit as Firpo. He was only jarred back by Carpentier's hardest right on the point of the chin, and when fresh Carpentier could hit. Brennan socked Dempsey often on the jaw, with no visible effect. Firpo staggered under some of Brennan's blows early in the fight.

Strength and Determination.

Firpo's fighting advantages are his height, weight, reach and strength. He is half an inch over six feet two. His reach is phenomenal—79 inches. His shoulders are broad, and his chest is 44 inches normal, with an expansion of nearly six inches, showing the source of his endurance.

In this he is almost a picture of Jeffries. He also has the grim determination that made Jeffries a fighter.

When he was apparently badly dazed and cut by Brennan's punches and the referee seemed likely to stop the fight to save him he brushed the official aside and went after Brennan with a headlong rush.

Jeffries was only 24 when he won the championship, and was improving his boxing in every fight. He started when he was 15. Firpo began boxing at 24, when his habits of mind and movement were already formed and hard to change.

Vespers Go After Scullins Today

Manager Brady Injured—Millers Play Hoovers—No Municipal League Games.

The Vesper Buick soccer team, heralded as the probable successor to the Scullins as champions of St. Louis, will appear against the former national champions in the feature game of the St. Louis Soccer League double-header at High School Field this afternoon. The Bens Millers will oppose the Barrett Hoovers in the second game.

One pair of games remains after today to complete the schedule for 1922-23. The competition will be brought to a close next Sunday.

With a view to developing regulars and reserves for next season Manager Brady of the Scullins will use this afternoon a half dozen new men. Jimmy Burke, Curry, Schuman, Hitchcock and Diel, as well as Oberle, Mitchell and Murphy, veteral subs, will be in the lineup. Manager Brady is suffering from a injured knee. The Vespers last Sunday vanquished the Olympia Club of Chicago, 8 to 1 and their appearance was such as to indicate that they are capable of giving the Scullins a lively scrap.

The Millers and Hoovers are well matched. Both Manager Foley and Devoy will employ youngsters in several positions. The first game is scheduled to start at 2:15 p. m.

No Municipal Games.

There will be no Municipal Soccer League games today. The amateur league season closed last Sunday when the St. Matthews won the title. Arrangements are being made for the champions to Chicago next week. The Windy City teams will play the championship compete here today.

RICHARDS VANQUISHES HUNTER IN STRAIGHT SETS FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

NEW YORK, April 7.—Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., today won the national indoor singles tennis championship, defeating Francis T. Hunter, 1922 champion 6—1, 6—3, 7—5.

Hunter took the opening game of the first set on his own service, but his offensive quickly slackened out. Raising Hunter's side of the net with a dazzling cross-court flex, Richards ended all the games in a row to finish the set. Hunter found only one game to deuce and tossed away the fifth and seventh with double faults.

Hunter rallied briefly in the second set, breaking through Hunter's service for the first time in the third game, only to lose his six-stalling placement zone. The Yonkers star, however, returned the compliment by upsetting Hunter's service in the next game and thereafter they alternated on service until Richards won the set.

With the title slipping from his grasp, Hunter made a determined stand in the last set. He took the first two games with a spectacular driving attack and forced six of the remaining games to deuce, but Richards, spurred to greater heights, rallied to take the last three games after Hunter had led at 4—2 and 5—4.

With the court fanned in the final game, Hunter showed his irritation when a service of Richards' close to the center line-cut appeared out by a scant margin, was declared good. With but a point separating him from victory, Richards served another ace to the extreme alley line. Hunter made no try for it.

ENGLISH GOLFERS WILL EMPLOY A TRAINER AT OPEN EVENT AT TROON

A suggestion is on foot in England whereby some half dozen professionals are to consider the engagement of a competent "trainer" to look after their physical needs at Troon in June next, for the claim has been made that the 1923 open at Hazlehirk was lost to Great Britain —Walter Hagen winning—through the lack of personal attention to details for taking care of himself.

The primitive tent which did duty in 1922 as a washing and dressing room was, it is said, positively unclean and certain players who at the conclusion of the third round had a refreshing evening were compelled to walk about in their stiff, rain-drenched clothing during the whole of the vital waiting period between the third and final rounds.

"Was it any wonder," asks George Philpot, who makes this claim, "that their muscles became stiff, and that their golf suffered in consequence? With adequate dressing rooms facilities, plus a few competent masseurs, this would not have happened, and the possibility is that the open would not have been won by an American. It is to be hoped that the professionals will carry out their project of engaging a trainer for the rest would be relatively small and the advantages overwhelming."

YEATMAN HIGH CAPTURES PRACTICE GAME, 4 TO 0

Yeatman High School baseball team defeated a team composed of semi-professional players and minor league recruits yesterday at the Fairgrounds Park. Paddy Allbright and several former Yeatman players who are to report to the Cubs this season were the opponents of the High School lads. The score was 4 to 0 at the end of the seven-inning game. Strammel pitching for Yeatman did not allow the minor leaguers a hit. He fan three batters in the while Nolte who succeeded him gave one single in the remaining two innings. Yeatman defeated Eden Seminary Friday by a 6—6 score.

Plungers Force Down Derby Odds on Zev and Donges; Setting Sun A Sure Starter, Owner Declares

Announcement That Winner of Bowie Inaugural Will Start in Kentucky Classic Is Expected to Be Followed by Slash in Price — Big Field Likely to Start.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 7.—Another certain starter in the coming Kentucky Derby renewal loomed today when a telegram was received from E. K. Bryson, Easterner turfman, stating that his good gelding, Setting Sun, would arrive here immediately after the close of the Bowie meeting and be pointed for the big classic.

In his first Eastern start of the 1923 season last Monday at Bowie, Setting Sun won the inaugural handicap. He just nodded home in front of Fair Phantom and Broomster.

Winning this race just about convinced Owner Bryson that his gelding is of Derby caliber, and he has decided that he will make a try for the coveted prize. Setting Sun is by Olambala out of Sunburst. He is bred to go a distance and carry plenty of weight. Out of 22 starts Setting Sun is credited with five victories. He can run on any kind of a track, as he has won races on both muddy and fast ovals.

Bo McMillin, which is scheduled to support the silks of T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City turfman, in the Derby, looks better and better every day in his movements.

Considerable support has developed for the Pendergast colt hereabouts. His record as a 2-year-old, when he won five races, finished second four times and third twice, in 21 starts, stamped him as above the average of his age, and he lost a number of races through bad racing luck.

Second in Fast Mile Race.

The Ballot colt was only one and one-half lengths back of Aspiration when the latter ran the fastest mile of any 2-year-old in Kentucky last year—1:38 2-5. Enchantment beat him only four and three-quarter lengths in the Kentucky Jockey Club stakes at Churchill Downs, the richest juvenile stake in the West. In both of these races he met with considerable interference.

Bo McMillin won the Sanford Memorial at Saratoga, soon after Pendergast purchased him. His final appearance in 1922 was marked by a victory at Latonia when he ran three-quarters of a mile in 1:12 with an impost of 112 pounds.

Jockey Danny Connelly has been engaged to ride for the Pendergast stable this season, and will report to Trainer Cahn in the near future. Connelly is at present engaged in galloping horses for J. C. Milam at Lexington.

Since the list of eligibles to the Derby, numbering 145, made its appearance several weeks ago, the chances of the various candidates expressed in figures have decreased or lengthened according to the reports in circulation as to their training condition and the increasing fancy or dislike for their respective chances is made apparent by the weight of commissions placed.

Enchantment, the opening favorite, dropped from 12 to 1 to 8 to 1 but still holds the coveted post of first choice.

Plunges on Donges and Zev.

The Rancocas stable's Zev and John S. Ward's Donges both opened at 30 to 1 and are now quoted at 15 to 1, following mild plunges on both candidates which now appear probable starters.

F. J. Kelly's Skeezix, which before his arrival from California was a 100 to 1 shot, is now 30 to 1.

Bo McMillan, after reaching the training grounds here from New Orleans, dropped from 40 to 1 to 20 to 1.

Thomas Mueller's Wida, Once 500 to 1 in The Winter Book, Is Now Quoted at 60 to 1

The heaviest cut is noted in the case of Theo E. Mueller's Wida which raced well in Cuba and, after reaching the Downs, slumped in price from 500 to 1 to 60 to 1.

Picketer, one of Harry Payne Whitney's candidates, fell from 75 to 1 to 40 to 1. Alice Blue Gown is one of many that has gone up from an opening of 50 to 1 to 100 to 1.

Sally's Alley is soaring upward and also Cartoonist.

The players have backed Prince K down from 75 to 1 to 30 to 1. Chittagong is also down to 30 to 1 after opening at 50 to 1. Following are the quotations today in Louisville.

Vespers Go After Scullins Today

Manager Brady Injured—Millers Play Hoovers—No Municipal League Games.

The Vesper Buick soccer team, heralded as the probable successor to the Scullins as champions of St. Louis, will appear against the former national champions in the feature game of the St. Louis Soccer League double-header at High School Field this afternoon. The Ben Millers will oppose the Barrett-Hoovers in the second game.

One pair of games remains after today to complete the schedule for 1922-23. The competition will be brought to a close next Sunday.

With a view to developing regulars and reserves for next season, Manager Brady of the Scullins will use this afternoon a half dozen new men. Jimmy Burke, Curry, Schurman, Hitchcock and Diel, as well as Oberle, Mitchell and Murphy, veteral subs, will be in the lineup. Manager Brady is suffering from an injured knee. The Vespers last Sunday vanquished the Olympia Club of Chicago, 8 to 1 and their appearance was such as to indicate that they are capable of giving the Scullins a lively scrap.

The Millers and Hoovers are well matched. Both Manager Foley and Devoy will employ youngsters in several positions. The first game is scheduled to start at 2:15 p. m.

No Municipal Games.

There will be no Municipal Soccer League games today. The amateur league season closed last Sunday when the St. Matthews won the title. Arrangements are being made to send the champions to Chicago next week. The Windy City teams will enter the championship competition today.

Principia Plays Yeatman.

The Principia Academy baseball team will meet the Yeatman High nine next Tuesday afternoon. Coach Marquard of the Academy team has been giving the baseball squad stiff workouts during the past week in anticipation of the Yeatman contest.

DAVE DANFORTH SHINES AS BROWNS STOP PELS

And yet, from behind the catcher, it appeared that Vangilder was throwing his best curves.

The Cape Girardeau flinger was taken out after that inning and Dave Danforth pitched five impressive frames. Dave looked good for an inning yesterday, but he appeared to have even more stuff and a better fast ball this afternoon.

Only one hit was made while Davie was in there and that was in the ninth, a bounder over second, just out of Gerber's reach. Danforth's control was good, only one walk being issued.

It was the most impressive showing the Browns have made this spring. Not in the matter of base hits, but in the way the boys fought to win. Manager Fohl does not care so much about the outcome of the games. He insists the big league campaign is the thing he is pointing his team toward, but the players were out there with another purpose. Peevish over their defeat yesterday they went out today with a determination and a spirit that reminded St. Louis spectators of the team that battled the Yankees for the pennant.

Two Rookies, Too.

The infield was working better then it has been this spring. Gerber contributed his daily brilliant play. He raced behind second to snare a hopper and started the double play that ended the game. Robertson leaped into the air for a line drive and McManus showed his old-time certainty in fielding grounders.

Durst also came in for a share of the glory. In the second inning he took a hot grounder from Ewoldt's bat. Cedric came in for the ball and he had to hurry to get the runner. He accomplished his purpose by diving for the runner's legs and tagging him as he leaped for the base. Durst will risk life and limb to make good at that first sack and he has more boosters than any youngster ever on a ball club.

Ken Williams got only one hit, but it sent two runs over the plate. The sacks were filled when he doubled in the fifth inning.

Walter Gerber delivered a timely single in the sixth to drive in two runs, McManus tripled in the seventh with a man on base and in the same frame Robertson hit to right for two bases, accounting for two tallies.

Bennett didn't get a hit in three official chances, but he walked twice and scored three runs, besides fielding his position satisfactorily.

Martina, who won 20 of 24 games last year for New Orleans, pitched the seventh, eighth and ninth. Six of the Browns hits were made off his slants and six off Thomas.

Hank Severeid and three young pitchers, Stick Williams, George Blaeholder and Ignatz Mulch, departed for St. Louis at noon today.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely.

To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need.

This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Frankie Osner to Get Hardest Test In Kaiser Battle

Boy Who Was Once Thought a Joke by Persistence Has Gained Recognition.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Six years ago "Frankie Osner, Alton," began to appear on boxing programs in the St. Louis region. The owner of the name was then 16 years old and not much to marvel at. In fact, for some time he was something of a joke, his persistence in remaining in the game being his chief claim to merit.

Today, Frankie Osner's name commands a certain attention. To begin with, he is matched with Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser, rated the best bantam St. Louis has turned out in some time. They will meet in a 10-round scramble at the First Regiment Armory next Wednesday night under the auspices of the Business Men's Athletic Association.

Both boys began as amateurs about the same time and are about the same age. Perhaps Frankie has a year or so on Peewee. But a year or so ago the two boxers were not thought of in the same breath. Kaiser was a "title prospect"; Osner was just one of the many on the outer rim of fame. Now the rivals are meeting on equal terms, with many giving Osner a reasonable chance to make a good showing.

Osner Climbing Fast.

Osner, in the last year or two, has gone out into the "bushes" and gained practical experience in the game. Also, he has become a member of Dan Keefe's Chicago stable which includes two other St. Louisans —Patsy Flanagan and Kid Bandy. Flanagan will help Osner here during his fight with Kaiser.

Osner's recent bout here against Mike Kramer—Kaiser's principal local rival as an amateur—was a revelation in clean boxing, as well as in improvement displayed by Osner.

Frankie is not a hard hitter, but there is no lack of sting to the blows he lands. He has a considerable string of knockouts to his credit. He has no sleep producer, like Peewee's dreaded straight right. However, the last we saw of this Kaiser weapon it was not allowed to come out of its scabbard. Midget Smith's tactics tied it to Kaiser's side.

Peewee Must Show Us.

Peewee says he is "out to redeem himself for his previous showing. This, it must be said, was below expectations. As Midget Smith himself remarked after the contest was Kaiser, "Peewee" seemed to be hampered by the memory of the knockout administered to him by Johnny Curtin.

Peewee can box cleanly and well, and he can hit. He is a formidable foe for an opponent with light artillery; and, if Osner makes good against him it will be a record at which to "point with pride."

Kaiser, by the way, is to take on Battling Leonard at the Armory, April 18, one week later. His opponent will be Harry Battling Leonard of Philadelphia. Peewee fought Leonard a 12-round draw in New York, some months ago.

Besides the main event at the Armory on April 11, the following bouts are scheduled:

Young Dundee vs. "Red" Johnston, four rounds, 126 pounds; Morris King vs. Winkey Schwartz, 4 rounds, 122 pounds.

Kid Sparks, Terre Haute, vs. Mike Kramer, St. Louis, 120 pounds.

Johnny McCoy, the Cleveland bantam, is ready to give up and "shake" St. Louis. His manager, Lucien Morrow, says he has challenged right and left without response from local battlers.

Handicap Rating Is Abolished by Golf Association

Entries to National Amateur Tourney to Be Determined by Other Records.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Abolishing a system under which in effect the eligibility list for the national amateur golf championship was determined by handicap ratings, the Executive Committee of the United Golf Association today announced that its 1923 list would be based upon tournament records and upon personal knowledge of player's ability.

The new requirements were adopted on the recommendation of the eligibility list commission of which James D. Standish Jr. of Detroit is chairman. Officials believe they will establish eligibility on an "honor roll" basis instead of a more or less arbitrary rating and also produce a more selected field of entrants for the national title event.

The change was made, it was announced because of the great variation in handicap standards throughout the country and because of a lack of co-operation in many instances of sectional associations, when handicap lists were requested.

Last season while no definite dividing line was fixed, the eligibility list was made up practically entirely of players with a handicap of four or less.

A supplementary list, published later, included a few five or six handicap men, it was said. In previous years, a handicap of five was accepted as the dividing line.

A new method of filing entries for the amateur championship will, however, accomodate players whose names are not included in the original eligibility list which probably will be published next month. This method is outlined by the U. S. G. A. as follows:

"Any amateur golfer, who belongs to a member club of the U. S. G. A. may submit his entry to the Eligibility List Committee at least three weeks before the opening day of the championship. The ability of all such entrants will be investigated and the player notified of its acceptance or refusal at least one week before the championship."

This system, officials believe, will permit the acceptance of the entries of players whose game during the current season has reached the necessary standard or who may have been omitted from the original list unfairly.

Doubtful Infield, Weak Pitching Staff Hurt Cleveland Chances

Speaker Has Fine Catching Staff and Hard-Hitting Outfield, but Guisto at First and Lutzke at Third May Disrupt Defense.

(This is the seventh of a series of 16 stories dealing with the prospects of the various major league baseball teams.)

NO. 7—CLEVELAND INDIANS.
By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

Tris Speaker has the Indians all set for the 1923 campaign, but his infield is of doubtful worth and his pitching staff is comparitvely weak.

And there is a reason for this. When the Indians went to the bad last year, Speaker did not fool around trying to make a showing for 1922. Instead he started building for 1923. The result was that many young players were brought up and before the present training jaunt started, the Indians' manager knew pretty well what he had to build from.

But two men were purchased during the off season and both will be regulars. They are Walter Lutzke, the third-sacker, purchased from Kansas City for a bundle of cash, and Glenn Myatt, the catcher, from Milwaukee, reported to have cost $50,000. Lutzke will supplant the veteran Larry Gardner, while Myatt will help out Steve O'Neill behind the bat.

Looks Good in Practice.

Lutzke has made good with a bang. At least that is the opinion of those who have seen the Indians perform. He is a big fellow—a dead ringer for Bill Bradley—who played the far corner for Cleveland some years ago. Lutzke has a great pair of hands, said to be the largest possessed by an infielder in either major league. He is a good fielder and has a strong arm. At the plate he takes a wicked cut at the sphere. He hit .325 in the A. A. a year ago.

Lutzke will not be the only newcomer on the Cleveland infield. Stuffy McInnis is gone and Louis Guisto, who has been trying for seasons to land a regular berth, seems to have finally succeeded and will start at the initial station. Guisto is a big fellow and is able to hit.

The other infield positions will be taken care of by Bill Wambsganss, hero of the unassisted triple play in the 1920 world's series, and Joe Sewell at short. Sewell this spring looks beter than a year ago, and seems set for a big year. For reserves, Speaker will have Riggs Stephenson and Larry Gardner.

Only one place in the outfield is doubtful. Speaker himself will be in center. He has entirely recovered from the knee injury which forced him to remain idle a great deal in 1922, and critics with the Indians in the South assert that this is the first time in five years that he is sliding to bases. That seems to indicate that there is nothing wrong with his underpinning. Jamieson will be in left. Speaker and Jamieson are real ball hawks.

Summa a Phenom.

There is a fight on in right between Homer Summa, whom Speaker regards as the best young player to come up in 10 years; Frank Brower, obtained from Washington, and Joe Connolly, brought up last fall. Summa was with the Cardinals several years ago. He is a good player, but according to reports, is a "crab" when he does not get his base hits. Brower is a hard left-hand hitter. Brower also can be used at first base in the pinch.

The catching is all set with Steve O'Neill, one of the best in the league; Glenn Myatt, a mighty sweet looking newcomer, who is getting his second chance in the big tent, and Luke Sewell, who was with the club a year ago.

That leaves only the pitching staff. Of course Speaker again has Stanley Coveleskie, the spitter. But Covy is not getting any younger and this may prove a bad year for him, although he has shown mighty well in exhibition games. Another is George Uhle, and he is being tipped to lead the Indian mound men. Uhle has developed a knuckle ball, said to be even better than the one which is responsible for the success of Ed Rommel, the Athletics' righ hander. In addition, Uhle has a good curve ball. Guy Morton will be another of the right handers, while Sherod Smith, the veteran obtained last fall from Brooklyn, will be the main southpaw reliance.

But Speaker has others. Metivier, who comes from the International League, looks mighty good. Lindsey, Boone, Bedgood, Edwards, Winn and Shaute are the best of the others.

Knuckle Ball Artists.

Without a doubt Speaker will have a flock of knuckle ball experts, as all the flingers with the exception of Coveleskie, who still relies solely on his spitter, and Guy Morton, are trying to develop this delivery.

From present indications it seems that the Indians will start the season with good catching and a good outfield; an uncertain infield because of Guisto and Lutzke, and an uncertain pitching staff.

SPEAKER'S ROSTER OF INDIANS FOR 1923

CATCHERS—O'Neill, Myatt and L. Sewell.

INFIELDERS—Guisto, Wamby, J. Sewell, Lutzke, Stephenson and Gardner.

OUTFIELDERS — Speaker, Jamieson, Summa, Connolly, Brower and Hogan.

BATTLING SIKI CHARGED WITH ASSAULT, BATTERY

PARIS, April 7.—Battling Siki was called to the police station of the Montmartre district today to give his version of the rough and tumble fight in which he participated at the Rat Mort restaurant on the night of his return from Ireland after his fight with Mike McTigue.

Siki's explanation that he was ridiculed and insulted by the diners apparently failed to make a favorable impression with the police, as a formal charge of assault and battery was preferred against him.

Stribling to Meet Carbon.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—Young Stribling, Macon middleweight, has been matched in a scheduled 15-round bout with Frank Carbon of New York in Atlanta on May 1, it was announced here today by Carbon's manager.

Wasem Outclassed In Measurements By Mat Title Foe

Only in Reach and Altitude Does St. Louis Challenger Compare With the Champion.

MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

Lightweight Champion Risks Title Against St. Louisan for $300 Side Bet.

If physical development is a true criterion of relative ability, then the scheduled wrestling match between Jack Fisher, world's lightweight champion, and Al Wasem, former title holder, at the South Broadway Athletic Club next Friday night, is as good as decided, before the grapplers step upon the mat. The present king of 135-pounders, on measurements, has all over the St. Louis wrestler. In only two instances does the tape show an advantage for Wasem, these being in height and reach, and in the mat game these advantages are of little actual worth.

As to age both boys are on equal footing, each being around the 35-year-old mark. Their weight is also alike, Wasemfi scaling 137 pounds yesterday, with Fisher being 2½ pounds over the required mark of 135 ringside, which is recognized as the correct poundage for a lightweight title match. Neither boy will have any trouble in taking off the excess tonnage. In fact, both probably will be a couple of pounds under when they start activities.

In other respects, though, and the vital ones at that, Fisher standout prominently. He has the neck measurement of a middleweight, the tape showing 17 inches, while Wasem measures 15¼ inches. That is a substantial neck for a lightweight, and many larger men cannot boast of any bigger, but it fades before Fisher's measurement.

Fisher Has 6-Inch Expansion.

The champion also owns a wonderful chest development which normal is 40 inches and expanded 46. Wasem show 35¾ inches with a 2-inch expansion. Fisher is noted for his powerful physique above his waistline. His biceps flexed measure 14½ inches. Gasem shows 12 inches. Jack's forearm is 12½ inches, against 10¾ for the local grappler, while the champion owns a wrist of 7¾ inches in comparison to 6¾ for the St. Louisan. Their waist measurement is virtually the same, Fisher measuring 29 inches around the bread-basket, with Wasem being just a fourth of an inch farther around.

The title holder also holds an advantage in the lower half of the body. Fisher measures 21¾ inches around the thigh, 14¾ inchesc around the calf, with an 8¾-inch ankle. Wasem's ankle is 8¼ inches, his calf 12¾ and he owns a thigh measurement of 19¾ inches.

In reach and height the two advantages held by Wasem, the St. Louisan, outclasses the champion in the first, 70¾ inches to 68 inches, while he stands 5 feet 4 inches against 5 feet 6 inches, altitude of the champion.

OKLAHOMA SMOTHERS MISSOURI TIGERS UNDER 17 TO 1 SCORE AT NORMAN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., April 7.—The Sooners staged a home-run carnival and took revenge on the University of Missouri baseball team today, by a score of 17 to 1. Groom walloped three circuit smashes, Briscoe had a perfect day at the bat with three singles and two homers and Fox rapped a homer, for the Sooners, while the Tigers only run was from a run by Faurot.

"Ram" Morrison let Missouri down with four scattered hits in the eight innings of play and the Tigers used Reagan, Howery and Newell, trying to stop the terrific stick work of Oklahoma, but the home runs came off all three hurlers. The game was called in the eighth inning by request of Missouri in order to catch an early train home.

Famous Bike Team Leads.

PARIS, April 7.—Egg and Van Kempen, the Swiss-Dutch team, have a comfortable point lead in Paris' annual six-day bicycle race which ends at 11 o'clock tomorrow night. Aerts and Beyl, the Franco-Belgian pair, are second; Sergent and Pagnoul third, and the All-Australian team, Grenda and McNamara, fourth. The Cyclists are far behind the record for this stage of the race.

Willard Breaks Camp April 21

Former Champion Will Go to New York to "Prove to Critics That He Is Fit."

By the Associated Press.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., April 7.—Jess Willard, former world's heavyweight champion, began today his last two weeks of training here before he breaks camp to go to New York where he will meet Floyd Johnson, Iowa heavyweight, at the Yankee Stadium, May 12.

Willard will break up his health resort training camp here April 21, and will go to New York where he will complete the final three weeks of training before the bout, and give the New York boxing commission a chance to look him over before the fight, Ray Archer, the former champion's manager said today.

The big Kansan is nursing a bruised right arm, received in a workout with one of his sparring partners, Harry Drake, several days ago. Jess has not boxed since receiving the injury, desiring to take no chances with his match with Johnson only five weeks away, but today he gave the right a good workout on the punching bag.

"I am in the best shape of my life," Willard said today. "I am going to show all my critics that I am in that kind of shape."

New Wood-Low Scores.

New pins seemed to bother the bowlers in the Scratch League at the Stein Jr. Alleys last week and but 19 to 40 men were able to better the 500 mark. The Dutch Masters, Don Julians, Faust Lunch Rooms and Stein Jrs. won two out of three from their respective opponents, the Green Tree Dairy team, Ziegenhein Bros. Colbion Billiards and A. C. Blums.

J. Miller and Partner Win.

J. Miller and Miss Bacigolupo won the mixed doubles elimination tournament among 26 couples from the First National Bank at Peterson's. Their final match was rolled against Miss Simpson and O'Mara who, with their handicap, totaled 874 against 941 for Miller and Miss Bacigolupo.

VELIE

VELIE TOURING SEDAN COMPLETELY EQUIPPED, $1995—F. O. B. MOLINE—WHERE CAN YOU MATCH THIS VALUE?

Regular equipment includes: Disc wheels, Cord tires throughout, with 2 extra tires and covers. Aluminum steps, or running boards; aluminum body rails; touring trunk at rear containing 2 suitcases and hat box; bumpers, front and rear. Rear-vision mirror; windshield wiper. Silvered flower vase, 8-day clock. Dome light; vanity case. Smoking set; cigar lighter. Like all Velie models, the Touring Sedan is powered by the famous Velie-Built Motor which is vibrationless at all speeds and is automatically lubricated even to the piston pins. This motor is the sensation in its field and is without counterpart in any car that sells within hundreds of dollars of the Velie price.

A Most Remarkable Value at the Present Price

When you buy your next car why not take a lesson from experience and select one that will serve you and your family comfortably every day in the year?

The Velie Touring Sedan has been designed and built to do that very thing. A snug closed car for stormy, blowy days—an open car that lets in all the rush of clean, cool air in spring, summer and early fall.

At the present price, $1995, f. o. b. Moline, this car offers a truly remarkable value, for it is actually $100 to $300 lower in price than most closed cars that sell near Velie's price in the open models.

Over 60% of Velie owners buy another Velie when they choose a new car.

No other car in any price class, we believe, has built up such a sound following. It is a wonderful endorsement of Velie's faithful performance.

Why not decide now to take this opportunity to buy this beautiful car at a rock-bottom figure?

Every time we sell a car we make a friend.

PRISON TERM FOR ROCK ISLAND MAYOR

Former Chief of Police Also Convicted of Conspiracy to Protect Vice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., April 7.—Mayor Harry M. Schriver, Thomas F. Cox, former Chief of Police, and Lawrence Pedigo, tool of John Looney, fugitive vice lord, were found guilty of conspiracy to protect gambling and other vice in the city of Rock Island today and the punishment was fixed by the jury at indeterminate sentences of from one to five years in the penitentiary. Cox was fined $2000 in addition to his prison sentence.

Motions for a new trial will be filed, and arguments will be heard April 20.

The return of the verdict brings to a close the most spectacular case in the history of the Circuit Court of Rock Island County. The case lasted six weeks and it was necessary to examine more than 300 veniremen before the jury could be completed.

The defendants were found guilty of conspiring with Looney to extort money from underworld victims in return for official protection.

The vice inquiry, undertaken by Attorney-General Brundage after a committee of citizens had appealed to him, started soon after the slaying of William C. Gabel, saloon man, and the Market Square riot in which John Connor Looney, son of the vice lord, was murdered in a gang war.

John K. Scott, City Attorney, is yet to be tried on the same charge, and an indictment for the murder of Gabel is hanging over Cox and Pedigo.

Starting with the slaying of William Gabel, on July 31, 1922, there were eight violent deaths in rapid succession. State and Federal agents laid before the people of Rock Island a story of vice and crime which was declared to enjoy the protection of the authorities. The investigation resulted in the indictment of 68 persons.

Looney is former publisher of the Rock Island News, which has been suppressed.

Lloyd George Says Policy of the United States Has Paralyzed League

World-Wide Membership in Organization Necessary If It Is to Have Balance and Authority, Former British Premier Declares—If America Had Joined, France Would Have Felt Pressure to Submit Reparations to Adjudication.

LONDON, April 7.

Is the League of Nations a success? It is impossible to answer this question candidly without giving offense to rival partisans.

If you indicate the successes already placed to the account of the League, its opponents decry or minimize these triumphs and suggest that you are blinded by attachment to a chimera.

If you point to its shortcomings, the extreme zealots of the League get angry and hint that you are a secret enemy. I mean, nevertheless, to attempt an answer, for much depends on fearless examination of the progress made or missed.

My first answer would be that it is scarcely fair to pose this question just yet. The League was founded only three years ago—much too short a period to afford a test of the workings of a gigantic, complex but very delicate and sensitive human machine. There has been hardly time enough even to catalogue and chart the myriads of nerves that thread its system. You cannot move a finger at the councils of Geneva without touching some hidden nerve and setting it in a condition of quivering protest.

The League has, however, been long enough in existence to reveal its strength and its weaknesses, its power, its potentialities and its perils. It has already achieved triumphs of which its founders may well be proud. The restoration of Austria to life, when it seemed to have been hopelessly submerged in the deluge of economic, financial and political disasters which had overwhelmed it, is a notable feat of artificial respiration. The successful effort organized by the League to stamp out typhus in Eastern Europe and prevent its spread to the west is also a success worthy of record. But for this intelligently conducted campaign, that terrible disease would have ravaged Russia and Central Europe and laid low millions out of populations so enfeebled by hunger and privation as to become easy victims to its devastating assaults.

Work of Labor Branch

The Labor branch of the League has also been specially active and energetic, and its persistent endeavor to raise and co-ordinate standards of labor in all countries is producing marked and important results. In addition, great credit is due to the League for the splendid work it has accomplished in alleviating distress which prevailed amongst the famine stricken areas of Eastern Europe and amongst the refugees who fled from the horrors of victorious bolshevism in Russia and the still greater horrors of Turkish savagery in Asia Minor.

But these humanitarian tasks, praiseworthy though they be, were not primary objects of the foundation of the League. Its main purpose was the averting of future wars by setting up some tribunal to which nations would be bound, by their own covenant and by the pressure of other nations, to resort in order to settle their differences. Its failure or success as an experiment will be judged by this test alone.

How does it stand in this respect? It succeeded in effecting settlement of the dangerous dispute between Sweden and Finland over possession of the Aaland Islands. That success was on the line of its main purpose. Here the methods of the League gave confidence in its complete impartiality.

As much can, unfortunately, not be said of another question where it was called in and gave a decision. Its Silesian award has been acted upon, but hardly accepted by both parties as a fair settlement. That is due to the manner adopted in reaching the judgment. Instead of following the usual precedent in the choice of a tribunal, it pursued a course which engendered suspicion of its motives. It created the regrettable impression of anxiety to retain a certain measure of control over the decision. There was suspicion of intrigue in the choice of tribunal and in the conduct of the proceedings.

In the Aaland case no great Power was particularly interested in influencing the conclusions either way. Here two Powers of great authority in the League—France and Poland—were passionately engaged in securing a result adverse to Germany. The other party to the dispute had no friends and was, moreover, not a member of the League. Britain stood for fair play, but it was not a protagonist of the claims of Germany. Poland had a powerful advocate in the League—a country with a vital interest in securing a pro-Polish decision.

Germany Lacks Faith

In these circumstances the League ought to have exercised the most scrupulous care to avoid any shadow of doubt as to its freedom from all bias. Had it chosen distinguished jurists, outside its own body, to try the cause, as it did in the Aaland case, all would have been well. It preferred, however, to retain the matter in its own hands. Hence doubts and misgivings with which the judgment of the League has been received, not only by the whole of Germany, but by many outside Germany.

This decision and the way Poland has flouted the League over Vilna, served to confirm the idea which prevails in Russia that France and Poland dominate the League. This Silesian award may be just, but the fact remains that it will take a long series of decisions beyond cavil to restore, or rather to establish, German and Russian confidence in the League.

It is unfortunate that countries which cover more than half of Europe should feel thus about a body whose success depends entirely on the confidence reposed in its impartiality by all nations which may be called upon to carry out its decrees, even though these may be adverse to their views or supposed interests. The Vilna fiasco, the Armenian failure, the suspicions that surround the Silesian award, the timidjty which prevents the tackling of reparations, which is one of the questions disturbing the peace of Europe today; futile conversations and committees on disarmament which everyone knows will not succeed in scrapping one flight of airplanes or one company of infantry—all these disappointments arise from one predominating cause. What is it?

Undoubtedly, the great weakness of the League comes from the fact that it only represents one-half of the great Powers of the world. Until the others join, you might as well call the Holy Alliance a League of Nations.

The ostensible purpose of that combination was also to prevent the recurrence of wars that had for years scorched Europe, and to establish European peace on the firm basis of a joint guarantee of delimited frontiers. But certain Powers with selfish ambitions dictated its policy. It terrorized Europe into submission and called that peace. No historical parallel is quite complete, but there is enough material in occurrences of today to justify the reference. The League to be a reality, must represent the whole civilized world. That is necessary to give it balance as well as authority. That was the original conception. To ask why that failed is to provoke a bitter and a barren controversy.

American Non-Participation

I do not propose to express any opinion as to the maneuvers which led to the defeat of the treaty in America, whether the Senate should have honored the signature of an American President given in the name of his country at an international conference, or whether the commitment was too fundamentally at variance with American ideas to justify sanction—whether the amendments demanded as a condition of approval would have crippled the League and ought to have been rejected, or whether they were harmless and ought to have been accepted—these are issues which it would serve no helpful purpose for me to discuss.

But as to the effect of American refusal to adhere to the League there can be no doubt. It robbed that body of all chance of dominating success in the immediate future. It is true that three great Powers remained in the League, but Russia was excluded, Germany was not included, and when America decided not to go in, Britain, France and Italy alone remained of the great Powers. The effect has been paralyzing. Where these three Powers disagree on important issues where action is required, nothing is done. The smaller Powers cannot, on questions where one or more of the great Powers have acute feeling, impose their will, and no great Power will take the responsibility of overruling the third.

Hence questions like reparations, which constitute a standing menace to European peace, are not dealt with by the League. Had America been

"CHOOSE RUSSIA OR ROME!" WAS THE CHALLENGE TO PRIESTS

Graphic Description of Dramatic Scene When 17 Priests Sought Martyrdom by Defying a Soviet Tribunal

Picture Like One of French Revolution; Savage Tribunal Sat in What Once Was Ballroom of Old Nobility, and Neither Threats of Death Nor Menace of Red Bayonets Could Swerve Little Band of Men on Trial.

WHILE many accounts of the trial of 17 Roman Catholic priests in Moscow were put on the wires, none of them were sent. The soviet authorities forbade it The following story is the first complete account of the intensely dramatic event to reach America. The author, who attended all sessions of the court, sent it from Riga after he had left Russia, presumably to stay away.

Since the story of the trial was written news dispatches have carried additional details that all were found guilty, Archbishop Zepliak and Vicar-General Butchkavitch being sentenced to death and the others to terms of imprisonment running from six months to five years.

The sentence of the Archbishop was commuted to imprisonment, but the Vicar-General was executed in spite of protests from Poland and Great Britain.

RIGA, March 27 (via London, April 5).

BEFORE describing the trial of Archbishop Zepliak and 17 of his clergy at Moscow, which ended Sunday night, I should say I do not describe from hearsay. I attended every sitting from the first day to the last. The persecution was on religious grounds alone. It is the first item in a program for the destruction of Christianity in Russia.

Krylenko, who conducted the prosecution, and Gelkin, the presiding Judge, made this perfectly clear. They asked every one of the clerical prisoners whether they had taught the catechism to children, and every prisoner answered yes.

They then read the bolshevist law which makes it a crime to impart religious teaching to anyone under 18 years old, and asked each prisoner if he would continue to teach the catechism. The reply in every case was yes, always delivered in a firm tone and sometimes accompanied by a smile—a smile of pity, I fancy, for the ignorance of a man who would ask such a question of priests who had remained with their flocks in Petrograd during the last five years of terror.

The Archbishop's face lit with pleasure and surprise when he answered. It was as if he had been asked if he could see the way to accept the miraculous gift of health, youth and unlimited riches. Behind the prelate sat the young priest, Edward Yunevict, newly ordained, as one could see from his tonsure not yet covered by his hair. Joy flashed in his eyes and irradiated his whole countenance when asked if, in obedience with the bolshevist law, he would cease teaching children their catechism. Joyousness so marked his voice in his "No" that the three bolshevist Judges, who were all smoking cigarettes at the time, looked up simultaneously in surprise.

Would Not Quit Saying Mass.

The priests were next asked if, after the churches had been closed, they dared disobey the bolshevist law by saying mass. Yes, of course, they all said mass. Not only did they own up to the crime, but admitted there was always a congregation of about 150 to 200.

They used empty halls for the purpose. Petrograd is half empty and there are many halls and suites of rooms available for such services, though in the winter time the cold in those unheated rooms must have been murderous.

And, to the surprise of the Red Judges, they would not promise to cease saying mass. This case, however, does not concern Roman Catholics alone. It concerns all religions, including the Jews. It is a crime under the bolshevist law to impart religious teaching to any person under the age of 18 years, even though the teacher be the mother and the pupil her child. This law, therefore, strikes at all religions and at one of the most sacred rights of parents.

The trial, as I have indicated, was a religious trial and not a political one, though the procurator tried hard to make out it was political. This was nonsense. The papers seized at the house of Father Butchkavitch (they were found in an open drawer) concerned various discussions held at various times with the clergy which the clergy were bound to discuss—what attitude they should take toward the new divorce law, the law separating church and state, the law separating church and school, and there were also innumerable decrees which the Soviet Government had poured forth at the rate of 10 a day.

Prosecutor Krylenko made clear that any men who met together to discuss in a critical spirit the decrees of the Soviet Government are counter-revolutionaries and, as a matter of fact, he is right. Such is the law of the soviet, and the sooner English and American concessionaries know that the better. Englishmen and Americans up to the present have been treated with special consideration and practically conceded extraterritorial privileges, but once London and Washington recognize the Soviet Government fully, all foreigners in Russia will be made to feel that they live under an insupportable tyranny.

Krylenko Nimble and Dapper.

The reading of the death sentences was begun on the stroke of midnight of Palm Sunday. The audience throughout was largely composed of Communists. Of all the bloodthirsty, wild beasts I have ever set eyes on, Krylenko is the worst. I do not refer to his personal appearance, which is that of a nimble, dapper little man of about 40, with a pugnacious face and small mustache.

His smile, when I first saw it, seemed to me not unpleasant; but now I see it at night, see it as it looked when he was gloating over men whom he had condemned to death. Again and again he looked Father Butchkavitch in the eye, his own eyes filled with merriment. His face wore the same smile during the most pathetic parts of Dobrischeff Pushkin's speech for the defense. He actually tried hard to catch the eye of that lawyer, to make him smile, too, in an attempt to undo all the work of his emotional appeal.

This was bad enough, but nothing compared to the energy which he threw into his demand for blood. The public prosecutor in any country where there is such a functionary is quite right in asking with firmness for the punishment of the guilty; but Krylenko's thirst for the death sentence transcended all limits. He raged like a wild animal stinted in its allowance of blood and devoured in consequence by a raging thirst. And he must have known, for he is an educated man, that he had not proved his case. Most of it was built upon admissions made by the prisoners under coercion.

The Cheka in Petrograd seized a number of documents in the rooms of Father Butchkavitch. The charge of high treason cannot be based upon such documents in any other country in the world. I heard all of them read out in court, and found them innocuous, and Krylenko showed Father Butchkavitch each of the documents, one after the other, asking him: "Do you admit having written this?" Father Butchkavitch admitted them all save one to which there was no name, but which was not in the prisoner's handwriting and was not addressed to him. Even this document was not important; it spoke only of money being got in Poland, and Polish priests naturally would get money for their churches from their country; but the Judge insisted upon its being read.

I have spoken of the procurator. The Judges were worthy of him; they grinned knowingly at him, and he at them, throughout the entire trial. They showed it on the first day, when the defense raised the question of procedure. The defense said: "Here are a series of incidents—refusal to sign an agreement with the Soviet Government regarding church property; refusal to evacuate the church promptly when called upon to do so, etc. We propose that these matters be taken up separately, and that the prosecution prove them to be breaches of the law."

Krylenko objected to this, insisting that all of these isolated incidents be taken together as part of a general counter-revolutionary conspiracy against the Soviet Government, and the three Judges upheld his objection.

Some of these incidents were of the flimsiest character. Take the case of the priest who fell "demonstratively" upon his knees when a company of Red "hooligans" entered his church during service and ordered the congregation out of it. The priest was nearly blind, as was obvious to everyone in court who watched his movements during the trial. He had not seen the intruders and simply knelt down before the sacrament after he had finished mass. But Krylenko insisted that his action in falling upon his knees was an appeal to the religious fanaticism of his parishioners and therefore punishable under an article in the bolshevist penal code. That priest was condemned to serve 10 years in prison.

Audience in Sympathy With Court.

The audience was worthy of the Judges and the procurator—at least the Communist portion of it. It actually applauded when Krylenko, writhing and frothing at the mouth like a mad man, made his second and more frightful demand for the lives of six of the prisoners, and the presiding Judge did not attempt to quiet the audience. But half an hour later, when some Poles clapped their hands in approval of a moving appeal for the men's lives made by one of the lawyers for the defense, the same Judge furiously threatened to have the room cleared if this demonstration was repeated.

Next day an attempt was made to admit only Communists to the court, and only persons able to exhibit cards of membership in the Communist party or some bolshevist organization were allowed to enter. On the last day, however, many Polish women got in, and their lamentations when the verdict was announced were the most heartrending sounds I have ever heard. Even then, however, the Communists were in the majority, and their jeers and laughs and observations were disgusting to the last degree.

One unshaven, bestial looking visage in front of me I shall never forget. During all the time the prisoners were pleading for their lives, that abominable face was set in a perpetual grin, with mouth open. Worst of all, it swung round at intervals and fixed its bloodshot eyes on me, as if insisting upon an answering sympathetic laugh.

There were also, I am sorry to say, Polish faces just as cruel, callous and repulsive. One, of a type hardly human, with little, sunken eyes, was in a perpetual state of merriment. These were the faces of Polish Communists who have formed a bolshevist organization here under the patronage of the Kremlin, and who were encouraged by the Soviet Government to attend, that they might gloat over their unfortunate countrymen in the dock.

The court of justice was hardly in keeping with its contents. It is known as the Blue Hall and was the ballroom of the old palace of the nobility, now the palace of Red labor conventions. Painted light blue and adorned with a frieze representing maidens dancing and naked Cupids trailing wreathes of roses, it would have constituted a more suitable background for a light comedy than a tragedy. During the last two nights of the trial the door was open owing to the heat arising from the vast, perspiring crowd, and through these open doors floated odds and ends of ragtime music, punctuated by the distant handclapping of an audience, for the Red Laborites have a concert room downstairs. Sometimes this applause was followed immediately after by a bloodcurdling yelp from Krylenko.

How the Prisoners Bore Themselves.

And the prisoners: How did they bear themselves under the ordeal? It reassured my faith in human nature, that in these days of disillusion, depression and doubt, men could rise to such heights. Never once did they falter. Not an inch did they yield. No Christian martyrs ever bore themselves more nobly before the tribunal of Nero.

One old priest, with a fine, ascetic face, did, indeed, become confused under the fierce cross-examination of the prosecutor, and for some moments his mind seemed unable to function, but it was physical, not moral, failure. When he returned to the dock after a short adjournment of the court, I noticed that he sat between two strong and sunny spirits—a young priest and the former Archbishop Federoff, at once gentle and strong. At all subsequent sittings he was seen between these two.

When, on Palm Sunday, the old priest was asked what he had to say before sentence was passed, he spoke as firmly as the others.

At the beginning of the trial, Archbishop Zepalik looked feeble and worn, as well he might, for he is near 70, and he was brought every day from the filthy Butyrka Prison in a patrol wagon of the Cheka. But when he heard Krylenko demand the death penalty he seemed rejuvenated. His color rose, his eye brightened, his tall figure straightened, and, in his long black cassock fastened at the waist by a broad red sash, he looked what he was—a Prince of the Church, head of all Russian Catholics, from the Baltic to the Pacific, from the frozen sea to the frontiers of India.

On the day death sentence was passed on him, his face shone with pleasure. His gray hair was brushed carefully back, and he had been able, somehow or other, to procure a new skull cap and a sash of the brightest red. The journalists who reported the trial for the bolshevist papers alluded to this sash and this cap as symbols of the rank of Archbishop. None of them seemed aware, however, that the color of blood had been purposely chosen by so many early Christian Bishops who died as martyrs, and that election to the Episcopal chair was generally sentence of death.

When called upon to say his last words, the archbishop rose to his full height and delivered an address so touching and so simple that a profound hush, with something of awe in it, settled down upon that hostile audience or red soldiers, atheists, sneerers and demoralized students. So great was the effect on myself that I could not put pen to paper.

The few words of that speech from the dock which remain in my mind are but a faint reflec-

How a Young Clergyman Met the Thunders of the Bolshevik Judge, a Renegade Priest

"NOW you must choose once and for all," yelled a savage faced ex-priest on the scarlet bench. "Are you going to continue saying mass?"

It was a tense, dramatic moment. Each priest was questioned in turn. Each stood up and declared calmly and proudly that he would continue to say mass and teach children the catechism, no matter what the consequences to himself.

The judge questioned one young man who had been ordained in 1914 when 23 years old.

"Do you teach children their catechism?"

"Yes."

"Do you know that under Article 121 of the penal code it is a crime to teach children the catechism, and that religion must be taught to no one before he is 18 years old?"

"Yes, I know that."

"And will you continue to teach the catechism?"

"Yes, with God's help, I will. It is my duty to do so, no matter what the consequences may be. If a father asks me to teach his child the catechism, I cannot refuse."

Galkin, himself a renegade priest, scowled darkly. He had selected the youngest priest, thinking he would yield and abjure his faith but he found himself struggling against a rock.

"Rome teaches you this," yelled Galkin, "and Soviet Russia teaches the contrary. Which will you choose, Rome or Red Russia?"

In the deep silence that followed the voice of the young priest rang out like the voice of an early Christian in Flavian amphitheater:

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

"No Such Animal."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT passes my comprehension how people like the Rev. McGehee of St. Louis can insist that the klan is a law-abiding organization in the face of the staggering list of crimes committed by organized klansmen throughout the country. It is a worse case than that of the farmer who looked at the giraffe and said: "There ain't no such animal."

In less than three months the klan in the State of Oklahoma alone has committed more than a dozen offenses against order and peace. Men and women have been whipped by masked bands, kidnaped from their homes, tarred and feathered, and assaulted. The horrible murders of Mer Rouge need no recounting. In Arkansas dozens of negroes have been driven from their homes and from the State, forced to abandon property, and frequently to leave their families without farewells. The record of klan crime in Texas is quite as long.

If a minister of the gospel is on the side of murder, arson, abduction and assault, why doesn't he say so? If he favors an organization that works at night, why doesn't he admit it? Such a course would be far more honest and courageous than to join and encourage such a band, while denying from his pulpit that it commits any of the crimes which all the world knows it does commit.

COMMON HONESTY.

Old Age Pensions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE honorable Governor of Massachusetts has suggested to the Legislature that he be given authority to appoint an unpaid commission which will hold office 10 years, and that the commission be given $100,000 as an initial sum of a fund to be used for pensioning aged people. The Governor suggests that the public be asked to subscribe to the cause and that a general interest be stimulated in it.

No one will doubt the need of such a fund in every state in the Union, and Gov. Cox in causing Massachusetts to take the lead in such a movement will reflect tremendous credit upon his administration. It is true that we have old folks' homes, but not near enough for the proper accommodations of all the old people and many of them suffer and die for lack of sufficient attention.

Such a fund would stimulate a desire for longer life. Aside from the happiness which it would undoubtedly bring to many elderly people, it would certainly be of scientific value as it would probably furnish one of the main encouragements for the majority of old people to live, a feeling of independence. Many old people prefer death rather than be dependent on relatives or children who themselves are poor and not too disposed to their continuing on in the way. A small sum of money which they could call their own to be disposed of as they pleased would add the necessary spur for a new interest in life. Let Missouri be the second to give a thought to the aged.

Sailors Want Letters.

Russia's Policy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SOVIET law forbids the teaching of any religion to persons under 18 years of age, and confiscates all church property, including the sacred gold, silver and other precious metal altar vessels, vestments and treasures paid for by the believers in the various religions. The condemned priests admitted violation of these uncivilized laws, but denied under oath that they had conspired with the foreign enemies of Russia. Several of them were not natives or citizens of Russia and were, therefore, under the international law protection of the countries of which they were nationals. None of them had sworn to uphold the barbarous soviet laws, yet all were condemned by its uncivilized tribunals.

Soviet Russia has repudiated all her foreign debts, including $177,000,000 due us, after turning traitor herself to her allies at the critical period of the World War. A short time before, the soviets had overthrown Kerensky, who was upholding Russian honor and had been recognized by our Government. He was a revolutionist, not a czarist. The soviets advocate the destruction of all governments, including our own, confiscation and distribution of all property to their followers, according to the will of self-appointed leaders, and suppression of all religions.

They have agents here now for those purposes, who plot in secret. It is necessary for our Government to use detectives to secure evidence against them that will be sufficient to convict them in civilized, not soviet, courts. Recognition of soviet Russia is unthinkable.

JEFF MACKAY.

FORWARD, MISSOURI!

Speaking to the Missouri Association, which was organized Friday in Jefferson City to build up and advertise the State, Gov. Hyde declared that a great many Missourians do not know their own State and have only the most remote ideas of its possibilities. He urged the new association to acquaint Missourians of discerning age with their own State.

The statement is true and the advice excellent. Missourians who know Missouri, and realize the attractiveness of many portions of the State and the State's wonderful resources, are few, compared with the population. One of the reasons for the ignorance of many Missourians, particularly those in the larger cities, of the charms and resources of the State is the lack of good roads. Many attractive parts of the State are meagerly equipped with railroads.

When the present road program is well under way and after its completion not only will Missourians get better acquainted with the State, but hosts of tourists will visit the Ozarks, which compare favorably with the most picturesque and delightful sections of the United States.

Gov. Hyde did not overdraw the resources of Missouri in agriculture, minerals, manufacturing materials and water power. They are varied and rich and the possibilities of their development under favorable transportation conditions are wonderful.

Resources and attractions, however, are merely the raw materials of prosperity and growth. They must be utilized and in order to utilize them there must be convenient, economical means of transportation; railroads must be built and excellent roads constructed; there must be sound laws under which capital may be invested with safety and industry and commerce organized and conducted with assurance of fair treatment and profitable operation.

The Missouri Association has a fruitful field for effort. In organizing the State to promote the development of its resources and to make known its industrial and commercial possibilities and its attractions, it has started a movement of the greatest value and promise.

It has first to lay firm foundations for growth and prosperity by obtaining conditions which make for profitable activities and for immigration. Good roads are on the way and the work of completing the State system of highways must be pushed. Railroad extension and good railroad service must be encouraged. Legitimate business must be assured a fair field for development and profit. The school system must be brought to a high state of efficiency. Yappism and all its obstructive works must be laid on the shelf.

Missouri has been going forward, but there have been many bumps on the road of progress. There is plenty of work for the Missouri Association in clearing the road. It cannot be done by advertising alone. We must deliver the goods.

PROSTITUTING WORLD PEACE.

With his mind unalterably made up in advance Senator Hiram Johnson scours Europe not in search of the truth or of anything that might shake his original position but to find arguments to bolster it up. Truth, justice, world peace, are not the Senator's concern. His objective is politics. If, to serve the purposes of demagoguery, he can find arguments true or untrue, such as were used to defeat the League of Nations, truth, justice, world peace, may go hang.

Such is the high estate of conscience to which irreconcilable policy has soared. As to its logic, we may compare the present views of the two foremost irreconcilables in the campaign of 1920. To Senator Johnson a world court without compulsory jurisdiction is no court at all. But compulsory jurisdiction, he holds, would be dangerous to America. Therefore, no court. Senator Borah, on the contrary, holds not only that a noncompulsory court would be effective but that, if war were outlawed by agreement of the nations, the court would serve the whole purpose of an association of nations for peace.

The Californian's purpose is plain. It is not to promote the peace of mankind, to alleviate misery in Europe, to protect our foreign trade and defend America from dangerous political entanglements, but to save himself from the embarrassment of abandoning his ground and to afford him thunder for the advancement of presidential aspirations.

The unconscionable scramble to defeat the humanitarian efforts of the world and expose civilization to final annihilation through the infernal inventions of the laboratory is a natural sequence of the original diabolical enterprise which made a political issue out of so grave a subject as world peace.

AFTER THE OIL SWINDLERS.

The indictment returned by a Federal grand jury in New York against a Texas oil company, and 10 individuals officially associated with it, may be productive of good results. Whether it will or not depends upon the vigor and persistence of the prosecution and the determination of both the Federal and State governments to war upon organized swindling which may perhaps be invoked.

Oil and the swindler have mixed beautifully. Oil has been the swindler's big bonanza. This was inevitable. The sudden transition from poverty to wealth is a romantic commonplace in oil's annals. Such fabulous facts have furnished the peddlers of fiction with alluring texts. Roseate prospectuses have been compiled and golden opportunities for immediate affluence have been dangled before the public, largely in the form of advertisements and circular letters. According to the Postoffice Department, worthless oil schemes are now being promoted from Fort Worth with floods of "literature." Before Fort Worth, Oklahoma City was the base of the blue-sky promoter's operations. Tulsa, too, had its day as the "literary capital" of oil frauds. Other localities in the broad, meandering oil belt have at times had the same undesirable distinction when, by reason of a strike in the vicinity, the swindlers flocked thither and poured forth spidery yarns for the unwary flies.

The public has been robbed of unbelievable millions by those oil swindlers, whose easiest victim has been the farmer, with the city factory hand a close second. How fraud could be perpetrated on such a gigantic scale and so continuously is difficult to reconcile with the blue-sky legislation designed especially to prevent it. It would seem as if official tolerance or inaction were culpable. Possibly it is. It should be remembered, however, that the professional blue-sky promoter is an adroit, experienced swindler. He is familiar with the law. Despite the extravagance of his promises, his purported statements of fact are shrewdly guarded so as to keep within the letter of the law.

The difficulty of successful prosecution, however, is a poor excuse for the passive attitude of Federal and local governments. It is not necessary to convict a fraudulent promoter to clip his wings. Unsuccessful prosecution has a wholesome effect. To the swindler the mildest inquiry of the law is distasteful, often disastrous. Once let legal suspicion be directed to a blue-sky adventure and that particular jig is up. There may be no conviction, but if doubt is implanted in the public mind as to the merits of a blue-sky proposition or the character of its promoters, the swindlers have to go through the drudgery of discovering a new Eldorado, effecting a new organization and developing a new clientele.

Persistent prosecution of questionable oil enterprises that are financed by stock-selling campaigns even where the evidence of fraud is scarce and dubious, would make swindling more onerous and hazardous, would reduce the profits and would save the gullible public a good deal of money. But such treatment is at best an indifferent cure. Prevention should be sought. It might be found, perhaps, in exacting charter requirements and insistence that such requirements be met before certificates of incorporation are issued.

KLAN GETS OWN MEDICINE.

W. J. Simmons, Ku Klux Klan Emperor, charges that under the administration of Imperial Wizard Evans, paid spies have been maintained to watch klansmen and klan meetings; that these spies have been paid out of the klan's own funds, and that the system has developed into a huge scheme of blackmail.

The klan's specialty being spying on other people, is it any wonder that certain ungodly members should have conceived the idea of spying on other members and the organization itself, with the object of making money? When spies set out to watch spies, there is apt to be trouble. The klan seems to be getting a dose of its own medicine. But how was it that Evans, being a wizard, failed to see that Emperor Simmons was on to his little game?

For a good argument on why the present price of shoes is justified, consider the $25,000,000 stock dividend declared by the United Shoe Machinery Co.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
In Chicago,
Where the lake
Forever rolls,
People truly
Settle something
When they rally
To the polls,
Where the rest
Of us risk nothing
At this Democratic fount,
There they test
A hundred causes,
All abiding
By the count.

Take the recent Race for Mayor—
Just an omnibus
For things
As to which
The people differ,
Say from cabbages
To kings.
While the figure
Heads were Dever
And the others
Great and small,
These in truth
Were not the issues
At a voting
Place at all.

They were nothing
But the symbols
Of beliefs
As far apart
As extremes
In human vision
And the promptings
Of the heart.
In some cases,
More than likely,
Could we all
The truth discern,
Some of these Disputes were only Things of Neighborhood concern.

Thus it is
That while dissension
Keeps the rest
Of us distressed,
In Chicago
Every discord
For the moment
Is at rest.
Ku Klux
Is a settled issue,
Evolution's
Name is Mud,
And the whole
Superb adjustment
Did not cost
A drop of blood.

Have you in
Your heart been troubled
As to God
Knows what concerns?
You will find
The answer written
In Chicago's
Late returns.
Any fool interpretation
Very likely Hits the ball,
Showing how Elections truly
Might mean something

ANOTHER FOUNDATION.

It seems that we finally have something we have needed for a long time. It is a laboratory in which we can experiment with the science of human affairs. Mr. Wells says the absence of anything of this sort in our time will be the thing most wondered at by history, which will not fail to note the strides we made in everything else. That this thought is stirring in our minds is indicated by the news with respect to the new school of government at Washington University. But let us look at Yucatan. In Yucatan the whole science of human affairs has been undertaken. In order to begin at the bottom everything we have accepted has been cast out. There are no traditions. Nothing is taken from the past. Do you want to be married? You go around and get a marriage license. Do you want a divorce? You go back and turn in your marriage certificate. Everything is as simple as that in Yucatan, be it domestic, religious or economic. Yucatan is in a state of inquiry. She has outkansased Kansas. The bewhiskered Populist of 20 years ago is not a patchen to the sombreroed primitive of Yucatan. Kansas, in truth, was not the place for this. It belonged to tradition. We have seen how the past has claimed it, though for a while it looked to the future. Yucatan is the likelier place. It belongs only to itself. As an illustration, there is only one industry in Yucatan—growing sisal. The complex and sometimes invisible bonds between big business and tradition which hold in their tentacles a commonwealth like North Dakota do not exist in Yucatan. So nobody cares very much what she does, money being the only power there is and Wall street alone having authority. You can understand from this what the opportunity in Yucatan is. She is on but not of our earth. It has been thought that we could get rid of tradition and enjoy perfection only in the next life, but that was before we knew about Yucatan. Maybe perfection is possible here. We cannot know until the necessary experiments have been made.

That man, I think, has a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all the work that as a mechanism it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine with all its parts of equal strength and in smooth working order; ready like a steam engine to be turned to any kind of work and spin the gossamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness and to respect others as himself. Such an one and no other, I conceive, has had a liberal education; for he is, as completely as a man can be, in harmony with nature. He will make the best of her and she of him.—Thomas Huxley.

The MIRROR PUBLIC OPINION

SHAKSPEARE AND SCHOPENHAUER.

Dr. Kurt von Sonnenfeldt in the Vienna Freie Presse.

SOMEONE has said that if the earth should be hurled into the sun by a cosmic catastrophe and the only evidence that our planet had ever existed to survive should be, by some miracle, a copy of Goethe's Faust, the whole intellectual and spiritual evolution of mankind could be reconstructed from this single book. . . . Goethe's aspiring Gothic and pillared Renaissance art affords a background for an untold wealth of life, but not for every possible manifestation of our multiform and infinite world. Indeed, it should be better justified in saying—though not here it would be an exaggeration—that, were Shakspeare's dramas and Schopenhauer's philosophy the only monuments of the human mind rescued from a consumed and vanished world, they would suffice to answer the question: What was Man? For there is no human passion, no potentiality of the human soul, that is not present in living flesh and blood, in all its tragedy and all its humor, by Shakspeare, and that has not been interrogated as to its contribution to the meaning of life by Schopenhauer. All our progress in the microscopy of the soul only confirms more fully Shakspeare's and Schopenhauer's unerring insight. What are love, hatred, jealousy, remorse, recklessness, mortal terror, vengeance, ambition? What is a King, a commander, a priest, a hero, a beggar, a murderer, a liar, a fool, a coward, a mother, a strumpet? Shakspeare portrays and Schopenhauer explains this to us.

POST-WAR FANATICISM.

From the New York World.

THE Lusk laws, says the Tribune, "were the product of a post-war fanaticism that had no justification in fact and that violated every principle of American fair play and free speech." The Tribune's confession will do good to the Tribune's soul, for of the post-war fanatics surely the Tribune was the leader. None worked harder than our esteemed neighbor to stir up that fanaticism which had no justification in fact. None did more zealously to foment suspicion against and impugn the loyalty of hosts of its fellow-citizens.

Therefore, with that joy with which the penitent should be greeted, we welcome back the Tribune to America and the Bill of Rights.

WOMAN IN THE BIBLE.

Lucie A. Zimmern in Century Magazine.

IN some very important respects the spirit and teachings of the Christian church were less favorable to women than the classical influences which preceded them. It is one of the great historical misfortunes of the sex that the first great Christian organizer happened to be a misogynist. St. Paul is the fountainhead—let us be frank and say the muddy fountainhead—of the traditional teaching of the Christian church about the impurity of the body, the glory of celibacy, the inferiority of women, and the acquiescence in marriage as a physical safety valve. In these days, when we are trying to reassess the value of our traditional Christianity and to believe that it is divine and enduring in it to the discoveries and inquiries of modern science, it is well for us to recognize frankly the immeasurable damage done by Paul not only to the personality of women but to the cause of human decency. To turn away from the discussions and investigations of modern doctors and psychologists to the famous chapter on marriage in the seventh chapter of the first Corinthians is like passing from civilization to pre-civilization. As a human document as a study in sex psychology, it is full of interest; but to realize that these harsh, bitter legalisms, these aggressively masculine phrases were accepted generally by professing Christians for many centuries is to stand appalled at the vagaries of progress." For had it not been for Paul and his embitterment, the truer teaching of the Gospels might have won through; and how great and precious would have been the change!

Trial of Accused Palace Like Scen

tion of what he really said. The archbishop denied, as did all those who spoke after him, that he had belonged to any political organization nor had engaged in any counter-revolutionary intrigues. He had, on the contrary, confined himself to teaching his people the truths of their holy religion, these same truths which the church had taught for nearly 2000 years.

The church had never taught the people to do wrong, he said, and he had never taught wrongdoing. He had never taught anything that did not tend to good morals and good citizenship. It had been his duty as head of the Catholic Church in Russia to set a good example to the priests under him, and to the flock entrusted to his care.

"Today," concluded the archbishop, "I stand before a temporal judge; tomorrow maybe I shall stand before an eternal judge, and I hope the temporal judge may be just to me and the eternal judge merciful."

Next after the archbishop spoke Father Maletzki, a kindly old man near 70, but agile and upright of figure as a man of 50. His commanding appearance, stern countenance and bushy eyebrows made him look severe, but as soon as he opened his mouth early in the trial everyone knew he was a gentle type. He had a magnificent voice and perfect articulation, so it was a pleasure to hear him. Had the hall been twice as large as it was he would have been heard distinctly at the further end—not a word would have been lost.

Father Maletzki began by telling, with simplicity and candor, of simple incidents of his boyhood. He said he was of a noble family—a bold thing to say to an audience holding the belief that everybody not belonging to the working class is a parasite and a tyrant. His father, he said, had been a very wealthy man who kept many servants, but he was very kind and just master and a good Christian. Once when his son was little the boy had, in a moment of irritation, called the doorkeeper a fool. The father made the lad kneel down to kiss the man's hand and beg his forgiveness. This was to show the boy that all men were equal before God, and the lesson was never forgotten.

Young Maltezki afterward became a priest, and in an orphanage which he founded in Petrograd he placed many starving boys whom he picked up in the street. He had never engaged in political plots of any kind, but had been prosecuted under the Czar because he worked for his people and the poor.

Vicar General Butchkavitch as the Archbishop's right hand man, necessarily had to make a different kind of a speech, for he had to deal with the business side of the diocese, a diocese covering all Russia and he also was accused of originating a plot. Therefore, he had to enter into many details to confute the charges levelled at him and his colleagues; and he did confute the charges completely. During his speech, the speech of a man about to be condemned to death, the prosecutor interrupted him and jeered in his face.

Had Never Conspired Against Soviets.

Father Butchkavitch showed he had never conspired with Poland against the Soviet Government. If he had tried to get money from Poland for his church, which was burdened with debt, where was the crime in that. He was a Polish citizen and naturally would turn for financial help to his own country. He might also have scoffed at the charge of conspiring with a foreign power which was based by the prosecutor upon the fact that he had several times, several years ago, sent letters to Poland otherwise than through the post.

"I have not sent letters through the Russian post recently and not a single foreign correspondent in Moscow has; and two years ago the Bolshevist postoffice was even worse than it is now."

"Why did not the Archbishop send his letters through the Foreign Office?" roared Krylenko. The Archbishop's neglect to do so was actually made one of the most serious charges against him. Father Butchkavitch spoke of the fears levelled at him on account of the large sums of money that passed through his hands; but one must remember, the diocese embraced all Russia. He had, as a matter of fact, spent all his own money in building several primary schools, a technical school and a professional school for Catholics. The Prosecutor could easily ascertain these facts for himself.

His church in Petrograd was burdened with enormous debts; he was a Polish citizen. What wonder, therefore that he should appeal for money to his friends in Poland? He was accused of conspiracy on the strength of letters found lying unconcealed on his desk, but had he been engaged in a conspiracy he would have concealed them. Had his activities been compromising some evidence of a conspiracy should be produced. The minutes of vestry meetings are not evidence of a conspiracy.

A great speech was made by Edward Yanevitch, the young priest already described. His bright eyes seemed fixed. He described how as a student he heard in Petrograd the edicts announcing the fall of Czardom. He had rejoiced, for Czardom had been the enemy of Catholicism in Russia. Young as he was he knew of the persecution of friends who had been sent by hundreds to prison and Siberia because of their faith. But he saw bolshevism as a worse enemy than Czardom.

"It realized none of its expectations; it gave none of the liberty it promised. The people of Petrograd are now weeping and miserable. Who were the poor Catholics of

The Prosecutor could easily ascertain these facts for himself.

His church in Petrograd was burdened with enormous debts; he was a Polish citizen. What wonder, therefore that he should appeal for money to his friends in Poland? He was accused of conspiracy on the strength of letters found lying unconcealed on his desk, but had he been engaged in a conspiracy he would have concealed them. Had such activities been compromising evidence of a conspiracy would be produced. The minutes of factory meetings are not evidence of conspiracy.

A great speech was made by Edward Yanevitch, the young priest already described. His bright eyes seemed fixed. He described how as a student he heard in Petrograd the news announcing the fall of Czardom. He had rejoiced, for Czardom had been the enemy of Catholicism in Russia. Young as he was he knew of the persecution of friends who had been sent by hundreds to prison in Siberia because of their faith. He saw bolshevism as a worse thing than Czardom.

He realized none of its expectations; it gave none of the liberty it promised. The people of Petrograd were weeping and miserable. Everywhere the poor Catholics of Petrograd to do if their priests did not return to them. This naive question excited bitter mirth among the hardened communists who filled the court and the Judge asked, not unkindly, that he might leave the question of Petrograd alone and confine himself to the charges against him personally.

The prisoner apologized for being carried away, but said he thought he would be allowed to say everything, as these were the last words he would say. He ended with Christ's words: "Not my will, but Thine, be done."

Bolshevik Women Weep.

There was a profound sensation, and some minutes of silence. I noticed tears in the eyes of even the bolshevist women who had crowded into the court, owing to the fact there was no tragedy in the theaters that night to compare with the thrill of emotion in the real tragedy being enacted at the trial.

Ex-Archbishop Federoff said he was in the same position as the Archbishop, being the head of the whole United Church of Russia, with priests under him and many of the faithful following his rite. He tried to argue with the Judge on the injustice of the law preventing religious teaching to minors, but the Judge stopped him, sternly, saying: "It is the law of the Republic. It is yours not to comment on it; you must obey it."

The younger clergymen in the dock were perhaps too aggressive, if anything. They were courting martyrdom, now that Holy Week had come. But the old Archbishop, while equally firm, was suave: "Yes, our religion teaches us to pray for our enemies," he says in answer to a question put by Krylenko.

The young priest called Eismont was particularly aggressive. "You do not consider yourself bound to obey the orders of the soviet government?" Krylenko said, meaning the orders regarding Catholic churches. "I do not," replied Eismont.

After his church had been closed by the soviet authorities this young priest continued to say mass to a congregation of 200 or more in a deserted orphanage underneath his private rooms. He calmly admitted this crime against the bolshevist law, as if he were proud of it.

Questioned about the chalices and other sacred vessels he used in these services, he said they were his private property. All the other altar vessels had been seized by the bolsheviki.

Further questioning brought the calm admission that in defiance of the soviet law that religion must be taught to nobody under 18 years of age, Eismont had made a practice of collecting children in the cold and deserted orphanage and had spoken to them about God.

Similar testimony was given by two other young priests, Fathers Quonvitch and Hodnovitch of the churches of St. Stanislaus and St. Catherine. At St. Stanislaus' the curate had told the Bolshevist commissar who had come to take an inventory: "Clear out of this at once!"

"Citizen Hodnovitch," roared Krylenko, "do you not consider yourself bound to obey the orders of the Soviet Government?"

"I am not only a citizen," said the young clergyman, "but also a Roman Catholic priest." Father Hodnovitch also continued to celebrate mass after his church had been closed by a commissar, who had warned him not to celebrate public worship until further orders.

About 150 persons were present every time he said mass. And he also had taught children the catechism. He admitted both facts proudly.

The former Archbishop Federoff and all the other priests made similar admissions; they had all said mass and collected Christian children together to teach them about God, despite the fact that the Soviet Government had strictly forbidden it.

Official Tells of Closing Chapel.

Sapunoff, a Bolshevist official serving in Basiland, Petrograd testified to the trouble he had with a little Catholic chapel there. The first time he went to close the place the attitude of the crowd was so threatening he judged it prudent to retire. The next time he did the job, but the crowd insulted him, crying, "This is what the Communists call liberty of conscience!"

The proceeding ended amid the most dramatic circumstances. A witness, Smirnoff, had testified that the priests had celebrated mass after he had cleared their churches and notified them they must not carry on public worship until they had received permission from the Soviet Government. Galkin, the presiding judge, asked the prisoners if this was so, and they admitted it was.

"Now you must choose once and for all," yelled a savage faced ex-priest on the scarlet bench. "Are you going to continue saying mass?"

It was a tense, dramatic moment. Each priest was questioned in turn. Each stood up and declared calmly, firmly and proudly that he would continue to say mass and teach children the catechism, no matter what the consequences to himself.

The judge questioned one young man who had been ordained in 1914 when 23 years old. "Do you teach children their catechism?"

Yes."

"Do you know that under Article 121 of the penal code it is a crime to teach children the catechism, and that religion must be taught to no one before he is 18 years old?"

"Yes, I know that."

"And will you continue to teach the catechism?"

"Yes, with God's help, I will. It is my duty to do so, no matter what the consequences may be. If a father asks me to teach his child the catechism I cannot refuse."

Galkin, himself a renegade priest, scowled darkly. He had selected the youngest priest, thinking he would yield and abjure his faith, but he found himself struggling against a rock.

"Rome teaches you this," yelled Galkin, "and Soviet Russia teaches the contrary. Which will you choose —Rome or Red Russia?"

In the deep silence that followed the voice of the young priest rang out like the voice of an early Christian in the Flavian amphitheater:

"Rome," he said, with a smile.

And the electric light overhead shone upon a face that might have been the model for the great mediæval picture of St. Sebastian in the National Gallery in London.

The death sentence on the Archbishop and the Vicar-General were pronounced at midnight of Palm Sunday. The Archbishop and Butchkavitch looked as men who had obtained their lifelong heart's desire. The Archbishop embraced his aged, white-bearded lawyer, who, though of the Orthodox Church and not a Catholic, broke down and wept bitterly. Then the Archbishop embraced all the clergy and all were removed, under a heavily armed escort of Reds.

Meanwhile there was frightful scene in court, when many Polish women fainted, others had hysterics and, screaming, fell to the floor, to be roughly dragged out by Red soldiers. The aged man-servant of the Archbishop, a Pole and typical old soldier with white mustaches, struggled desperately to the dock to bid farewell to his master, but he was overpowered and thrown out by the Reds, who, finally, panic-stricken by a fear of rescue, cleared the court at the point of the bayonet.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS POLICY OF U. S. HAS PARALYZED LEAGUE

th, even with an amended and expurgated constitution, the situation would have been transformed. America and Britain, acting in concert, with an openly sympathetic Italy and a secretly assenting Belgium, would have brought such pressure to bear on France as to make it inevitable that the League should act. The success of the League depends upon the readiness of nations, great and small, to discuss all their difference at the council table. But no great Power has so far permitted an international question to be submitted to the League for decision.

It has been allowed to adjudicate upon the destiny of the Analand Islands, over the fate of which Sweden and Finland had a controversy. It has taken cognizance of disputes between Poland and Lithuania about Vilna, although even here its decision has been ignored by the parties interested.

But the acute and interesting quarrel, which has broken out between France and Germany over the question of reparations, the former resolutely declines to submit to consideration by the league. The treaty of Versailles is so wide in its application and so comprehensive and far-reaching in its character that it touches international interests almost at every point. So that French refusal to agree to reference of all the problems in which they are concerned, which may arise out of this treaty, has had the effect of hobbling the league. As long as that attitude is maintained the league is impotent to discharge its main function of restoring and keeping peace.

Danger of New War.

The dispute over reparations clouds the sky today and until it is finally settled it will cause great atmospheric disturbances for generations. It is not impossible that it may end in the most destructive conflict that ever broke over the earth. It is churning up deadly passions. If ever there were an occasion which called for intervention of an organization set up for the express purpose of finding peaceable solutions for trouble-charged international feuds, surely this is preeminently such a case.

Not only do the French Government decline to entertain the idea of putting the covenant, which constitutes the first and foremost part of the treaty of Versailles, into operation, they have gone so far as to intimate that they will treat any proposal of the kind as an unfriendly act.

The constitution of the League stipulates that it will be the friendly duty of any Power to move that any international dispute which threatens peace shall be referred to the League. Nevertheless, one leading signatory rules out of the covenant all questions which vitally affect its own interests. This is the Power which has invaded the territory of another because the latter has failed to carry out one of the provisions of the same treaty. This emphatic repudiation of its solemn contract by one of its promoters has been acquiesced in by all the other signatories. Repudiation and acquiescence complete the electrocuting circuit.

This limitation of the activities of the League is the gravest check which has been encountered and which could not have accured had America, with or without Article X, been an active member of this body. Its great authority, added to that of Britain and Italy, would have made pressure irresistable. Its presence in the council would have helped materially to give such confidence in the stability and impartiality of the League that Germany would have accepted the conclusions come to without demur and acted on them without chicane.

An actual settlement of the reparations problem by the league would have established its authority throughout the world. Germany, many, Russia and Turkey, which now treat its deliberations with distrust and dislike, tinctured with contempt, would be forced to respect its counsels. The covenant would thus become a charter—respected, feared, honored and obeyed by all. There would still be injustice, but redress would be sought and fought for in the halls of the league. There would still be oppression, but freedom would be wrung from the clauses of the covenant. Argument, debate and intercession would be recognized substitutes for shot, shell and sword. Wars would cease unto the ends of the earth and the reign of law would be supreme.

Source of League's Power.

Wherein lies the real power of the league, or, to be more accurate, its possibility of power? It brings together the leading citizens of most of the civilized states of the world to discuss all questions affecting or likely to affect peace and concord among nations. The men assembled at Geneva do not come there of their own initiative, nor do they merely represent propagandist societies engaged in preaching the gospel of peace. They are chosen emissaries of their respective Governments. They are authorized spokesmen of these Governments. When in doubt they refer to their Governments and receive their instructions, and proceedings are reported direct to the Governments. They meet often and early and they debate their problems with complete candor as well as courtesy.

It is in itself a good thing to accustom nations to discuss their difficulties face to face in a public assembly where reasons have to be sought and given for their attitude which will persuade and satisfy neutral minds of its justice and fairness. It is a practice to be cultivated. It is the practice that ended in eliminating the arbitrament of the sword in the internal affairs of nations. It is only thus that international disputes will gradually drift into the debating chamber instead of to the battlefield for settlement.

Wars are promoted by motives which the statesmen responsible for them dare not publicly avow. A public discussion would drag these motives in their nudity into the open, where they would die of exposure to the withering contempt of humanity. The League, by developing the habit amongst nations of debating their difference in the presence of the world, and of courting the judgment of the world upon the merits of their case, is gradually edging out war as a settler of quarrels. That is the greatest service it can render mankind.

Will it be allowed to render that service? If not, then it will perish like many another laudable experiment attempted by mankind in the effort to save itself. But if it dies, hope of establishing peace on earth will be buried in the same tomb.

LLOYD GEORGE.

TUTANKHAMEN LOST MUCH SLEEP

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 7.—A piece of papyrus just translated by the British Museum shows that King Tutankhamen suffered from insomnia. Responsibility for the Pharaoh's ailment seems to have rested with certain hippopati, which made so much noise as they wallowed in the sacred lakes of Thebes that he found sleep impossible.

The papyrus tells of a quarrel the ancient monarch had with the owner of the beasts over whether the King's slumber should be sacrificed to their physical comfort. How the dispute was settled is not disclosed.

TWO MEN PERSIST IN CONFESSION OF KROGER ROBBERIES

Richard J. Hurley and Edward Richards Questioned by Sidener, Who Is Suspicious of Stories.

MADE MISTAKE IN IDENTIFICATION

Pointed Out Newspaper Reporter in Courtroom as Son of Grocer Who Was Held Up.

Richard J. Hurley and Edward Richards, under sentence of 15 years for robbing three Kroger stores, who have aroused suspicion by their readiness to take the blame for other robberies, were questioned yesterday by Circuit Attorney Sidener, who thinks they are "professional confessors."

They testified Thursday for Charles J. O'Keefe and Thomas Donovan, charged with holding up the grocery of Henry Bruening at 4200W Kossuth avenue, stating they committed the robbery, but Richards, when called upon to identify Bruening's son, Oliver, pointed out a newspaper reporter.

The two were first questioned together. They denied that they were perjuring themselves for O'Keefe and Donovan. The attorneys for the other two came to them, they said, and they talked it over and concluded that they had committed the Bruening robbery and consented to testify.

"Difficult to Remember Faces."

They said they had robbed so many places that it was difficult to remember the faces of all their victims. Some of the robberies, they said, were committed in a spirit of adventure and sometimes they were intoxicated. It was easy, though, to identify Kroger men because they all looked "countrified."

A newspaper reporter entered the room and they were asked if they could identify him. One of them said he looked like a "cutor." Asked what a "cutor" was, he said that was jail slang for prosecutor.

Circuit Attorney Sidener told them he thought they were perjuring themselves in the belief that they could free their friends without incurring any additional penalty themselves and warned them that if they kept it up he would "load them up" with perjury indictments that would prolong their stay in prison.

Say They Had Lookout.

They said there was a third man who acted as lookout for them, but refused to tell his name because they were not "rats" or "snitchers."

The two finally became surly and refused to answer more questions. When Hurley was pressed he said to Sidener: "You are paid to find out."

They were then separated and questioned separately. Richards said he might have remarked to a deputy, after identifying the reporter Thursday, that he had "boobed" the identification, but he would not admit it. He said he and Hurley had robbed a dry goods store on Farrar street, of which two others are accused. Hurley, questioned about this, said he did not remember.

LOCAL ENTRIES PREFERRED AT BARRACKS HORSE SHOW

Outsiders Will Not Be Refused, but Committee Would Give St. Louisans More Opportunity.

Efforts are being made to render the second annual Military and Civilian Horse Show, to be held at Jefferson Barracks May 11, 12 and 13, as much a local affair as possible. Entries from outside this district will not be refused, but the committee in charge feels that St. Louis horse fanciers should have a greater opportunity of winning prizes. There will be money and ribbon prizes, as last year, and in addition the committee is trying to get some silver trophy cups.

Maj. Dean Halford of the barracks is in charge of the arrangements, officer-members of his committee being Captains E. N. Frakes and L. A. Daugherty and Lieutenants E. P. Earle, William H. Dean and J. E. Rees. Lieut. Earle is secretary, and business concerning the show should be transacted with him. The following members of the St. Louis Riding Club have been appointed to co-operate in the arrangements: August A. Busch Jr., George W. Simmons, Thomas Garland, E. L. Musick and Mahlon Wallace Jr.

The War Department sponsors military-civilian horse shows as a stimulus to the improvement of thoroughbred equine strains, as a fundamental factor in the national defense program. Crowds attended the first show here last year.

Pine Street "Y" Celebration.

The fifth anniversary of the Pine Street Department of the Young Men's Christian Association will be observed at 4 p. m. today. Byron Moser, president of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A., will preside. The anniversary address will be delivered by the Rev. Emory B. Smith of Howard University, Washington, D. C. Other speakers will be the Rev. H. W. Evans, Lane Tabernacle Church; Gordon Simpson, secretary of the Urban League; C. H. Brown, principal Dumas School; George B. Jones, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney; Philemon Bevis, general secretary Y. M. C. A., and Elwood Street, director of the Community Council.

Bystander Dies of Hurts in Smash.

A bystander caught beneath one of two trucks which collided at Twenty-second and Morgan streets, March 29, William Massingale, 48 years old, negro laborer, died of his injuries Friday night at City Hospital No. 2. The drivers of the trucks Isadore Katz, 19, of 2604 Thomas street, and Berlin St. John, 18, a negro, of 3328 Morgan street, were arrested.

of Interest to

MILLIONS of FAMILIES

"I will build a car for the multitude"

Said Henry Ford in 1903—Read how the fulfillment of that prophecy is now made possible through the

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

For many years it has been Henry Ford's personal ambition to make the Ford the universal family car — to put it within the reach of the millions of people who have never been privileged to enjoy the benefits of motor car ownership.

During the past fifteen years over 7,500,000 Ford cars have been placed in the hands of retail customers—more than a million and a half of them within the past twelve months—and yet there are still millions of families who are hopefully looking forward to the day when they can own a Ford.

And now the way is open.

Under the terms of this plan you can select your Ford Car, set aside a small amount each week and you will be surprised how soon you will own it. In the meantime your money will be safely deposited to your credit in one of the local banks where it will draw interest.

Think it over. Five dollars will start an account. The whole family can participate in it — father, mother, brothers and sisters each doing a little.

Why not start today. Stop in and talk it over with your local Ford dealer. He will be glad to fully explain the details of the plan and help you to get started toward the ownership of a Ford car.

MESSENGERS OF THIS BANK CARRY NO MONEY NOW

North St. Louis Savings Trust Company Gives Notice to Bandits.

Bandits: Take notice.

You are hereby informed, on authority of counsel for the North St. Louis Savings Trust Co., Grand boulevard and Hebert street, that from now on you will be wasting your time in holding up messengers of that financial institution.

After two robberies of messengers of this trust company, a new messenger, who was allowed to carry only comparatively small sums of money, was employed. He is William Peper of 1310 North Market street, who was assaulted in front of the bank March 9 by two robbers, who made away with his bank satchel, containing $360, in an automobile driven by a third man. Since then Peper has carried nothing except valueless papers, the trust company has announced.

He was called before the directors at their last meeting and complimented for his faithfulness and his effort to save the money by firing four shots at the fleeing robbers. The company gave him a "substantial" sum of money and insurance companies gave him a gold medal for his bravery.

The sum taken in the first robbery of a North St. Louis Savings Trust Co. messenger, two years ago, was $150; $14,000 was taken in a "framed" robbery five months later.

RHINOCEROS, GIFT TO ZOO, SOON TO ARRIVE

Dieckman Says Animal Will Be Christened—To Live Next Door to Elephant.

Big Doings are on at the Zoo these days in preparation for the usual spring throngs which pleasant weather brings and in getting quarters for the new rhinoceros in readiness.

For "it" will arrive in a few days now, and take up its abode in the elephant house, living next door to "Jim," the big elephant. The hippotamus will be a neighbor on the other side. George E. Dieckman, president of the Zoological Society, isn't certain whether "it" is to be a male or female, he said yesterday.

"I am pretty certain it is to be a male," he stated. "At any rate, we are to get the larger of two which arrived in Boston Friday."

An Associated Press report yesterday from Boston told of the arrival of the two "rhinos," but said they were both females, "Marie" and "Josephine," the former a 3-year-old weighing 1200 pounds, to go to St. Louis. "We get a 4-year-old, 1500-pound animal," Dieckman said. "It may be named Josephine, but I thought it was a male."

The "rhina," a $10,000 imported beast of the Hagenbecks, is the gift of the Cupples Company. It is described as being five feet six inches tall at the shoulder, 10 feet six inches long, and with a single horn at the end of the head 12 inches long.

It is of the Indian species, coming from the mountainous section of India, and is said to be one of four allowed to be taken out each year. It has the thick armored hide which marks it from the less ferocious African species more frequently captured.

"This is a wonderful gift, and a feather in our cap," Dieckman added. "We will have a christening when it arrives in a week or so. The donors may name it anything they wish."

ST. LOUIS MAN CHARGED WITH LIBELING NEW JERSEY OFFICIAL

Justin W. Dedge Arrested at Request of Chief of Detectives at Mount Holly, N. J.

Justin W. Dedge, 39 years old, of 43 Lindell boulevard, a traveling auditor for the Globe Indemnity Co., was arrested Friday night at the request of the Chief of Detectives at Mount Holly, N. J., who said Dedge was wanted there under an indictment charging him with criminal libel against Attorney-General Thomas F. McCran, of New Jersey.

A copy of the indictment sent here contains the charge that Dedge libeled the Attorney-General of New Jersey in a letter written to a newspaper, criticizing acts of officials in the trial of a man accused of the murder of Janet Lawrence a child who had been abducted and whose mutilated body was found Oct. 6, 1921, near Madison, N. J.

Dedge, a former operative for a national detective agency, said he would fight extradition. He was released on $1000 bond, returnable April 14.

'FIRST ARREST IN SALOON SINCE CIVIL WAR,' IS LENIENCY PLEA

"Best Swimmers Sometimes Drown," Comments Judge Faris, Fining Owner.

Emil Nieman, proprietor of a saloon on Broadway between Washington and Lucas avenues, and his bartender, Fred Leopold, pleaded guilty before Judge Faris yesterday on a charge of having liquor in their possession.

Their counsel, asking leniency, declared that Nieman's father and Nieman after him had operated the saloon since the Civil War, and that in the whole period, until the raid by prohibition officers, there had never been an arrest there, or a charge of so much as a misdemeanor on the premises.

Judge Faris said he would take the record under consideration, but added that "the best swimmers sometimes drown." He fined Nieman $290 and Leopold $140. They paid.

Cotton Also Moves Over Irregular Course — Appreciable Ease in Call Money Rate — Sterling Change Moderate.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"With the industrial revival still forging ahead, the past week has furnished an interesting test of the speculative position. Taking advantage of the fact that Monday was a quasi holiday and of the public hesitation induced by recent reactions and by uncertainties regarding Federal Reserve policy, bear traders made an aggressive attack on prices in the two chief speculative markets; that is, stocks and cotton. Temporarily their efforts were successful, fair sized reductions being forced. When selling pressure was relaxed, however, the rallies were distinctly brisk. Cotton recovered 1½ cent without much difficulty and stocks came back well on a comparatively small turnover. It would appear, therefore, that the speculative position is reasonably healthy, that stocks are well held and that over-extension is not a factor in the situation.

Ease in Money.

"An appreciable ease in money added to the discomfiture of the bears. It would appear that the situation existing during the latter part of March was slightly abnormal. The end of that month naturally brings extra demands for accommodation. In addition, it must be remembered that the March 15 tax collections proved considerably larger than had been anticipated. The effect was to put the Treasury in the possession of extra funds which, when deposited with the Federal Reserve banks, were withdrawn from the market. Such balances subsequently are drawn down in the natural course of events. All signs, meanwhile, point to an extraordinarily high rate of industrial production, big iron output is breaking all records, as is that of automobiles. Textile factories are running full and railroads traffic is wholly extraordinary for the reason.

"With production so close to capacity, the question of the proper Federal Reserve policy will not down. It must be admitted that our reserve banking power as represented by the Federal Reserve system is now wholly disproportionate to our needs; that is, to our productive capacity. This is due to the extraordinary gold imports of the past two years and to the unusual supplies of funds in the hands of industrial companies and private banks.

Sterling Reaction.

"Sterling's moderate reaction is not surprising, and past performances indicate that it will be moderate. Part of the decline probably is due to British buying of dollar securities and part to the fact that Americans who have taken profits in British securities have been bringing their funds home. There may also have been some relaxation in American purchases of British commodities, such as rubber and the possible factor is the talk of labor disturbance in England. It is to be noted, however, that sterling is a comparatively stable exchange and that reactions in it bring their natural correctives. Meanwhile, the showing of the British Government's finances is excellent and British foreign trade probably is getting better rather than worse."

"With many traders absent over the week-end stocks were dull and moved with a narrow range. Trading was, in fact, scarcely active enough for any definite trend to be distinguished. In general rails and equipments maintained their firmness of the previous day, while some selling in parts of the industrial list, particularly among the oils, was apparent. The market absorbed offerings well, however, and closing prices were close to the previous day's level. Bonds held firm in moderate trading.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Foreign exchange was quiet and steady. The usual week-end lack of demand was apparent and changes in rates, although fractionally lower for sterling and the currencies of the allied Governments, were without special significance. Sterling is selling at $4.66 was ¼ lower, while French francs, 6.60½ cents, were within ½ a point of yesterday's closing quotation. Italian lire lost 1⅛ points at 4.95⅛ cents which is practically the point from which last week's rise srted. Other European rates were mostly firm.

"Interest in commodity markets was centered in grain. Early demand for both wheat and corn futures carried prices to new high points for the season. This buying was predicated on the belief that the Government crop report, to be published on Monday afternoon, will be bullish. July wheat opened ¾ higher at $1.18⅛ and within a short time touched $1.19¾, and then receded slightly. Corn followed wheat the July future getting close to 80 cents. Cotton was quiet and featureless with prices firm. May contracts at a late price of 29.75 cents showing a gain of 22 points.

"Another small decrease in surplus reserve is shown by the weekly statement of the Clearing House. Aggregate reserve totaled $503,000,000. Heavy declines in both loans and demand deposits are also reported, the former falling off nearly $80,000,000, and the latter $56,000,000 which is practically the reverse of the movement of these items in the previous week. Time deposits rose slightly while Government deposits fell off $2,000,000, the total now standing at $126,126,000.

HIGHER RANGE TO NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 7.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet, but made a generally steady showing today. Probably the bulk of the trading represented the evening up of accounts for over the week-end, but on the whole, the short interest seemed a little anxious, owing to prospects for a resumption of unsettled weather in the Southwest. As a result, July contracts sold up to 28.95c, or 27 points net higher, and closed at 28.88c on the general market closing steady at advances of 6 to 24 points.

The market opened irregular at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 1 point on near months relatively firm on a little easing by May realizing. This demand was readily supplied and May eased back to Friday's closing quotation right after the call, the market stiffened up after the publication of the official forecasts for showers or unsettled weather and lower temperatures in the Southwest, but there was not active or general, but offerings were light, and May sellers advanced 75@80 points per bale during the middle of the morning, when the general list was 18 to 25 points net higher. There was little change around these figures by swallowing and the close was several points off from the best, with more active months showing a considerable complaint of delayed farm work appeared to be making a little more impression on the market, judging from comments around the ring, and local brokers said that expected the trade would watch developments very closely from now on. Possibly the mid-morning advance was also affected by the Government crop meteorologist at the Louisiana station expected a definite, though not acute shortage of fall grain around when the season for cotton dusting begins. Week-end reviews of the domestic goods market were about in line with recent reports. Sales to Fall River for the week-end were estimated at only 20,000 pieces, but there were reports of a continued free distribution of goods by converter and that mill production continues above the average. Liverpool was a moderate buyer on the market here during the early trading, while the South was an equally moderate seller and the greater net result of the business was believed to be for local or Wall Street account.

Hester in New Orleans this week issued figures of fertilizers, placing sales during March at 767,020 tons in eight cotton states, against 811,600 tons during the same month last year, bringing total sales for eight months of the season in eight states up to 3,365,210 tons, against 3,365,210 during the same period last year.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Trading on the Stock Exchange today was quiet and resulted in only slight price changes. Realizing sales were going in some directions at the same time that pools were busying themselves with a dozen or so special issues. The result was a mixture of small gains and losses without any general tendency one way or the other. Such leaders as U. S. Steel common, Baldwin Loco and Studebaker were as near stationary as such speculative issues can ever be.

Some of the rails did better, gaining a half point or so. This, however, was viewed in one quarter as fair recognition of the publicity given to the preparations for a record breaking traffic volume in months to come.

Stock of the shipping companies were rather weak.

The market closed irregular, but in the main steady with net advances and declines about evenly divided.

The Bond Market.

The feature of today's short and comparatively dull session in bonds was the decline in Libertys which carried them down to a point where all yesterday's gains were lost.

U. S. Government bonds closed strong Firday, after having lagged behind the general market all the week. Today's quotations seemed to show that the price had become high enough to induce further liquidation on the part of large holders.

Outside of Libertys the general bond market held fairly firm. Price changes were not large and there was no great activity. Atchison general 4s and Atchison adjustments improved fractionally. Speculation centered around the new Missouri-Kansas-Texas adjustments. Here trading was on a large scale.

Foreign bonds continued steady, with City of Greater Prague 7½s gaining.

The weekly statement of the 777 member banks of the Federal Reserve system showed a gain in commercial loans of about $26,000,000, while the loss in investments of about $30,000,000 was confined entirely to United States securities.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today says:

"The foreign exchange market showed a heavy tone during the greater part of the past week, in spite of the display of strength in French exchange both in the early part of the week and in the latter dealings. Sterling was in fair supply, selling at one time at 4.66¾, a new low since it was established at its high of the year at $4.72. The supply which was continuous and at times heavy was attributed in London to sales of British securities and a transfer of the funds to New York, but bankers here insisted that the declines which put the close about 5c to 10c under the finish of the preceding week, this principally on the liquidation of the January and February sold weight bags. There has been a most unsatisfactory trade in the market throughout the week. Killing demand for the premature stock is rather limited and while there is a fair supply of the choice it is not sufficient in volume to absorb the rains freely. Big market from day to day runs from 6 to 10 cents lower, and closes with the close seeing prices all the way from steady to 25c lower as compared with the finish of the preceding week. May, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana points have been getting fair supplies of good stock, but the better but which prices are around $2.50 to $2.75 per cwt. under those prevailing a week ago. The spread between the two grades is substantially higher than last year serves to counteract the relative cheapness of stock and feeders. Bulk of the sales were from 25c to 10c lower for the week and stags were bulk little changed. There was a good demand for fairly weighty finished hogs on the market this week, stock from 240 lbs. and up. These were generally 10@15c lower from 200 lbs. Buyers seemed to prefer the handy weight shipping and light butcher hogs, 180 to 200 lbs., the latter 15 cents higher having the preference. Considering the rencous runs, however, daily clearances were light and the close on the week showed a loss of nearly everything sold. At the close good to choice sales in various classes were about 10@15c lower than a week ago, with bulk $8.15 to $8.25, medium weights 230 to 250 lbs. $8.35 to $8.45, shipping grades 180 to 220 lbs. $8.40 to $8.60, light 160 to 180 lbs. $8.50, strong weight pigs 120 to 130 lbs. $7.50 to $8, medium to light pigs, $6.50 to $7.25, packers' sows $7 to $7.15, stags $5.50 to $6.25, immune stock and feeders $7.50 to $8.25, and choice $8.25 upon shipping pigs $7 to $7.50.

This week's sheep and lamb receipts show decrease from the previous week, but to date the total for the week is 5687, compared with 6634 for the corresponding week last year, a decrease of 947 head. For the same time last year the receipts were 4112, a decrease of 1575 from this week's run has been about on an average, although there was only one really choice lot of lambs offered, and they were in the week's run. Wool lambs compared with a week ago show no radical change, but this week's quotations are called a shade lower. Choice wool lambs are quotable up to $15, with medium to good grades from $13 to $14.50, shorn lambs $13 to $13.50, shorn lambs this week have carried too much weight to suit the buyers, who wanted the lighter kinds. Clipped lambs are in light supply and steady with choice clippers quotable up to $12 and medium to good kinds from $11 to $11.75. Culls and heavies sold from $10 to $10.75. Receipts of sheep have been light and some classes show an irregular advance. Wool wethers sold at $7.50 to $8.50, about steady with last week's close. Clipped wethers quotable at $7.50 to $8. Ewes are unchanged, with light handy weights quotable at $8.50 to $9, generally steady, and the heavy weights from $7.50 to $8.50, about 50@75c lower than last week's close. Yearlings and bucks at $4 to $6 look about steady. Canners are quotable at $2 to $4, according to the weight and quality of the offerings.

Horses and Mules.

Commission receipts of horses and mules showed a slight increase for the week. The horse market was very active, prime mules in particular showing strength and selling slightly higher on anything with a reasonable amount of quality. Mules, on the other hand, were trifling in rule steer, and aside from some of the good big kinds, the general market was on a weaker basis. Approximately 550 horses arrived and sold out of first hands. Good big harness-marked work types sold exceptionally well. Wagon horses and chunks, blocky Southern chunks and the cheaper grades of good-haired Southern horses received good outlet. There was a demand for some big smooth-mouthed work chunks with blemishes, although outclassed stuff and trash continued a drug on the market. There were in excess of 800 mules in first hands and aside from a reasonably active call for some good rugged work mules, demand was not particularly keen. The virtual close of the cotton mule season has reduced the outlet for this class. Long-haired green mules and little stuff were hard pressed by buyers, and material declines were indicated in many quarters.

VEAL CALVES STRONG IN TRADE FOR WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	19,410	20,417	8,350
Hogs	88,420	94,875	57,178
Sheep	5,687	6,634	4,112
Totals	109,722	121,729	73,640

Closing trade in livestock at the St. Louis National Stockyards found hogs barely steady for the week, sheep and lambs little changed, and cattle mostly steady to 25c higher. The most pronounced change of any class was in veal calves, the market for which ended 50c to $1.50 extreme cases $1 higher. Combined receipts were of moderate volume, falling somewhat under the previous week's good total, but running considerably above the offering for the same week in 1922. The largest gain in cattle (aside from veal calves) was in beef steers, values for which closed 25c and in some cases as much as 50c higher. Prices varied largely from $7 per cwt or under for common yellow hammers to $9.40, the top for matured offerings, with bulk of all weights suitable for the block cashed from $7.50 to $8.75. Light-weight yearlings were higher for the fore part of the week, but closed minus the early improvement. Some of the plainer offerings sold in the $6 column, with the bulk of others clearing from $7 to $8.75. Yearlings steers reached $9.50, and heifers $9.25. Butcher cows gained 25c the bulk selling on the close at $5.50 to $6.50. The practical low end remained at $4.75 and top registered in the $7 column. Cutter cows at $3.50 to $4.50, were steady, while canner cows varied from steady to 25c up. Bulls were 15c to 25c higher. Bulk of veals retain their early strength and finished barely steady. Closing quotations for weighty beef animals were $4.50 to $5.25, top $5.60, and bolognas were valued at $4.50 to $5.25. Stocker and feeder business continued light under restricted supply and demand. There was no change in values, steers selling largely from $6 to $7.75, cows $5.50 to $4.50, heifers $5.50 to $6, and bulls $3.50 to $5.50.

Hog Receipts Heavy.

Swine receipts continue heavy in volume considering the advanced season. Total arrivals locally for the week just closed amounted to 88,420 head as compared with 94,800 the preceding week, 57,800 the same week in 1922 and 59,800 the same period in 1921. There have been fewer 300-pound hogs to local packers during the past week to the actual salable supply was equal to that of the preceding week when the run in point of numbers was larger. Quality of the offerings generally to date averages fair to good. The proportion of pigs among the receipts has been rather generous, this due in part to the feeding corn spreads which opened about steady, but on Tuesday the market advanced. There was some reaction Wednesday but this was followed by another upturn Thursday which put the general market to the highest level for a couple of weeks. Friday's trade was fairly active at generally steady to 5c higher prices. Bulk of the sales were from 240 lbs. and up, with bulk $8.15 to $8.25, medium weights 230 to 250 lbs. $8.35 to $8.45, shipping grades 180 to 220 lbs. $8.40 to $8.60, light 160 to 180 lbs. $8.50, strong weight pigs 120 to 130 lbs. $7.50 to $8, medium to light pigs, $6.50 to $7.25, packers' sows $7 to $7.15, stags $5.50 to $6.25, immune stock and feeders $7.50 to $8.25, and choice $8.25 upon shipping pigs $7 to $7.50.

Receipts were about 38,000 head, compared with 30,047 a week ago. Spring lambs declined $1@1.50, with other classes steady. Bulk desirable lambs went at $14 to $14.25. Short lambs sold largely around $10 to $11.25. Most ewes went for $8.50 to $9.25.

Wheat futures had sharp upturn on the Merchants' Exchange at the week-end session, corn also rising. The pending Government crop report to be issued Monday, unfavorable crop reports from Southwest and cold weather in Northwest were credited with contributing to upturn in wheat.

In the local cash grain market Saturday red winter wheat was 1c higher. There was demand for good sound wheat of strictly soft character, but nothing choice was offered. No. 2 red winter, $1.23@1.31. Other stuff were rather slow. Scattered cars of No. 2 and No. 3 were carried over. Receipts were light. Hard wheat was in fair demand. Prices ranged 1c to 2c up. Offerings were closely cleaned up. Shippers and local buyers were in the market for the cheaper classes. Dark wheats were quiet and 1c lower. No. 2 hard sold at $1.22. No. 3 hard was bought to arrive at $1.22. Cash corn was strong and ¼c to 2c higher. There was good demand from local mills, which took up fully half the supply and there was buying for export and accumulative account. Offerings were closely cleaned up. Cash oats were ¼c to ¾c higher, influenced by the rise in other grains. There was good accumulative and shipping demand and offerings were cleaned up.

Trading in futures in the fore part of the day, July wheat and May corn acting best, Liverpool wheat opened ½d higher and closed ¾d up.

May wheat opened at $1.21¼, July wheat $1.16¼, September wheat, $1.15. May corn 78¾, July corn, 79¼ and September corn, 79¾.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 772 cars of wheat, compared with 683 (two days) a week ago and 451 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 184 cars, Duluth 90 and Winnipeg 489.

Local wheat receipts, which were 52,800 bushels, compared with 156,376 a week ago and 55,236 last year, included 31 cars local and 13 through. 'ONE-EYED' BROWN ASKS FOR A PAROLE

Waiters' Club Robber One of Six St. Louis Convicts in Plea for Clemency.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 7.—One of six St. Louis convicts seeking paroles, who will tell their stories to the State Board of Pardons and Paroles Monday, is George de Priest, alias "One-Eyed Brown," serving 10 years in the penitentiary from March 4, 1920, for robbery.

The robbery was at the Waiters' Club, 705½ Pine street, the night of Sept. 22, 1919, and was a spectacular affair. "One-Eyed Brown," who had been drinking beer at a table, suddenly arose and announced to 36 other men in the place: "It's a stick-up, friends. Throw up your hands and back against the wall." Nearly everyone in the club knew Brown because he had been a frequenter there for several months. They saw the revolver in his hand and all but one obeyed his command. The other man, who had been seated with Brown, then got up and searched the men, taking between $500 and $600.

The other St. Louis convicts applying for parole are:

Clifton Roy Frank, 42 years old, serving 10 years from April, 1921, for his participation in the robbery of the National Refrigerator Co. paymaster, in which five men obtained $4000. Circuit Attorney Sidener is opposing this parole.

William B. Mitchell and Edgar L. Whelan, former watchman for the Wabash Railroad, serving four years each from August, 1921, after having been convicted of having beaten and robbed three tramps found in the Wabash Railroad yards at St. Louis.

Charles Sargent, 40, serving five years from April, 1921, for robbery.

Mike Weisbecher, 42, serving five years from March, 1921, for grand larceny after having been convicted of stealing merchandise from his employer, the Grand-Leader department store, several officials of which now recommend clemency for him.

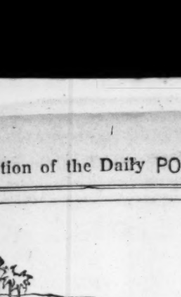
Be just to yourself

You realize that restful sleep is necessary to health. But do you realize what an important part your mattress plays in making restful sleep possible? Many people are doctoring for ills that really are due to restless sleep on an uncomfortable mattress.

Therefore, the choice of a mattress is important. The Red Cross Mattress is, above all, comfortable. The special Red Cross process of preparing Kapoc from the South Sea Islands makes it non-absorbent and self-ventilating.

Kapoc is germ-proof: it will not harbor disease, neither will it absorb perspiration, which naturally makes the Red Cross Mattress very sanitary. A sun and air bath restores a Red Cross Mattress almost to its natural state. Simply lay it over two chairs where sun and air can purify "the mattress that breathes."

Ask for a Red Cross Mattress at your dealer's today and you'll know why it is better. Don't accept a substitute. The Red Cross trade-mark is your protection. Look for it. At all good dealers or write us.



Red Cross mattress untouched by human hands comes in sealed carton.

MRS. HARDING TO LIMIT SOCIAL ACTIVITY THIS SPRING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A spick and span White House awaits the return of President and Mrs. Harding from their five-weeks' sojourn in the South. On the White House lawns tiny violets have made their appearance; the lilac trees are in bloom and the spring housecleaning of the executive mansion has made it a real spotless house from kitchens to garrets.

If all goes well, according to present plans, the President will be accompanied by Mrs. Harding when he makes his western trip. She is especially anxious to go to Alaska with him and her physicians have promised her, it is said, that she may make the trip if she spares herself every possible exertion until then.

Because of this advice, there will be no spring entertaining at the White House except informal dinner parties. Mrs. Harding, as well as the President, is very sociable and loves nothing better than to have her friends about her. But she will not meet large numbers of visitors each day, a task to which, when well, she gave much of her time.

The Cabinet is hurrying back from here and there to join the President. A number of important matters press for attention and work will be pushed night and day after the brief holidays. The fact that next year is election year puts an extra zest into official labors.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Coontz, well-known in Missouri circles here, were among the prominent persons who participated in the memorial exercises to Peary, the North Pole discoverer, at Arlington Friday. Mrs. Peary, widow of the explorer, was too ill to attend, but Robert E. Peary Jr., the young son, came from his Eastern college to represent the family. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt also was present. Mrs. R. E. Coontz and Mrs. Dayton, wife of Admiral Dayton, were the receiving committee.

Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Under Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss were among the Missourians who attended the Washington cotillion at Rasucher's Thursday. This was one of the smartest affairs of the season.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis entertained a company of 16 persons at dinner last night. The Secretary and Mrs. Davis also will entertain next Saturday at dinner.

Seldom has Washington seen a prettier or more effective amateur performance than the "Cabaret Fantastique," held Wednesday for the benefit of Noel House. A number of the younger attaches of the British Embassy took part in the tableaux, while the belles of the city made charming, winsome actresses.

Representative and Mrs. John Philip Hill had a company of 16 persons at dinner last night in honor of Third Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

The program of the Missouri State Society meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt in this city April 9 will be broadcast by radio. A special program has been arranged for between 8 and 9 p. m. and radio enthusiasts in Missouri are urged to "tune-in" on Washington that night and hear some of the old home spirit exhibited by these voluntary Missourian exiles.

President and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins of George Washington University will be the guests of honor. Both are from Missouri and are deeply devoted to the State. Dr. Earle Wilfley of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church, a former Missourian, will give the principal address. Dr. Wilfley was the Washington pastor of the late Champ Clark.

Mrs. Cleveland Newton was one of the attendants at the Republican Woman's meeting Tuesday called by Mrs. Medill McCormick to make plans for the next campaign.

Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Massey of Lockwood, Mo., are the house guests of Representative and Mrs. Cleveland Newton, at their home in Biltmore street.

EMBASSY TO BE "BOARDING HOUSE FOR AMERICANS"

U. S. Ambassador to Spain Says His First Duty Is to Welcome Countrymen.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1923.)

ROME, April 7.—Alexander P. Moore, the new Ambassador to Spain, is in Rome in company with Senator Hiram Johnson of California. He will go to Madrid in a few days.

"I intend to keep a sort of boarding house for Americans in the United States Embassy in Madrid," said Moore. "I consider the first duty of an American Ambassador is to welcome his countrymen, make them feel at home and encourage them to visit the country where he is stationed. I am sure that my going to Spain will increase the number of Americans who will visit Spain for I have already invited many to come and see me there."

"Are you acquainted in Spain?" the correspondent asked.

"I know the country very well," was the reply. "I have visited there several times. I speak Spanish only a little."

OUSTED FOR BIBLE THEORIES

Kentucky Wesleyan Professor's Lecture Arouses Methodists.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 7.—For declaring in a lecture to his class that there is no conflict between Bible and modern theories of organic evolution, as set forth by Darwin and Huxley, Prof. R. G. Demarce, head of the Department of Mathematics and Physics in Kentucky Wesleyan College, at Winchester, 18 miles east of here, has been temporarily suspended by President W. B. Campbell, pending an investigation. The college board has been called to meet next Tuesday.

Kentucky Wesleyan is conducted under auspices of Kentucky Conference of the Methodist Church South, and members of the church here filed a protest against Prof. Demarce's teachings.

CLUB TO HEAR LECTURE ON DECORATION OF STATE CAPITOL

Dr. John Pickard, chairman of the State Capitol Decoration Commission, will address the Wednesday Club next Wednesday at 3 p. m., on "Decorating the Missouri Capitol."

The club on that occasion will entertain representatives of all Eighth District women's clubs and has invited to the lecture members of the City Art Museum Board and many local artists.

W. K. Bixby and Arthur Kocian are the St. Louis associates of Dr. Pickard on the commission appointed by the State to superintend the expenditure of the $700,000 appropriated for decorating the Capitol.

Many canvases have already been placed. Hofbauer, the French painter of war pictures, has a huge canvas of Missouri at War. Richard Miller has the commission for decorating the Senate chamber, and Carl Melcher's portraits of famous Missourians have been installed.

Frank Brangwyn of England has the $75,000 commission for decorating the dome, and Bixby has received word that four of his largest canvases are already on their way to America.

Dr. Pickard will have stereopticon slides showing some of the architectural features of the building, as well as the decorations already placed. An informal reception will follow the lecture. In the receiving line will be the club president, Mrs. Harry E. Sprague, and the vice presidents, Mrs. Edgar Rombauer, Mrs. Clark McAdams, who is chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. David McWilliams. At the tea tables will be Mrs. H. H. Dennison, Mrs. B. B. Culver, Mrs. Walter B. Ver Steeg, Mrs. W. H. Burritt, Mrs. W. K. Bixby, Mrs. T. P. Conant and Mrs. E. F. B. Jones.

The regular meeting of the Education Section of the Wednesday Club will be held on Wednesday also at 1:30 p. m. Miss L. R. Ernst will speak on "What Is the School Doing to Educate the Parent?"

The Card party given by the Monday Charity Club at the Hotel Chase on Easter Monday was a success financially. There were 600 guests present. The proceeds of this affair will be used to carry on the philanthropic work in which the club is engaged. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Charlew W. Cross, 3702 Sylvan place, Kenwood Springs, tomorrow.

The Webster Groves Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold its regular meeting April 10 at the home of Mrs. James Allen, 25 S. Plant avenue. Assistant hostesses will be Mmes. Lon Harper, Al. Harper, A. W. Kurrus, C. M. Smith, Misses Mildred Allen and Roy R. Madison, 26 years old, 4978 Botanical avenue, a paroled convict, was arrested Friday night on suspicion of having taken part in the robbery of a mail truck at Springfield, Ill., last Sunday.

The capture and identification of Byron J. Shelton, 4729A Washington boulevard, following the robbery, directed suspicion to Madison, who was convicted with Shelton of robbing Mrs. Charles Stix, of 26 Portland place, Oct. 5, 1920. A photograph of Madison, sent to Springfield, was identified by four persons as that of one of the robbers. He is held for the Government.

For the Stix robbery, Shelton was sent to the reform school and Madison to the penitentiary. Shelton was paroled five months later and Madison was paroled May 20, 1922.

NEW EXCAVATIONS AT POMPEII ARE NOW OPEN TO PUBLIC

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1923.)

ROME, April 7.—Five hundred meters of new excavations at Pompeii, namely, the entire street leading from the forum to the amphitheater and constituting what seems to be the most interesting of Roman excavations anywhere, are now thrown open to the general public. These excavations, the result of 12 years of digging, have previously been accessible only by special permission. They are remarkable for the exact preservation of a Pompeiian street as it was at the time when the city was destroyed.

All the objects have been left where they were found. All wooden or other perishable objects consumed beneath the hot ashes have been reproduced in plaster molds and the general effect is far more interesting to the general tourist than all the rest of the dead city whose sad monotony contrasts strangely with the fresh colors and living feeling of the new street.

HYDE AND KIEL ENDORSE $500,000 DRIVE FOR Y. M. H. A.

Purpose of the Proposed Fund Is to Erect Building for Organization.

Statements officially indorsing the campaign of the Young Men's Hebrew Association to raise $500,000 to erect a building for the organization and stressing the importance of such a move have been issued by Gov. Hyde and Mayor Kiel.

Indorsements have been received also from W. Frank Carter, chairman of the Citizens' Supervisory Bond Committee; Harland Bartholomew of the City Plan Commission, and Elwood Street, director of the Community Council.

"I observe that the Young Men's Hebrew Association has opened a campaign for $500,000 for the building of a home for the organization," Gov. Hyde says. "The aims of this organiz tion are of such a high character that I am glad to indorse them and to express the hope that the campaign will be a complete success."

In his statement Mayor Kiel says: "In a cosmopolitan city like St. Louis there are many people with many ideas and many kinds of faith. Each should be allowed to hold to the religion of his fathers without interference, and I am certainly glad to know that a movement is on foot to put up a modern building, in a central location, for the activities of the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

"Certainly a city that has just recently passed an $87,000,000 bond issue for public improvements and to beautify itself, should have a building of this character, because of the thousands of young men of Hebrew faith.

"The city would be a large beneficiary from a civic viewpoint, and the effect of a building of this character can be but to build better men for a better St. Louis."

CIVIC LEADERS APPEAR IN 'DRUG EVIL' FILM

Church and Club Workers Also Take Part in Picture Mrs. Wallace Reid Is Making.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, April 7.—Government and city officials and civic, church and club leaders of Los Angeles, Friday afternoon, were filmed with Mrs. Wallace Reid and James Kirkwood in a dramatic sequence of "Human Wreckage," Mrs. Wallace Reid's film directed against the drug evil, which is being made at the Thomas H. Ince studios.

Instead of using actors in a scene of the picture, in which Government, State and civic leaders join together to fight the "higher-ups" in the dope peddlers' ring, members of the Local League, who are backing Mrs. Reid in her fight, agreed to appear with her in the picture.

Judge Benjamin Bledsoe, United States Judge of the Twelfth Federal District; Mayor George E. Cryer, of the City of Los Angeles; Chief of Police Louis D. Oaks, Dr. L. M. Powers, Health Commissioner, and Dr. R. B. von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, who also is president of the Los Angeles Anti-Narcotic League, played leading parts in the scenes with Mrs. Reid and Kirkwood.

With a "make-up" expert in attendance, the civic leaders donned the grease paint, and were piloted by Director John Griffith Wray through several remarkably impressive scenes. The league members hope to convey to the world an earnest message. Other members of the league, who appear in "Human Wreckage," are: John Carter, former Collector of United States Internal Revenue; Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan, Los Angeles Park Commissioner; Brig. C. R. Boyd of the Salvation Army; Miss Orfa Jean Shontz of the Juvenile Court, Mrs. Chester Ashley, educator; Dr. R. E. D. Bird, president of the Occidental College; Mrs. Charles F. Gray of the Parent-Teachers' Association, Dr. Miriam Van Waters of the National Prison Reform Committee; Miss Harris of the Church Federation and Father Clifford of the Diocese of Los Angeles and Monterey.

FRENCH REPARATIONS FUND EXCEEDS GERMAN

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1923.)

PARIS, April 7.—Figures published in Le Petit Parisian reveal that whereas the French from their own savings have since close of the war advanced 95,000,000,000 francs (normally $18,735,000,000) for reparations, the total amount paid by Germany to all the allies is less than 6,000,000,000 gold marks ($1,428,000,000), of which France's share was 1,779,000,000 gold marks ($432,402,000), only 143,000,000 marks ($34,034,000) being in cash.

Deducting from the total French receipts the cost of the French army of occupation and the advances in cash made to Germany by France for coal deliveries there is seen to be a deficit of more than 63,000,000 gold marks ($14,994,000). In other words, for occupation and coal advances France has spent 62,000,000 marks more than she has received on all accounts from Germany and consequently not one copper of the German payments to date has been available for French reparations.

The figures to Jan. 1, 1923, are as follows: France has borowed from her own people and expended against Germany's account 54,000,000,000 paper francs for the reconstruction of the devastated regions; 31,000,000,000 francs for pensions and allocations; nearly another billion francs for the reconstruction of Alsace-Lorraine, which the treaty does not charge against Germany, and 8,000,000,000 francs for interest on reparations loans, making a total of 95,000,000,000 paper francs. For reconstruction alone, 48,000,000,000 francs more remain to be spent. The pensions account is difficult to estimate at this time.

To the same date, Germany paid the allies slightly under 6,000,000,000 gold marks, of which only about half was in cash. The allied advances for coal and the cost of the allied armies of occupation, exclusive of the American, being deducted there remains only 2,500,000,000 marks ($595,000,000) for actual reparations for all the allies. France spent 1,843,000,000 gold marks ($438,834,000) for coal advanced and for supporting the army of occupation. She received on all accounts from Germany 1,779,000,000 gold marks. Therefore the deficit on occupation and coal advances to Jan. 1 was 63,000,000 gold marks.

PERSONAL ESTATE OF J. H. VETTE $347,000

Inventory to Be Filed Soon Also Shows 37 Pieces of Real Estate in St. Louis.

A partial inventory of the estate of John H. Vette, realty broker and money lender, who died Dec. 10 from a stroke of apoplexy, was completed yesterday by his son-in-law, Frank H. Alewel, executor, and will be filed in the Probate Court this week. It shows personal property valued at $347,318.46 and 37 pieces of real estate in St. Louis, all free from incumbrance. Alewel said he had not yet appraised the realty and he declined to make an estimate of its worth. A supplemental inventory, consisting of odds and ends, and which is expected to considerably increase the value of Vette's holdings, will be prepared later, it was stated.

Vette bequeathed his property to his daughter, Mrs. Alewel, of the Gatesworth Hotel, and a granddaughter, Miss Helen Meise, 16 years old, who attends a private school in New York. The daughter receives two-thirds of the estate. The remainder is left in her trust for the benefit of Miss Meise until the latter is of legal age.

Items Among Assets.

Among the assets are notes secured by deeds of trust on real estate amounting to $294,009.39. Other items are: Accounts payable,

Items Among Assets.

Among the assets are notes secured by deeds of trust on real estate amounting to $294,009.39. Other items are: Accounts payable, secured by chattel mortgage, $9060.95; cash on hand, $8961.81; accounts payable, listed as apparently worthless, $19,542.15; notes secured by second deeds of trust, $8019.46; jewelry, $1299.50; merchandise in stock, $1440.20; pianos in stock, $851.50; automobiles, $730; judgments obtained in court, $3385; and office fixtures, $283.

Real estate listed includes among other parcels property at 1415-21 Market street, said to be valued at more than $100,000; a $50,000 mercantile building at 1928 Franklin avenue, an apartment building at 4170 Lindell boulevard, a five-story concrete warehouse at 2918 Franklin and 11 acres of unimproved land lying at Eleventh and Bissel streets. The estate also owns realty at 4016 Papin street, which is occupied by 31 negro tenants, and other property tenanted by negroes in various parts of the city. Realty at 2906-08 Market street, which is occupied by the F. H. Alewel Furniture, Storage and Moving Co., and where Vette had his office, also is shown.

No Stocks Among Property.

Vette at the time of his death did not own stock in any corporation. He is said to have lost $50,000 in a dairy company which failed several years ago. His estate, according to Alewel, would be double its present value if every one had paid what they owed him. "It was easy to get money from him by telling a hard-luck story," the son-in-law said.

Alphonse Howe, attorney for the Vette estate, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that it was a mistake to class Vette primarily as a money lender. He dealt largely in real estate, as is shown by the number of mortgages on realty. Money lending was a secondary consideration with him, his estate holdings only a total of $9060.95 as chattel mortgages given as security for loans, the attorney pointed out. "In my more than ten years' experience as Vette's lawyer," continued Howe, "I never knew him to make an illegal loan. It is true that clients charged him with practicing usury, but in nine cases out of ten it was the complaint of some one who did not understand the proposition or else looking for an excuse not to pay back what they had borrowed. He dealt with all classes, many professional 'dead-beats' among them, and he would take a chance when no one else would. Some times he threw good money after bad in hope of saving himself, but he never demanded more than he was justly entitled to. While many thought it was all right to let him go unpaid he did not follow that system himself. He paid his obligations regularly and there is no indebtedness against his estate."

Vette was born in this city 67 years ago and had been in business 40 years. His wife died about 10 years ago.

ULSTER EMIGRATION INCREASING

In Quarter Ending Last Month 1612 Passports to U. S. Were Vised.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian and the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1923.)

BELFAST, April 7.—Emigration from Ulster to the United States increased greatly during the quarter ending last month. At the Belfast-American consulate 1612 persons had passports vised for the United States, compared with 552 for the corresponding period last year.

In 1921, however, 1901 passports were vised during the same three months. The latest emigrants are described as of a superior type.

BONES FOUND IN CAVE THOSE OF ARMY MAN

Discovery Bears Out Murder Theory of Missing Officer's Relatives.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONI, Tex., April 7.—The discovery of the skeleton of Warrant Officer Richard Routon of the Engineers' Corps, hidden in a deep cave on the camp Bullis reservation, 30 miles north of San Antonio, late yesterday evening, bears out the murder theory of relatives advanced when the officer mysteriously disappeared from his home here, Feb. 17.

The skeleton was found in a cave to which access could only be made by a 30-foot rope. No weapon was near and the body had apparently been thrown in by slayers.

Wife Tells of Trap Laid.

One week prior to the disappearance, Mrs. Routon said an attempt had been made to waylay the officer by means of a tar pool trap laid under a railroad trestle on a lonely road in the north end of Bexar County.

The couple was driving along about dark when Mrs. Routon saw a figure standing on top of the trestle. She said nothing to her husband of it, and when the car came under the bridge something seemed to hold it back.

The car plowed through and a little way on the other side, Routon got out and reached for his automatic. Mrs. Routon begged him not to shoot and the figure disappeared. A posse returned to the place later and found under a coat of dust a barrel of tar had been poured over the road to stop the car. Another posse visited the scene at daylight and found several empty shells.

Mysterious Message.

That day Routon sent a mysterious message to some one, the text of which was, "You had better make a good job of it the next time." Mrs. Routon does not know who this person was, but said that her husband appeared to know who was trying to "get" him.

Routon left his home here Feb. 17 to go to the army hospital to have dental work done. He visited the bank, deposited his month's pay, paid a furniture bill and was never seen afterward until his skeleton was found in the cave.

A party of officers exploring the caves came upon the skeleton and identified it by the insignia on the collar. County officers are to hold an autopsy to determine if a hole in the skull is a bullet hole.

Illinois Teachers' Election.

W. C. Heyl of Waterloo, Ill., Monroe County, Superintendent of Schools, was elected president of the Southwestern Illinois Teachers' Association at the last session of its three-day convention yesterday in the East St. Louis High School auditorium. Miss Tillie Reither of East St. Louis was re-elected secretary and E. O. Bottenfield of Sparta, Ill., treasurer.

PAYROLL MESSENGER, 85, ROBBED OF $700

Alton Concern Employed Him Because They Thought Age Would Be a Blind.

Because he believed robbers would not suspect a man 85 years old of being a payroll messenger, John W. Koch, president of the Alton Stoneware Pipe Co., East Alton, Ill., had made it a practice to transport his weekly payroll from a bank in Alton to his plant on the outskirts of East Alton every Saturday morning.

Yesterday, at 9:30 a. m., two men, one armed with a revolver stopped the buggy in which Koch and an employe, John de Silvey, were riding on the road half a mile west of East Alton and took $700 in currency, the entire payroll.

The robbers, in an automobile, halted Koch and De Silvey, apparently to ask about the roads. Koch got out of the buggy to point the way and was told to put up his hands.

He took the license number of the machine but trace revealed that the number had been issued to a man in Herrin who owned a different make of machine.

Our Carefully Selected Furnishings Exact No Premium on Cost

That so many people have pronounced our prices unexpectedly moderate impels us to state that the reputation for high quality is in reality a compliment to our selections, which, because in most instances exclusive, have created here and there a false impression that this is a high-priced store.

In such manner has this house for 66 years dealt with the public and it owes its leadership today to the support of generations of satisfied customers who have sought and received the greatest value for the price paid.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 8, 1923. PAGES 1—10.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Douville Coburn, in "So This Is London"—American.

"So This Is London," a Cohan Comedy, Opens Tonight at American

Mr. and Mrs. Coburn Lead Company—Harry Carroll at Orpheum, and "Daddy Long Legs" at Empress.

A ROAD company, at the American tonight, will present "So This Is London," which has been running in New York since last August, and which the present troupe has acted for four months in Chicago. It is a comedy with a purpose—that of promoting international amity between America and England, according to the author, Arthur Goodrich. The producer is George M. Cohan, and there is a legend that the plays which pass through his hands receive the benefit of his touch and are thereby energized and revivified.

The Shubert-Jefferson begins tonight a venture of two weeks in the movies. The Orpheum has a triple-headline bill, led by Harry Carroll, composer and star in vaudeville revues, and promises Fannie Brice as featured entertainer for the week of April 15. The Woodward Players are presenting, at the Empress, a "comedy of the heart strings," by Jean Webster, entitled "Daddy Long Legs."

According to advance accounts, Edward Schilling, Virginia Springer and others. The Woodward Players will have music again this week, in the form of a seven-piece orchestra.

Vaudeville Announcements.

THE bill at the Rialto for the first half of the week includes Al Hammond, Wisconsin's jazz expert, and his orchestra, assisted by Jean Francis, singer; Raymond Bond, boob comedian, in "The Minute Man;" Eddie Schwartz and Julia Clifford, in songs and nonsense gags; Clyde Hager and Walter Goodwin, composers of popular hits, in a song turn, and the Chandon Trio, aerialists. A new program begins Thursday.

The Columbia's opening bill is led by Kalaluhi's troupe in "An Evening in Hawaii," with ukulele twangers and native dancers. In a novelty skit called "Bigamy," Al Borde acts the roles of Judge, Prosecuting Attorney and counsel for the defense. Others on the bill are Louise Hamlin and Billy Mack, singers and dancers, in "Two Records;" May McKay and Blanche Earle, in a revue called "A Dog's Life," and Jack and Eva Arnold. The picture feature is "While Paris Sleeps," with Lon Chaney in the role of a sculptor of the Latin Quarter. The bill starting Thursday will include Robert E. Gehan and Marjorie Garretson, singers; Henry B. Walthall and Jimmie Van. A film version of "Camille," with the late Sarah Bernhardt and Lou Tellegen, will be shown four days, beginning Thursday.

The offering at the Grand Opera House comprises a new revue, featuring Joe Reaves and Will Jarvis; Gladys Delmar, dancer, and her band; "Horses," a comedy, with Sylvester and Vance; the Johnsons, in a minstrel turn; Peggy Bremen and brother; Waiman and Berry, in a musical act; Ben Nee One, Chinese vocalist; the Australian axmen, McLiran and Miley, and Page and Green.

The Gayety Theater, extending its season, announces for this week "Hello, Good Times," and for succeeding weeks "Maids of America," "Mollie Williams' Show," "Knick Knacks" and "Rockets." As a benefit for Otto Ludwig, leading man of the German Theater Stock Company, the troupe will present tonight, at the Eagle Auditorium, "Der Witwenball" ("The Widows' Ball"), a comedy.

George Melford has started a new production "Salomy Jane," which, it will be remembered, was Paul Armstrong's play adapted from the Bret Harte story. Waldemar Young wrote the film version. Jacqueline Logan will be seen in the title role and with her will be Maurice Flynn and William Davidson.

Betty Wheeler, in "Bits of Everything"—Orpheum.

Anthony Novelli, in "Fabiola" Shubert-Jefferson.

Pola Negri, in "Bella Donna"—Missouri.

Mae Murray, in "Jazzmania"—Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol.

Charles Mack and Emily Fitzroy, in "Driven"—Rivoli.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

SKOURAS BROS. announce that the following pictures will be presented at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters in the next two months:

Charles Chaplin in "The Pilgrim," his first feature length comedy since "The Kid." D. W. Griffith's mystery drama, "One Exciting Night." Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish in Joseph Hergesheimer's "The Bright Shawl." Gasnier's production, "Poor Men's Wives," with Barbara La Marr and David Butler. Thomas H. Ince's production, "The Hottentot," with Madge Bellamy and Douglas MacLean. Maurice Tourneur's production, "The Isle of Dead Ships," with Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Campeau and Walter Long. Norma Talmadge in "Jane Cowl's famous stage success, "Within the Law." The picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street," produced by Warner Bros. The film version of "Brass," another great novel, with Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Harry Myers and Irene Rich.

"Bella Donna" is the first of a series of six super-Paramount pictures which will be shown at the Missouri during the next six weeks. The remaining five pictures are: "Prodigal Daughters," with Gloria Swanson;

Pola's 'Bella Donna' 'Jazzmania,' 'Fabiola,' 'The Glorious Adventure'

"The Streets of New York," "Lost and Found" and "Driven" Are Also on Varied List of the Week's Photoplay Features.

Pola Negri in "Bella Donna" is the week's photoplay feature at the Missouri Theater. In this picture, for the first time, Miss Negri is directed by an American producer, George Fitzmaurice; photographed for the first time by American photographic methods, and supported by two stellar leading men—Conway Tearle and Conrad Nagel. Lois Wilson is in the supporting cast.

The beautiful temple of Abu Simbel in upper Egypt was reconstructed for this picture and serves as the background of a meeting between Pola Negri and Baroudi (Conway Tearle). Other big scenes are the masquerade ball and street scenes in London and Cairo, and on the desert wastes.

"Bella Donna," which is from the novel of the same name, by Robert Hichens, is a romantic tragedy of a certain Mrs. Chepstow, nicknamed "Bella Donna" by admirers when her beauty's power was at its height. The vanishing of her charm, as she becomes the slave of the mysterious Mahmoud Baroudi of Cairo, Egypt, serves as material for tragic drama.

The entire program at the Missouri for this special week is built around the feature picture. A stage spectacle has been prepared and there are special musical numbers.

Mae Murray is featured at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters in "Jazzmania," appropriately booked to top "Jazz Week" at the Skouras houses. Edward Burns, who last appeared in support of Constance Talmadge in "East Is West," and Rod La Rocque, Spanish actor, are Miss Murray's leading men.

The photoplay was written to give Miss Murray opportunities to dance several times and wear many new clothes. However, it is said to be not without heart appeal and dramatic situations.

Hundreds of delightful places, the natural beauty and unique charm of which bring Americans back, and back again, to Switzerland—

GENEVA, with its classical lake, ever attractive and interesting as a resting place, combines beauty, wealth and intellect and is a world-renowned university town. Excursions to Mt. Blanc.

INTERLAKEN, the oldest and most celebrated climatic health resort and garden spot of the BERNESE OBERLAND—the focus point for all excursions in this wonderful region. Here the JUNGFRAU RAILWAY takes you up 13,750 feet to the "Top of The World." Far below and all about spreads a panorama of such inspiring grandeur and beauty that its memory must always remain a most treasured possession.

LUCERNE, the "Mecca" of all tourists—its loveliness proverbial, its variety of sports and amusements most interesting—the starting point for excursions in Central Switzerland.

LUGANO, in the Swiss-Italian lake district, a floral paradise basking in perennial sunshine; an unforgettable trip via the electrified St. Gothard line, famed for its scenic grandeur.

Plan to go to Switzerland this summer—the only country in Europe unchanged. No taxes. No excessive rates. No profiteering on tourists. The same cordial welcome—greater and better accommodations for all, whatever your purse. Rates $2.00 a day up including meals.

P. J. Bradshaw, Architect
O'Mara Heating Co., Heating Contractors

We will save Shaw's Garden for you

Are you going to let Shaw's Botanical Garden go just because the belching smoke-stacks in its vicinity are killing the vegetation? Has this nationally-known attraction got to be sacrificed because the measly smoke-stacks won't behave? Bunk! According to that sort of reasoning, every park in town should be closed if there happens to be a smoking smoke-stack handy. WHY DON'T YOU KILL THE CAUSE?

The fault isn't with the smoke-stack, gentlemen. The trouble is with the boiler. Rip out the old heating boilers in the buildings which surround the Garden and install the KEWANEE DOWN-DRAFT SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILER. That will end the smoke-evil for all time to come, and will not only save the trees and vegetation but will conserve the health of everybody in the neighborhood.

If you think we are romancing, go and watch the smoke-stack of the Chase Hotel, at Kingshighway and Lindell Boulevard, or the Melbourne Hotel at Grand and Lindell, or the University Club, the Missouri Theatre or Temple Shaare Emmeth in the Central West. Watch the smoke-stack of the Century Electric Company, the Emerson Electric Co., Overland Automobile Company, The International Fur Exchange Building, the Northside Y.M.C.A., or the Lafayette South Side Bank.

All these buildings are equipped with KEWANEE DOWN-DRAFT SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILERS, and because of that, their smoke-stacks never smoke. Nor will the smoke-stacks in the vicinity of Shaw's Garden smoke if you follow the lead of these great buildings. So far as the Kewanee Boiler Company is concerned, the day of smoking-smoke-stacks has gone.

Write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask for the information that will save Shaw's Garden.

St. Olaf's Chorus and Wilfred's "Clavilux"

THE present week is to witness a number of concerts. Miss Thelma Hayman, contralto, will give a recital tomorrow night at the Wednesday Club Auditorium as her adieu before leaving to continue her studies in New York. The famous St. Olaf Lutheran Choir will pay its second visit here, Tuesday evening, at Moolah Temple. Paul Friess, pianist, and Raymond Koch, baritone, will be heard in joint recital Thursday night at the Wednesday Club Auditorium. On Friday night, at the Principia School, Thomas Wilfred will give a demonstration of his light-organ, the Clavilux.

Miss Hayman will offer numbers by Giordani, Bach, Gluck, Rachmaninoff, Verdi, Hue, Rabey, Fourdrain, Julie Stevens Bacon, Spross, Hageman and Cadman. She will be assisted by Mrs. Frank A. Habig, pianist.

Messrs. Friess and Koch promise a program of some 24 selections. The vocal numbers range from Handelian and old Italian airs to Rachmaninoff and Cyril Scott, from Wagner to Leoncavallo. On the piano program are represented Brahms, Chopin, Debussy, Griffes, Carpenter, Rachmaninoff, Paderewski and Liszt. Miss Marguerite Reid will be accompanist.

The Clavilux is described by its inventor as "a new instrument by means of which silent compositions of moving color and form are played in rhythm to the vision just as music is played for the ear. The program will consist of "color sonatas" either played from notation or extemporized.

Other Music Items.

UNDER the auspices of the St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society, a musical program will be given at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Vandervoort Hall. Dr. Arthur Bostwick will lecture on "Shakspeare," and a program of organ, vocal and piano music will be presented by Mrs. Anna Craig Bates, Mrs. Jaques Landree, Mrs. Frank Howard, Mrs. Mabel Pearse Meisenbach, Richard Klein and Mrs. Harry Hart.

Free noonday organ recitals will be given at Christ Church Cathedral this week by Arthur Davis, beginning tomorrow and continuing every day save Saturday. . . . The new Symphony Trio, consisting of Messrs. Ganz, Steindel and Gusikoff, will make its first public appearance at the Knights of Columbus concert on April 18, at the Odeon.

E. R. Kroeger's arrangement of the song of the Flower Maidens, from "Parsifal," will be sung at the Morning Choral Club's concert at the Odeon on April 9. Mrs. H. M. T. Pasmezoglu and Mrs. Katharine Cowan will have solo parts. Charles Dalmores, celebrated French tenor, will be soloist, and one of his numbers is to be the Narrative from "Lohengrin."

The St. Louis University Glee Club and Orchestra will give their annual concert at the university auditorium, Lindell boulevard near Grand, on the evening of May 1. The director is George T. Devereux.

Sleeping Sickness Takes Sisters.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mrs. Anna Melia Jackson, 54, died here of encephalitic lethargy, commonly known as "sleeping sickness," of which puzzling malady her sister died one week before.

Mrs. Jackson had been sick a week, during which she was unconscious. Her sister was ill for a month, with one period of consciousness.

No other cases of sleeping sickness have been known here, physicians said.

Fights Robbers With Crutch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Two men assaulted S. A. Reeves, 31, of Clarksdale, Miss., in an alley here and robbed him of $23.

When Reeves, who has but one leg, tried to fight back with his crutch one of the thugs slashed at him with a knife, neatly severing his tie near his collar. He was then knocked down.

Wants Lawyers Paid By Hour.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Representative Breen, Democrat, of Paris, thinks attorneys are entitled to no more compensation than an automobile mechanic and so introduced a bill in the Legislature to provide for an eight hour day for lawyers at 80 cents an hour, with time and a half for overtime. If the measure becomes a law, clients must pay their counsel by the hour or be penalized.

Fined $10 for "Booing."

BELFAST.—It costs money to express disapproval of the Ulster Government. Thomas Agar, a boilermaker, was hailed into court and fined $10 for "booing" when the Duke of Abercorn, King's representative, rode down the main street in a procession.

Mrs. Fiske a Drug Addict in Poor New Play

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.

TRY as she might, Mrs. Fiske could not quite measure down to the new play in which she appeared Thursday night at the National. It is called "The Dice of the Gods," and the author is Lillian Barrett. Supporting Mrs. Fiske is a large company of ill-fated players. The most graceful moment came at the end of the second act, when she thanked the audience for giving her so much pleasure.

The magic of this actress is so potent that she kept a packed house in ecstatic flutters of delight, though her part is that of a woman whom morphine addiction has changed from a charmingly unselfish wife into a wastrel with a lover and a natural daughter. There is trouble because the daughter insists on marrying a penniless artist instead of the rich man her mother has selected. There is a doctor who tells the audience a few timely facts about narcotic addiction.

The scene shifts from a Bronk-like Newport villa to a MacDougal street studio, and thence to Italy and an overdose of morphine for Mrs. Fiske. Donald Cameron, as her lover, is privileged in that he dies in the second act, while his colleague, Robert Strange, must survive to the end and face the speeches allotted him by the playwright. Actually, the most amusing line in the play is one spoken by Mrs. Fiske, who remarks that doctors, next to clergymen, are the greatest humbugs on earth.

Nonrepresentational Stage.

THE season for theatrical novelty culminated Tuesday in special matinees by the American Commedia dell'arte of "The Show Booth" by Alexander Blok and Solomon's "Song of Songs," presented at the Booth Theater in the "non-representational" manner. The non-representational manner attempts to interpret life as a spectacle or show in the method originated by Meyerhold in Petrograd as a revolt against the naturalism of the Moscow Art Theater. It represents an interesting experiment in dramatic esoterics.

"The Show Booth" disclosed the tent-stage of strolling players in Russia and presented Pierrot, Harlequin and Columbine in their attempts to fathom the meaning of life. To them were added the Author, in a dress suit; a group of Occults, a Clown, and two pairs of lovers, all but Pierrot met with fantastic tragedy. The settings were by Robert Edmond Jones.

The text of the "Song of Songs" was taken from the King James version of the Bible and played in the interpretative-pantomime manner of the play-within-a-play scene in John Barrymore's "Hamlet." The actors were placed on a platform in the shape of the Seal of Solomon with six rays, three for the readers and three for the actors. A dream in the course of the action was represented by the interposition of a gauze screen between the actor and the audience. It was the first production of the "Song of Songs" on any modern stage.

In the casts were James Watts, Burford Hampden, Mihail Visaroff, Edna James, Mary Corday and Edna St. Vincent Millay. The matinees will continue on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Yiddish Players Give Andreyeff's "Anathema" in English.

THE players of the Yiddish Theater will present Leonid Andreyeff's "Anathema" in English Tuesday night at the Forty-eighth Street Theater, with Maurice Schwartz in the principal part. Sidney Toler's new play, "The Exile," has at last found a haven, and is scheduled to open Monday night at the George M. Cohan Theater, with Eleanor Painter and Jose Ruben in the leads. Another Monday night opening is to be Salisbury Field's comedy, "Leander the Great," at the Empire, with Alice Brady.

"Kiki," the oldest show in town, which has been running since Nov.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Tells How She Did It with a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."

Look at this oil range that really burns gas

AT your first trial of the Florence Oil Range you will be astonished by the intensity of the heat. What you see is a clean, blue flame that you can turn high or low. But what you are burning is really gas—oil gas—the vapor given off by heated kerosene.

To light it you just turn the heat regulator and touch a match to the burner. The burners are large, the heat close to the cooking. There is neither smoke nor odor — just heat.

Have you seen this modern range?

No words will convince you of the advantages of this most modern of cooking stoves the way five minutes' examination of the range itself will. It is well worth a trip to the store or the nearest Florence dealer. There you can light the stove and actually feel its efficiency.

Convenience and beauty are two of the qualities of the Florence Oil Range, but there is a third, equally important.

It is most economical

Kerosene is easy to get and much less costly than other fuels. Unlike a coal stove, you use the Florence only when you need it for cooking. Turn a lever and it is out.

Won't you drop in at a store and look at this efficient, botherless, beautiful cook stove? Test it for yourself and see whether it does not belong in your kitchen. The store will be glad to render you every courtesy.

ALLEGED MYTHICAL RAILROAD RIDE BRINGS FRAUD CHARGE

Government Claims Man Stayed at Home, but Sought to Pad Expense Account.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—J. J. Williams of Birmingham, who recently appeared as a witness in a civil suit against the Southern Bell Telephone Co., has been charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

The charge against Williams grew out of the alleged padding of an expense account incurred while he was a witness in Federal court. It was charged that the defendant claimed that he purchased a railroad ticket from Riverside, N. J., to come to Birmingham for the case. The Government claims that Williams did not come here from New Jersey and was in Birmingham when he was subpoenaed.

London will see Mr. Arliss in the play next season. Irving Berlin sails in two weeks to assist in staging the London production of "The Music Box Review." Irma Marwick, who played the role on the road, has succeeded Marguerite Zender in the title part of "Elsie."

Cantor May Join Georgie White.

IMPORTANT figures in the Shubert ensemble whose contracts expire in the near future are Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson. There has been much talk of Jolson's signing with the Dillingham forces, but this is denied. He comes to the Winter Garden shortly for a return visit in "Bombo." Cantor, it is said, has been listening to the rustle of hostile banknotes, and may enlist under George White's banner. . . . Arthur Hopkins is to bring out a new play by Zoe Akins in the fall.

The theatrical business revived sharply this week, and many extra matinees were given. "If Winter Comes" has had capacity audiences, notwithstanding a reception from the critics which was far from enthusiastic. "Jack and Jill," equipped with virtually a new set of principals, picked up, and apparently will make a go of it. All the favorites did a vigorous business.

Arthur Hornblower Jr. has resigned from the Theater Magazine to become assistant managing director with the Charles Frohman Co. . . . The Harvard Dramatic Club will present Guitry's "Deranger" and Andryeff's "The Life of Man" during a week's engagement in New York, beginning April 16. . . . It is reported that Avery Hopwood is adapting a Parisian comedy for the use of Irene Bordini next season. . . . Rumor passes that Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and other mimes of the movies are planning a theater in Los Angeles in which they will act plays of the spoken word.

Equity Ass'n Raises Its Dues.

EFFECTIVE May 1, the Actors' Equity Association will raise its initiation fee from $5 to $25, and the annual dues to $18. However, members of tabloid companies will continue to pay $12 a year, and the initiation tax for actors in repertory, tent and tabloid shows will be $10. . . . May Vokes, having played three years steadily in "The Bat," will have the leading role in a farce called "Cold Feet," which goes into rehearsal next week. . . .

"Lightnin'" has passed its one hundredth performance in Boston, and has broken the house record of the Hollis Street Theater, which was set 24 years ago by Miss Maud Adams, playing in "The Little Minister." . . . The real name of Florence Eldridge of "Six Characters in Search of an Author," and "The Love Habit," is MacKechnie. She did newspaper work and wrote verses before going on the stage. . . . The Chauve-Souris has passed its five hundredth performance at the Century Roof. With the exception of "Kiki," which is two months its senior, this is the longest-lived entertainment in town.

"The Wheel," having met with little success, is to have a new name, and its locale will be changed from India to Monte Carlo. In this shape it will try, try again next fall. . . . That Molnar play which was first called "Fashions for Men" and then rechristened "Passions for Men," will be called "Peter and Paula" when it opens in Chicago. . . .

Elmer L. Rice says that from the moment he first conceived the idea of "The Adding Machine" until the manuscript was completed, exactly 17 days elapsed.

Channing Pollock has leased the Apollo Theater for the purpose of inaugurating his plan for a popular price theater, with a $1 top. Alexandra Carlisle will be his leading woman, and Frank Reicher is tentatively engaged as general director. The purpose is to produce, with star casts, brief engagements of plays which have been artistic successes, but financial failures.

Wreathes had scarcely been laid on the bier of "Pasteur" before Henry Miller began rehearsing a new play. It is "The Changeling," by Lee Wilson Dodd. It will open at Philadelphia April 16, and then proceed to San Francisco, where Mr. Miller will conduct his usual summer season. In the cast will be Ruth Chatterton, Blanche Bates and Laura Hope Crewes.

This Will Ward Off And Break Up Colds

Just a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin removes the congestion

THE two ailments that people generally regard as of the least importance are in reality the cause of most serious illnesses and of the greatest proportion of deaths.

They are constipation and common colds. Many doctors now believe that colds, tonsilitis, a touch of malaria will cause constipation, instead of constipation being their cause. The fact remains that you seldom have a cold without constipation, due to general congestion. The only way to avoid colds is to keep up your vitality. You usually catch cold in the winter if you are run down. Therefore in cold weather exercise more; eat more fatty foods; drink four to six glasses of water a day; keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

You are also less liable to colds if your system is free from the intestinal poisons of constipation, so empty the bowels regularly with a plain vegetable laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

At the first sign of a cold, at the first few warning sneezes, take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin and the congestion will be gone in a few hours. Don't wait until the cold has a grip on you. Mr. Henry Dean, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y., cured a stubborn cold in just that way, and Mrs. Alice Corbbrey of Haskell, Okla., uses it effectively for all the small ills of her family, such as constipation, biliousness, headaches, dizziness, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is safe to give to infants, and all children like it. Before you again resort to cold remedies containing narcotics try a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist will supply you, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

Theodore Roberts in "Grumpy," George Melford's "You Can't Fool Your Wife," Thomas Meighan in Rex Beach's "The Ne'er Do Well," and Frank Condon's "Hollywood," with 22 Paramount stars.

Jackie Coogan says he liked making "Daddy" above all his other pictures for the reason that "there are some scenes where I had to eat a lot of spaghetti and they had the real stuff." The diminutive First National star states further: "Also, I had to play the violin and I like music."

Richard Dix recentdy has been chosen to play opposite Betty Compson in "The Woman With Four Faces."

Dorothy Dalton has finished work in "Fog Bound," and is taking a short vacation before beginning a picture which Ralph Ince will direct.

Robert Wagner is preparing for his first effort as a Paramount director. Walter Hiers is to be the star. Hiers has been given a typical role—that of a young fellow in a small town who is clerk, porter and bellhop of the "hotel."

Leatrice Joy and Owen Moore will appear in a special Paramount production, which is to be started soon at the Lasky Studio under the direction of Charles Maigne. It is a screen version of Maximilian Foster's story, "The Silent Partner."

"Lawful Larceny" has been started by Allan Dwan at the Paramount Long Island studio. The story was adapted from Samuel Shipman's stage play by John Lynch. The featured players are Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi, Conrad Nagel and Lew Cody.

Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced screen star, has completed his 12 weeks' personal appearance tour in connection with Warner Brothers' "Heroes of the Street." His next picture will be "The Printer's Devil."

Claire Adams has been selected to play the leading roll in "The White Silence," a Northwoods story. Miss Adams is known as one of the most fearless girls of the screen. The police dog hero, Rin-Tin-Tin, is also in the picture.

Johnny Hines will be starred in "Little Johnny Jones," film version of the George M. Cohan stage play.

Speaking of Constance Talmadge, that vivacious First National star is a golf enthusiast, devoting all her time between pictures to the royal and ancient game. "A game a day keeps the doctor away," is her motto.

William V. Mong, who plays the role of the father in "Wandering Daughters," is said to have created the first scenario department ever instituted in the motion picture industry.

Andree Lafayette, the French beauty, who will play Trilby here on the screen, wanted to take a look at the statue of her famous ancestor in New York. Taxi drivers, policemen, hotel men, in fact, all kinds of people were appealed to for information as to where the statue could be found. Finally she telephoned the Park Bureau. The response was that they did not know, but finally the voice at the other end of the line secured the desired information with the result that Mlle. Lafayette "discovered" the statue in Union Square Park.

Allan Holubar has finished a picture called "Slander the Woman" and is now besieged, it is said, by folk who want him to make pictures directed against other evils besides that of slander. This week came a note suggesting that he dramatize and anathematize milady nicotine. As Holubar enjoys nothing so much as a good cigar he used the note to light a fresh Havana, it is said.

Gladys Brockwell has been cast to portray the role of "Mrs. Schofield" in a screen version of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," now being filmed.

Special dancing instructors have been added to the technical staff of Edwin Carewe's "The Girl of the Golden West." J. Warren Kerrigan and Sylvia Breamer are learning dances of 70 years ago in order to meet the demands of the script.

SPIRITS SELECT INDIAN'S GRAVE

Aid of Medicine Man Invoked at Rites of Girl.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

REDDING, Cal.—The body of Leaping Fawn, Pit River Indian girl, with her hunting knife and guns in the casket beside her, lies at rest in the Pit River Cemetery. The spirits of her ancestors were called upon to settle a tribal controversy as to the manner of her last long sleep.

Four score of the tribe assembled at the old stamping ground at Baird, near here, to hold the final rites. A question arose as to whether she should be buried in the tribal cemetery at Baird or the one at Pit. The braves and squaws could reach no solution, so the medicine men were called on. The spirits directed that Leaping Fawn should be buried in the Pit Cemetery.

Insure Sheriff's Force.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Employes of the Sheriff's office, including the Sheriff, have been insured for $1000 each on motion of the board of revenue. This is said to be the first time such action has been taken in the interest of the Sheriff and his deputies. The policies will be issued at the rate of $1.20 a person a month. For the entire force, numbering 83, this will cost $700 a year, it was stated.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to comb or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it; then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you may have. This simple remedy never fails.

What Kind of SEEDS do You Buy? Four-Flushers or Producers?

BEFORE you take a partner, what do you do? You find out all about him. Is he straight? Is he a four-flusher or a go-getter? What is his record? How will his work show up at the end of the year?

When you buy seed you take a partner. If your partner is a four-flusher you are done. No chance to change horses in mid-stream. You are hooked up for the whole season, for better or worse. You have got to use sense in choosing your garden partner.

How can you tell pure-bred seeds? Not by looks; you tell by reputation and pedigree. No breeder follows the laws of heredity closer than D. M. Ferry & Co. Imperfect plants are not allowed to reproduce on the Ferry Seed Farms. For size, shape, flavor, and for vitality and productiveness, plants must meet the most rigid standards. To be sure of pure-bred seeds buy Ferry's "at the store around the corner."

The price per paper is 10 cents—the smallest item of cost on a garden list. Where else can you get so much for your money? Call it insurance, or just good business, but buy Ferry's pure-bred Seeds.

For helpful garden hints; for tested receipts that every cook wants; for many evenings of pleasant reading, send for Ferry's Seed Annual. It is free.

Thousands of Women Are Now Converted

Black and White "Beauty Trail" Draws Many New Followers Each Year.

When the discoverers of the marvelous Black and White Beauty creations first announced to the girls and women of this country that they had at last perfected a means of really correcting bad comlexions, it was regarded as simply another wild claim which would explode when put to practical use.

But as each year has passed since that memorable day (in June, 1916), the figures show that large numbers of new converts have been added to the Black and White label, until now Black and White Beauty Creations are selling at the phenomenal rate of more than eight million packages a year.

When asked recently to give the reason for the tremendous popularity and big sale of Black and White Beauty Creations, one of the chemists said: "To us it is nothing out of the ordinary for such Black and White Beauty Creations as Cleansing Cream and Peroxide Cream to get such universal approval among girls and women everywhere. These enormous sales mean but one thing, and that is—Black and White Beauty Creations are actually accomplishing what women expect in caring for their complexion to keep it looking smooth and clear without a lot of trouble.

"One or two packages are sold in a neighborhood through the advertising and 20 more are bought there because the first ones bring such astonishing results. People are always ready to tell others about a method which helps them accomplish what other things failed to do."

Not a week passes that fails to bring out hundreds of statements from girls and women about the wonderful results they get in correcting bad complexion by using Black and White Cleansing and Peroxide Cream. This alone is sufficient to explain the phenomenal sale of the Black and White Beauty Creations, and is the best reason no power on earth can keep them off the dressing tables of girls and women all over the country.

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin, and there is only one safe and sure way, and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.

500,000 EXPECTED AT FOREST PARK OPERA THIS SEASON

EARLY RESERVATIONS EXCEED $56,000

Attendance Has Been Gaining Steadily Since Inception of Enterprise in 1919, Reaching 268,092 Last Year.

Encouraged by the demand for season reservations for the 1923 Municipal Opera cycle, which begins at the open-air theater, Forest Park, on Monday night, May 28, officials of the Municipal Theater Association predict that this summer's season—the fifth since the inception of the enterprise—will attract an attendance of more than 500,000, which will be nearly twice as large as that of last year, the most successful season thus far.

The popularity of the open-air opera venture has increased each summer. Eighty thousand persons attended the performances in 1919, when the season was six weeks. Receipts were $70,203.68. The first was the only season to show a deficit. This deficit was met by a number of guarantors who were reimbursed from profits of succeeding seasons.

In 1920 the attendance was 204,000. The second season included 48 performances in eight weeks. The third season, that of 1921, showed the least gain in attendance, with 220,360 persons attending the 46 performances. Two performances were prevented by rain.

Last summer another healthy increase was registered when 268,092 persons visited the Municipal Theater in the eight weeks the opera was being presented. Incidentally, last year's receipts, $207,468, were nearly three times those of the first year.

The continued increase in attendance and receipts is the more striking when it is considered that they occurred in years when theatrical conditions were generally poor.

At the close of last summer's season a number of patrons petitioned the Municipal Theater Association for a longer season in 1923 and this summer will be the first with 10 weeks of open-air opera. A new departure will also be made in the number of performances each week, the plan being to give seven each week instead of six, as heretofore. The final week, however, will be limited to five performances, the opera season closing on Friday night, Aug. 3, to allow the Style Show management time to arrange the stage of the theater for the fashion pageant which opens the following Monday night.

Arrangements have been made for the installation of a sound amplifier at the Municipal Theater, and this is expected to increase the demand for the cheaper seats at all performances. Officials of the theater association expect an average attendance of 7100 at each performance.

Season reservations for 1923 already exceed $56,000 and the opera management points out that subscribing in advance for the season is the safest method for St. Louisans who want to assure themselves of good locations each week. The offices of the Municipal Theater Association are in the Arcade Building, where information concerning reservations may be obtained.

The first opera scheduled for production this summer is Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta."

SHOT NEAR 800 GALLONS OF BEER

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Robert Gilbert, an alleged moonshiner, is recovering from wounds suffered near Lock 17, in Tuscaloosa County, when Federal Agents J. R. Roby, Tom Robinson and R. W. Buckner claim they caught him at a still.

Gilbert, who asserts he was unarmed, declared the officers fired at him when he denied their charges that he was manufacturing whisky. Federal agents say they discovered 800 gallons of beer and 15 gallons of distilled liquor near the place where the man was shot.

Here's a Musical Play Without a Chorus

LONDON, April 7.

UPON London has descended a musical play unlike any that through years either city has known. An Austrian, Edward Kunneke, wrote the music and, by word of the Manchester Guardian, trusts it to lengths unprecedented. He also puts the funny man in a place of considerable subordination and — would you believe it?—he banishes, dispenses with, sends packing, the chorus!

Think of it, a musical comedy self-reliant enough to come into the world unaided by the "beauty chorus"—those wonderful mannequins so precious to the heart of George Edwardes that he could not bear to expose them to the hard pavements of the streets of London, but insisted that they should always journey to his theater in hansom cabs! Is it to be imagined that any London composer would ever have cultivated hardihood enough to snap fingers at the funny man and at the "beauty chorus"?

Think how "exposed" one's musical score must stand in a theater where no joyful racket from the stage may be expected to distract attention from one's lack of detailed musicianship! "The Cousin from Nowhere" has only nine characters in it; they are, on the whole, orderly, well-behaved. Never did musical comedy move so quietly. The music can be listened to, scrutinized, so to say, at close quarters. There are no diversions from the stage, attracting the critical attention of music-lovers on the flank. Kunneke's score is indeed "exposed"; the music and not the play is the thing.

Offenbach and the Tango.

KUNNEKE plainly has been through the mill of serious composition. The light opera style, as it is known and loved on the Continent not only by the crowd but by serious musicians, asks that a score should be relavant to the action of the play; that it should be bound together by some broad logic of form; that tunes should possess quality as tunes, and also lend themselves to development; that the orchestra should be daintily broached, every instrument getting music to play that brings out its salient qualities.

The score of "The Cousin From Nowhere" satisfies all these requirements, and in a quite original way. Kunneke's melodic invention is not strikingly original, but he has a fine knack of emulation and ever so fluent a touch. At one moment he is giving us a dexterous study in the opera bouffe manner which is Offenbach all over. But from this old-world manner Kunneke will modulate with the most winning ingenuity into the raciest of idioms of light music of today. A superb tango comes through a transition of this kind, achieved with a swiftness and delicacy that intrigue you vastly.

Kunneke, though an Austrian composer, has broken away from the waltz rhythm. He can write a waltz at the right moment; unlike Oscar Straus and Lehar, he is not a slave to it. The range of melodic forms he exploits—forms ancient and modern—is astonishing, but more astonishing the art with which he gets them into a semblance of a single genre. The rippling, orchestral movement at the rise of the curtain, with a graceful little theme tossed from instrument to instrument the while characters on the stage interchange quick conversation in neatly dovetailed phrases of melody—here was a stretch of music which promised another "Dame Blanche."

Wasn't Sullivan's Gift.

THE promise of this opening was never quite fulfilled, even though in the lower plane of musical comedy we received uncommon blessings. Kunneke's orchestration is always expert and ingenious, and in one song it has even a poetic richness of color. In ensembles, themes used earlier in the scores are transformed with a piquant sense of the theater.

Kunneke has not that gift of comic characterization which enable Sullivan so thoroughly to differentiate in his music between Pooh Bah and Ko-Ko that if one of these were ever to sing a phrase of the other's music the effect would be incongruous. Nor has he the knack of making his score change its color with every change in the atmosphere and color of the stage setting.

But we must not expect all the light composer's graces in any one man's score. Kunneke has enough of his own to be going on with, and immensely welcome they are in our theater, just now. The play itself was, in the original German, possibly a fragrant and sentimentally fantastic variation on "She Stoops to Conquer."

Men Admire Youthful Women---Women of Beauty and Activity

A Vital Message to Those Women—
Who Find Themselves "Slipping"!
Whose Husbands Are Losing Interest!
Who Have Never Had Many "Beaus"!

CADOMENE — THE TONIC SUPREME!

Men have ever admired the youthful woman—the woman who keeps her beauty; her sparkling spirit; her keen alert mind; her supreme health and graceful strength. Every day you meet and admire just such women—women who simply seem to glide through life, even though it be filled with cares. No matter how much they have to do; how many children there are to feed, clothe and care for, they seem to do it all so easily, so cheerfully, and never look tired and worn out.

Have the Years Told Upon You?

Have worries and cares made a mark on your youth? Do you long for the beauty, the love, the health, and happiness that were once yours? Take stock of yourself! Is your appetite feeble and do you suffer with indigestion? Are your nights restless and do you get up in the mornings all tired out? Are you listless—devoid of ambition—do you have a feeling of "what's the use" as you grind through the unhappy day? Do your feet drag and does 10 minutes of work make you seek rest—trembling, weak and nervous? Do the joyful cries of children at play make you feel like you want to scream sometimes?

Your mirror will tell you the rest. Have your eyes lost their old-time sparkle? Have those cheeks lost the glowing bloom of youth? Has your once beautiful hair become thin, flat and lifeless; and has your neck and shoulders lost the curves of youth?

Cadomene—The Tonic Supreme!

Cadomene is not just an ordinary stimulant like many so-called tonics. Cadomene builds you up in a permanent way! By aiding nutrition and by building up the blood until it is rich and red, Cadomene aids in the restoration of the nerves, cells and tissues of the entire body. Just a week or two after you start taking Cadomene you should notice the wonderful change for the better. You should notice the sparkle returning to your eyes; the healthy bloom to your cheeks; the sunshine and life in your hair; and the graceful curves to your form. You should notice that you don't seem to get tired any more; that your work is no longer irksome, but a pleasure; that the children don't get on your nerves like they used to; that you eat better; sleep better; feel better. Your husband and friends will be amazed at the remarkable change. Within two weeks they will remark how much better you are looking. And that's just the start! For when those nerves, those tissues, those cells are completely restored—then you'll know what health, beauty and happiness really means! Cadomene Tablets are sold and highly recommended by all good druggists—everywhere.

Sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Judge & Dolph drug stores and all druggists.

MOUNTAIN SLAYING REMAINS MYSTERY AFTER 12 MONTHS

Court Releases Two Suspects in Case of Man Found Dead in Cumberland.

SCOTTSBORO, Ala.—The death of Absalom Dolberry remains an unsolved mystery by Jackson County authorities.

When the body of the man was found at the foot of the Cumberland mountains in this county, after a search of several days, officials arrested Sam Gentle and Charles Brandon, who were seen with the dead man on the day he was missed. This was about a year ago.

But at the session of the Circuit Court here recently charges of second degree murder against the two men were dismissed.

There were no signs of violence on the body of Dolberry, physicians stated after an autopsy.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

Many opinions about the Taos (N. M.) painters and their pictures are vouchsafed from all directions. It is thought by some that the work of the painters from this colony is the most vitally American work being done today. Others consider this group of paitners too limited in sphere and subject, while still others believe a radical influence to be invading the colony which will sooner or later have its effect upon the majority of work produced there. All these and yet other beliefs have certain foundations that can be noted in the display of recent paintings by members of the Taos Society of Artists, which is now being held at the Kocian Galleries. Unquestionably, the general subject and atmosphere treated by these men is essentially American. Portraying a purely American subject in the frank, direct American fashion sets the work of several of the Taos painters in a class alone. It is conceded by a great number of musicians the world over that the only national music possible for America (that is, which is free from European influence) is that derived from the Indians, and the negroes in our cotton states. A similar idea might hold good in the art of painting—that the remains of the old Indian life in the West constitute the only purely American scenes today.

Of the Taos painters, Blumenschein, Berninghaus and Ufer seem to have gotten the closer to the essence of the thing. Although their conceptions and treatments differ, their works contain the underlying significance and greater understanding behind the relation of that departing race of early Americans and the present-day American so-called civilization. These men, at least, do not powder and perfume their subjects. The carefully arranged campfires and the tailor-made costume girdlings of the fastidiously posed Indian are gratefully absent. They very mercifully leave their Indians unmanicured, even at the expense of less public patronage.

Might of Red Man Indicated.

We will not soon forget Mr. Berninghaus' two pictures, "Sun Showers" and "Taos Ball Game," which were shown at the exhibiton of St. Louis Artists' works at the Artists' Guild last December. In his picture of the sidelines of the Taos ball game, the artist's appreciation of the situation of the erstwhile savages interestedly regarding an example of our present-day national sport, is enjoyable. In some of Berninghaus' other pictures are shown the mountains and villages, the surroundings of the Indians, and in each he has pictured the strength which in some way indicates the might of the red man.

With an imperative force, E. L. Blumenschein gathers together the picturesque simplicity of the Indians, the naivete of their pagan faith, and the pathos of their lack of effectual resistance against the insistence of Christianity, and presents the combination in powerful, colorful form before the modern world. Of the entire show at the downtown gallery, the two paintings by this artist stand out probably more forcibly than all others. In his "Ranchos Church," the walls of a mission are seen against conventionalized clouds that hang low in the sky. From the left comes a deluge of sunlight that slants down the stucco walls of the edifice and envelops the small band of people that walks sadly along the roadway outside the church. The yellow light from behind shines upon the brightly colored shawls covering the heads of the marching figures. Down the stone roadway they come, slowly and solemnly. The undercurrent of the pathos of fine, free spirits being slowly bent and broken is strong and certain.

Powerful Subject Well Portrayed.

No less intense is his "New Mexico," in which we see a similar symbolism and feeling of the modern process of alleged civilized reform. In the center and immediate foreground is the splendid figure of an Indian. The attitude is symbolic of dejection. With weariness from useless struggle and with final recognition of the futility of fighting, the fine muscles are relaxed, the shoulders slackened, the head bent wearily to one side in resignation. Behind this figure, in the broad fields where once the red man ruled supreme, small allegorical figures are seen. One, before the rest, plods heavily forward bearing a clumsy cross. Behind him comes a band of subdued Indians, cheerlessly following. The exodus seems almost the extinction of the race. The manner in which the artist has portrayed his powerful subject is characteristic of the strength with which the subject was recognized and grasped.

A different trend is taken by Birger Sandzen. With no thought of Indian portrayal, he plunges headlong into an expression of masculine strength through the medium of powerful paint. He is considered among the radicals as well his broad bravado places him. However, it is a healthy departure from the beaten path, and totally sane compared with the absurdities perpetrated by one B. J. O. Nordfeldt. No doubt Mr. Nordfeldt could explain his preposterous productions satisfactorily to himself, and perhaps even give them a legitimate excuse for existence. However, to the shallow intelligence of the "outer world," they are hardly less nor more than Little Johnny's first adventure with a paint box. Nordfeldt is not alone in his weird picture-makings. There is a small world filled with those who "seek their souls" amid these topsy-turvy houses, three-leafed trees, dry blue waters and stupid perspectives that lead nowhere. What, if anything, is it all about? Why not depart from such reminiscences of the cartoons for which Goldberg has become famous? Why not change climate, and try the land where the heat is less dangerous and where sun-stroke less frequent? The radicals are a great little people, and somewhere, sometime they are going to produce something which may somehow overcome all this.

Charm in Lillian Genth's Paintings.

Besides the several beautiful pictures which were recently brought from the East, interest at the Newhouse Gallery centers around two paintings by Lillian Genth. The titles of her pictures, "The Golden Rule" and "The Song of the Flute," perhaps suggest their delightful charm. Nothing, however, could suggest their entire loveliness, the elusive delicacy of the handling of the nude, the fresh, young spirit that pervades this artist's work. "The Song of the Flute" is a gentle lyric of springtime's charm. On a soft, sweet woodland carpet of leaves and grasses, the Spirit of Spring rests in beautiful abandon. Patches of sunlight sifting through the tangle of leaves overhead glance over her young, supple body. Leaning carelessly against the trunk of the great tree, whose branches canopy the scene, is the young flute player. The dappled sunlight seems to shift and change upon the two figures caressingly, as if soon the lovely "Spring" would be fast asleep, giving place to Summer, Autumn and Winter until her season of next year.

"The Golden Rule" is a tender story of youth's gentleness. A slender young girl, with shining hair, bends solicitously above what probably is a young bird which has fallen from its nest in the trees above the stream. Her rescue of the tiny woodland creature is as poignantly sweet as is her own youthful loveliness standing there in the water amid the trees and spring's soft winds.

These two pictures are so touching in their ardent appeal, they should be considered without thought or relation to any irrelevant surroundings. They are beautiful idyls which are the breath of fragrant poetry.

POLA'S "BELLA DONNA," "JAZZMANIA," "FABIOLA," "GLORIOUS ADVENTURE"

orchestra occupies the stage at the Grand Central in another concert of classical jazz. The presentation includes special novelties and lighting effects, with selections from the following numbers: "By the Shallimar," "March Slave," "Honolulu Eyes," "You've Got to See Your Mamma Every Night," "Runnin' Wild," and "Down in Maryland."

At the West End Lyric and Capitol the features include special jazz programs by Dave Silverman and Billy Kitts and the presentation of Neal Burns' latest educational comedy. Lionel Barrymore in "The Face in the Fog" will be featured at the West End Lyric the last three days of the week, beginning Wednesday.

"The Glorious Adventure," a photoplay in colors, starring Lady Diana Manners, is the week's attraction at the Odeon.

The adventures of a woman who married an arch criminal make up the major plot of the picture. The marriage takes place on the night before the criminal is to be legally executed. This custom was a common practice in the days in which the story is laid. Women after their marriage were relieved of their indebtedness which were in turn assumed by their husbands. Creditors were unable to collect debts of this kind from felons about to die and the death of the ill-fated "husband" gave the wife her opportunity to start life anew, free from the obstacle of debt.

In the "Glorious Adventure" the tables are turned on the woman in the case, however, the convict being freed in the course of the great fire of London which occurs while arrangements for the execution are being completed. How the situation presented through the release of the doomed criminal is met by the woman works itself out in the story.

Ben Turpin in "The Shriek of Araby" is added as an attraction, together with music by Rader's Odeon Orchestra.

The week's picture feature at the Delmonte is Goldwyn's "Lost and Found," written by Carey Wilson and directed by R. A. Walsh. This is the picture to make which Goldwyn sent the entire cast and a boatload of equipment to Tahiti, in the South Seas. The action takes place on that island and on board the ship of the notorious slave trader, Capt. Blackbird, acted by House Peters. All of the scenes, with the exception of some of the interiors, were photographed in Tahiti and on board a ship chartered for the purposes of the picture. Director Walsh had several big mob scenes in which several thousand natives took part.

The story concerns a wealthy planter named Cochran whose wife deserts him for the island Governor and takes her eldest daughter, Lorna, with her, leaving the baby, Madge. The latter is crippled as the result of an accident due to the mother's haste to leave. Cochran becomes embittered, swears vengeance upon all women and takes to the seas as Capt. Blackbird, in command of a slave ship. Years later the woman and her daughter are deserted by the Governor. Blackbird comes in contact with his daughter, not knowing who she is. He forcibly marries her to Dingo, the scoundrelly mate on his ship before discovering her identity. When he learns she is his daughter he refuses to let her go, and Dingo brings on a terrific fight between the whites and the natives on the boat.

Bafunno's Clown Band is also on the program in a musical jazz novelty, together with the usual short reel subjects.

"Fabiola," the screen adaptation of the novel by Cardinal Wiseman, opens tonight at the Shubert Jefferson Theater, this performance marking its first appearance in St. Louis.

The popularity of "Fabiola" in book form has been tremendous, the universality of its appeal having been rarely equalled. In the film production this inspiring tale of the supreme courage of a small group of Christians in pagan Rome is said to have been told with more realism than has ever been possible in the book or dramatic forms.

The splendor of imperial pagan courts, the vast grandeur of the Coliseum, and the sweep of mighty mobs, are said to make the production impressive.

Anthony Novelli, famous Italian actor, takes the part of Fulvius, the Asiatic spy. The title role of Fabiola is played by Elaine di Sangro, a beauty of pure Roman type, said to be the most popular screen actress in Italy. Adelaide Poletti has the role of Agnes, the innocent Christian girl, beloved by every reader of Cardinal Wiseman's famous tale. Special music has been composed to accompany this production by Alexander Henneman of Washington, D. C., teacher and lecturer on music in Eastern universities. The work is wholly original, no interpolated tunes of other composers having been used.

"The Streets of New York" and a revival of the Fox film version of "Salome," with Theda Bara in the leading role, are the week's features at the Liberty.

"The Streets of New York" deals with a banker who finds himself financially embarrassed. He is saved from ruin by a sea captain who deposits $100,000 for safe keeping. The sea captain dies and then follows a long seige of blackmail at the hands of the banker's clerk. The picture is a photo dramatization of the play of the same title and features Barbara Castleton and Edward Earl in principal roles. Others in the cast are Anders Randolf, Dorothy Mackaill and Leslie King.

"Salome" is a pretentious Fox superproduction. It created a sensation when first produced.

"Down to the Sea in Ships," a scenically beautiful picture in which the capture of a whale is a big thriller, goes into its second week at the Pershing.

"Driven," a Universal-Jewel superfeature, directed by Charles Brabin, and which has been accounted as one of the greatest pictures of the year, is the offering this week at the downtown Rivoli theater.

"Driven" is a story of primitive life in the Blue Ridge Mountains, the action taking place 90 miles from a railroad in a part of the United States where elemental passions rule and the law of force is the only law recognized. It is a domestic tragedy in which a mother sacrifices to the revenue agents her husband and three sons in order that her "baby" son and the girl he loves may be permitted to find the happiness that has been denied to her.

Emily Fitzroy has the pathetic and heroic role of the mother who lives only for her youngest son, who is a thing apart from his brutal father and equally brutal brothers.

Besides Miss Fitzroy the leading roles are in the hands of an all-star cast including Elinor Fair, Burr McIntosh, Charles H. Mack, George Bancroft, Leslie Stowe and Ernest Chandler. It was photographed from Jay Gelzer's story, "The Flower of the Flock."

Why Do Grocers Succeed?

Nineteen out of twenty don't.

Merchandising experts—and inquiring housewives—are asking why the 95% fail. Chances are, the housewives will come nearer the truth than the experts.

Straws show which way the wind blows. Sherlock Holmes reads in a bit of cigar ash the habits of the smoker. And any housewife can read the habits of her grocer in so small a thing as a paper bag.

The housewife knows how much pains her grocer takes to buy clean foodstuffs. She sees, right in his store, how careful he is to keep them clean, protected by glass and screens.

But in the third step of service—delivering them clean—some grocers are inclined to slip. They forget the importance of protecting all foodstuffs in clean, sanitary Victory Food Containers.

A little thing? Perhaps. But the final touch of clean, up-to-date grocer service. So why—unless through thoughtlessness — should the grocer overlook protecting all her purchases with the world's cleanest, strongest, most sanitary food container?

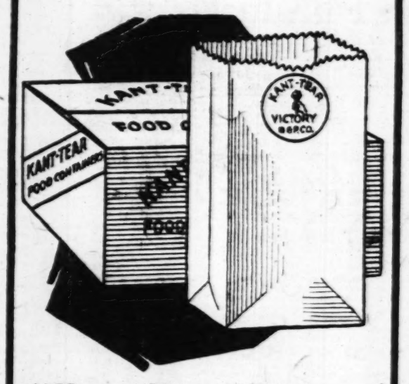
The housewife knows that Victory Food Containers cost no more than ordinary bags. She feels entitled to this crowning touch of service. She may not mention this to her grocer, but she draws her own conclusions.

Remember, you are entitled to have ALL your groceries protected in clean, sanitary Victory Food Containers.

Victory Food Containers come in three popular brands. All three reach the dealer in sanitary, sealed cartons, as pictured below.

"Classic" Square

Best of the square containers on the market today. Like the Kant-Tear and the Pedigree, it comes to the dealer in sanitary, sealed cartons.



"Kant-Tear"

Universal Standing Automatic. This popular Victory Food Container is strongly built to stand wear and tear on the counter.

"Pedigree"

Universal Standing Automatic. Known to the trade as "The Food Container De Luxe."

Each of these three popular Victory Food Containers is recognized as the best of its kind on the market today.

$1500 a Day for Girl Who but Recently Was an Orphan Waif in Philippines

SOLDIER FATHER'S LAND IN OKLAHOMA IN CENTER OF GREAT OIL STRIKE

Romantic Story of Dorothy Carmichael, Whose Identity Was Established by United States After a Thorough Investigation—Her Younger Brother, Who Would Be a Joint Heir to Fortune, Has Disappeared in the Jungles of the Western Islands.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

TONKAWA, Ok., April 7.

WHEN Bugal Carmichael lay dying in Manilla his one concern was for his 3-year-old daughter, Eusebia, too young to understand why he did not come out of the hospital and play with her. The child's mother had gone her way and he did not know where she was or whether she still lived. His people, in far-off America, had never been notified of his marriage in the Philippines and he did not know whether they would take into their hearts this pitiful little trophy of his life's romance even if she should ever find her way to them, which seemed more than doubtful.

But fortune has been wondrous kind to the child Eusebia. She who, at 3 years of age, was virtually a waif, dependent upon the free-handed hospitality of her father's friends, at 16 is an Oklahoma oil heiress well on the way toward becoming fabulously rich. The fantastic whirligig of fate is flipping wealth into her lap from the Carmichael oil wells at Three Sands at the rate of $1500 a day. The value of the quarter section of which she is half owner, on the basis of present production, is $36,000,000. Rechristened Dorothy as part of the process of perfecting her Americanization, and unspoiled by fortune, her education goes forward apace and she is being prepared for the part she is to play among the favored of earth's children.

But fate has not been so kind to another child. Eusebia had a brother. He was 18 months old when Carmichael died. If he still lives he is an orphaned waif in the Philippines, unaware of the millions which would be his as co-heir with his sister, and with scant chance that he will ever be found or know himself for the putative millionaire that he is.

Question of a Son's Existence

Carmichael's sister, Mrs. Sarah Pettit, who has taken Dorothy Eusebia into her heart on the established status of niece and shares equally with her the wealth that the Carmichael wells are producing, is convinced that her brother never had a son. A Government inquiry, she says, made after the death of her father, John Carmichael, in connection with the administration of his estate, established that there was no living heir in the Philippines.

But the question has been raised anew by an inquiry directed to the Bureau of Insular Affairs, at Washington, by Carl F. Truitt, president of the Security Abstract and Title Co. of Hawkirk, Ok., as an apparent measure of precaution in the matter of transactions involving land, growing out of the oil development on the Carmichael holdings.

All the information given Carmichael is that Bugal Carmichael left two children, a boy and a girl, and that the bureau has no information as to the fate of the former. Truitt's inquiry has been referred to the Governor-General of the Philippines with a request that he ascertain the whereabouts of the boy, if still living.

Bugal Carmichael was in Montana at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. He was under age and wrote to his father, in Oklahoma, for permission to enlist. John Carmichael did not give his permission but the letter he sent in reply to the one from his son was delayed and before it reached Montana the boy, impatient of the delay, contrived somehow to get into the service.

He was sent to the Philippines, and took part in the campaign there. When the war was over and his term of enlistment expired he elected to remain in the Philippines, taking employment in the customs service.

His Romance With Justa

It may be that romance had something to do with his decision to stay. When Justa came into his life is not clear, but it is probable that he first found favor in her eyes when he wore the uniform of the Americano soldier.

Justa is said to have been of English and Spanish parentage, but had known only the islands, and in type and temperament, if one may judge from the characteristics stamped upon her child, was a true daughter of these.

It was the not unusual romance of the American soldier and the native woman. He married her and they had their little home in the colony and were happy. Eusebia was born. If Bugal Carmichael, after the manner of men, had hoped for a son, he was more than satisfied with the tiny Eusebia, replica of her mother. In the light of the meager information his devotion seems to have been greatest to his little daughter even after a son, the second child, was born.

After the birth of the boy there came an end to the romance. There was a quarrel and the woman went away. One story is that she took both children and that Carmichael followed her and took the girl from her but suffered her to keep the boy. Another is that she took only the boy with her. However that was, the woman and her son disappeared, after which Carmichael and the tiny Eusebia made their home with Michael Keoghan, who, when his soldiering days were over, had taken a wife and a claim near Manilla and had settled upon it with the purpose of making his wife's people his people and remaining there always.

Bugal Carmichael sickened and was taken to the hospital at Manilla. When he was dying he committed Eusebia to Keoghan's care and Keoghan promised that she should be brought up and educated as her father wished her to be.

This was the story Keoghan told, three years later, when he brought the child to this country. The records at Washington give a different detail, in the form of a report of the acting superintendent of the Philippines General Hospital at Manilla, that in 1911 Eusebia was brought to the hospital by a native woman, who said that she was the grandmother of the child and that the mother was dead, and that Keoghan agreed to care for Eusebia until Carmichael's family in America was heard from.

Whichever way it was, the helpless Eusebia was cared for after her father's death by Keoghan and his wife.

The Government, as a matter of routine, notified his father and sister of Carmichael's death and called their attention to the fact that there was a child. Mrs. Pettit wrote that her brother had never mentioned having a child and that she would not believe it was his or accept it as such unless supplied with positive proof.

Things did not look very promising for little Eusebia, playing by Michael Keoghan's door. Proof of that kind was sometimes difficult to obtain under conditions on the islands following the war. But the plight of the child, in danger of being denied whatever heritage might be hers, appealed to Maj. Shelton of the Governor-General's staff. He made careful inquiries among the military officials and obtained from them such confirmation, now a part of the records at Washington, as to leave no doubt that Eusebia was the daughter of Bugal Carmichael and Justa. On the authority of this information Maj. Shelton advised that he did not think there was any doubt about Eusebia being the daughter of Carmichael.

The record of the case at Washington includes the statement of Keoghan that Carmichael had two children, that his wife left him, taking both children with her, that Carmichael searched until he found her, took the girl from her and placed her in Keoghan's charge, but made no effort to recover the boy, then 18 months old.

Mrs. Pettit, convinced by the investigation that the child was her brother's, wrote that she was willing to support Eusebia and requested that she be placed in a Presbyterian mission. The other child, she wrote, could be kept by the mother. Things were beginning to look a little brighter for Eusebia. She had a "Tia Sara" in the States who seemed disposed to at least accept auntly responsibilities. That did not mean a great deal to Eusebia, the little girl, but it means a great deal, now, to Dorothy Carmichael, heiress.

It was then that Eusebia became Dorothy. That Eusebia name was a little too much for Mrs. Pettit. She stipulated, in assuming responsibility for her brother's child, that she be christened Dorothy, with only the concession that Eusebia might be retained as a middle name. So Eusebia became Dorothy then and has been Dorothy ever since.

Dorothy was placed in the Harris Memorial Training School, which is under the auspices of the Presbyterian Missionary Board. Mrs. Pettit signified her approval of this arrangement and from time to time sent, through the Bureau of Insular Affairs, clothing for her "little niece," as she referred to Dorothy in her letters, and money for her support.

Carmichael's body was sent back, reaching here June 17, 1911, and is buried here.

Eusebia Comes to America

The reports which Mrs. Pettit received from the training school were favorable and as the days passed her interest in the little girl grew until the purpose was formed to have her brought over as soon as it could be arranged. It was necessary to wait until someone was coming to whom she could be safely entrusted. Three years passed. Then Keoghan decided to come back to the States and with the co-operation of Government officials the necessary arrangements were made. So Eusebia said goodby to her mother's land and sailed away to her father's people.

It was about the middle of August, 1914, when Keoghan arrived with Dorothy and surrendered her to her grandfather and aunt. The child, speaking English as well as Spanish, took quick possession of the hearts of her grandfather, taking the place of the son he had lost, and her aunt, who had no child of her own.

When John Carmichael died it was necessary, as a preliminary to the administration of the estate, to ascertain whether Bugal Carmichael had left a son who would be entitled to share in the estate. Mrs. Pettit says the Government, at her request, made another investigation which established that there was no son. The estate, consisting of a half section of valuable bottom land and a quarter section of unproductive land four miles north of Tonkawa, was divided equally between Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy.

Fred English, a Tonkawa banker, was appointed Dorothy's guardian and for a little girl she was well provided for, especially as compared to what might have been her lot in the Philippines.

Then the Discovery of Oil

Then came the discovery of oil near the unproductive quarter-section which Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy Carmichael had inherited in equal parts from John Carmichael. The development quickly spread to the Carmichael property and the first wells sunk gave such promise that a one-fourth interest in the royalty was sold for a small fortune.

The Carmichael property, now in the center of the field, has been the most productive in the field. The output now averages 12,000 barrels a day. And that means that Dorothy Carmichael, the little Eusebia whose prospects in life a dozen years ago might have been considered ill worth a peso, now has a daily income of $1500 which is growing day by day.

But let nobody suppose that this sudden wealth has spoiled the soldier's daughter. She and her aunt live unpretentiously in a modest bungalow in Tonkawa. It was Dorothy, very demure, who opened the door on a rainy Sunday afternoon and called her aunt to answer the

Tragedy of North Dakota Farm Boy Who Was Beaten to Death in Florida Peonage Camp

YOUTH, WHO WAS "SEEING THE WORLD," SENTENCED FOR STEALING RIDE ON A TRAIN

When Martin Tabert Fell Ill of Swamp Fever, He Was Denied Attention by Brutal Guards and Was Frequently Flogged Into Insensibility Because He Couldn't Do His Tasks—Governor of North Dakota Demands Redress of Governor of Florida and Latter Responds by Recommending a Thorough Investigation which Legislature Approves — Money Family Sent Youth to Pay Fine and Come Home Returned by Sheriff Though That Official Knew Where He Was.

MARTIN TABERT,
North Dakota youth who was beaten to death in a Florida convict labor camp, where he was incarcerated for riding on a train without a ticket.

LANGDON, N. D., April 7.

OUT of the death in a Southern convict camp of a farmer boy who started out to "see the world" has arisen the extraordinary situation of North Dakota, as a State, protesting to Florida, as a State, against the conditions which made the tragedy possible.

Out of this protest in turn has sprung the probability not only that the law will avenge the boy's death, but that Florida will bring to an end the "peonage" system that has involved thousands of wayfarers in that State through many years. Gov. Hardee has, indeed, declared his purpose of demanding this action at the present session of the Florida Legislature.

The farmer boy who was the first cause of this unusual series of events was Martin Tabert of a well-known family of Munich, Cavalier County. He died Feb. 1, 1922, in a lumber camp in Leon County, Fla. For six months his death meant nothing to anybody but his family. Then was begun an investigation which brought about these results:

North Dakota solemnly charged that Tabert came to his end as a result of the forced convict labor system legalized in Florida.

North Dakota solemnly charged that he died as the result of "abuse and torture," inflicted upon him while he was unjustly held in a state of practical slavery. Tabert's friends here say he was beaten to death by a heavy whip in the hands of a convict-labor "whipping boss."

North Dakota solemnly demanded of Florida that it should "make impossible the commission of such abuses in the future;" in other words, that Florida repeal its convict-labor laws at once.

Both houses of the Florida Legislature have voted to name a joint legislative committee to make a searching investigation of the case. This committee would be authorized to call upon Gov. R. A. Nestos of North Dakota for all evidence in his hands relating to Tabert's death.

Fate Might Befall Any Youth

That Martin Tabert was only a helpless victim of a barbarous industrial system and was not a wandering incorrigible, paying the penalty for his own moral turpitude, has been well established. The fate that befell the youth, investigators declare, was one that might befall any boy away from home who chances to run afoul of any trivial regulation prevailing in a state that permits such a pernicious institution as a peonage system to exist.

Obviously, the offense of "bumming" a ride on a train is not one involving moral turpitude. At least no youth who has been far from home and without money to pay his railroad fare has ever considered it such. It is a reasonably safe guess that three-fourths or more of the youths who have strayed from under parental roofs out of desire to "see the world" have been guilty of it. And, in most communities, the authorities are inclined to wink at the offense, rather than take steps to arrest the offenders, much less send them to their deaths in a convict labor camp.

It is readily apparent, then, that where "bumming" a ride may incur such drastic penalties, any other misstep, however slight, by a lad out of reach of friends and influence, might plunge him into bondage just as appalling. Where statute books are loaded with several thousand laws, as they are in most states, it is manifestly possible to plaster enough charges against a friendless and moneyless boy to keep him in servitude for the rest of his natural life, even if it should be of longer duration than was that of Martin Tabert. Sleeping on a park bench, walking on the grass or arguing with a policeman might send him to the swamps to labor until he died from his floggings or until his masters had derived enough profit from his toil.

And what mother's son traveling "on his own" might not sleep on a park bench, walk on the grass or argue with a policeman? For that reason this extraordinary case has a peculiar appeal to all mothers with wandering boys—for what happened to Martin Tabert in faraway Florida might happen also to their boys.

The story of Martin Tabert, as told here in Langdon, the county seat of Cavalier County, is this:

In the fall of 1921, Martin Tabert, 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tabert of Munich, decided he would spend the remainder of the season in the central states and the winter in the South. Up to that time nearly all of his life had been spent on the farm a few miles from Munich, a small town in the southwestern part of Cavalier County. He had attended the public schools during the school years and the remainder of his time had been spent on the farm. He knew little of the world that lay beyond the prairie farms of North Dakota.

Some of the brothers and sisters previously had left home to live or homestead in Manitoba or some other part of Canada. One brother, Otto, had been called for service in the World War and saw active service in the Argonne and many other places on the western front. With some of the members of the family gone, the high price of labor and big expense accounts, it was necessary for Martin to assume a man's share of the work on the big 500-acre farm long before he had become of age.

Set Out to See the World

Conditions changed in 1921, and with the brothers home and telling of new countries and adventures, Martin felt that he was not so badly needed at home and started out to enjoy a trip.

All went well with him until he reached Florida, and there found a labor condition different from anything known to him, and he shortly "went broke." He was then a stranger in a strange land, with no one to appeal to for help or advice. Instead of turning back and working his way home, or writing for help, he evidently decided to go on. In doing that he made the fatal mistake of riding on a train in Florida without a ticket.

On Dec. 15, 1921, he was arrested by a Deputy Sheriff in Leon County, Fla., for stealing a ride on a railroad train. He was then taken before an official, who fined him $25, or in lieu of payment sentenced him to serve 90 days. He was unable to pay the fine and wired his brother. The telegram sent is as follows:

Tallahassee, Fla.—John Tabert, Munich, N. D.—In trouble and need $50 to pay fine for vagrancy. Please wire money in care of Sheriff. MARTIN TABERT.

Upon receipt of the telegram, John Tabert took it to the parents and it was decided to write, send him more money than called for, and urge him to come home. On Dec. 21, 1921, a letter was sent to him, registered, and in care of Sheriff J. R. Jones. The letter contained a draft on the First National Bank of Munich for $75. According to the postmark on the letter it was received by the Sheriff at Tallahassee, Fla., on Dec. 23. It was returned to Mrs. Ben Tabert at Munich. On the face of it was stamped, "Returned to writer unclaimed from Tallahassee, Fla." There was also written on the envelope, "Rt'd by request of Sheriff. Party gone."

GOV. R. A. NESTOS
of North Dakota, who, on behalf of the State, is demanding redress in the Tabert case and is suggesting that Florida repeal its labor laws which make peonage possible. The Florida Legislature has voted to name a committee to investigate the charges and call on Gov. Nestos for all evidence in his hands relating to Tabert's death.

The return of the letter thus postmarked caused the Tabert family at Munich to believe that Martin had found some way of securing a release and had left that place. Being arrested was an entirely new thing to happen to a member of the Tabert family, and the incident caused them considerable worry, but they did not know where to write or what to do. They could only wait, but before many weeks had passed they received the following letter:

Clara, Fla., Feb. 2, 1922.—E. D. Tabert, Munich, N. D. Dear Sir: This is to advise that Martin Tabert, who was sentenced Dec. 15, in Tallahassee, Leon County, for a term of three months, died in our camp on the 1st of fever and other complications. This company has all convicts from above county leased, is the reason he came to be here.

We were unable to get any trace of his people until he was buried here yesterday. We understand you are his brother.

For your information, the boy was given a Christian burial in a cemetery near here and had a minister officiate in same. We regret that the boy was so unfortunate, and please accept our sympathy in your sad bereavement. Yours very truly,

PUTNAM LUMBER CO.

Upon receipt of the above letter, the Tabert family realized that something most unusual had happened. They knew nothing of the convict labor system in vogue in Florida; they knew that the money for the honorable release of Martin had been sent; they could not imagine that the Sheriff of Leon County, Fla., or the Putnam Lumber Co. would deceive them.

Company Blames Sheriff

They decided to seek some advice in the matter, and went to Attorney Norris H. Nelson of Munich. He immediately wrote to Sheriff Jones and the Putnam Lumber Co. for further information and received the following replies:

Clara, Fla., Feb. 15, 1922.—Attorney Norris Nelson, Munich, N. D. Dear Sir: Replying to yours of the 9th, with reference to the death of Martin Tabert.

Beg to advise that we have all able-bodied men prisoners from Leon County leased for a term of one year. We, of course, have to clothe, feed and house these prisoners. About once a month the State Prison Inspector goes through our camp and makes careful inspection. We also furnish a doctor. When Martin was first taken sick the doctor advised that he would not take his medicine regularly. He first had malaria fever, which terminated in pneumonia. He was not sick but a short time and one of the prisoners was taken off the work to wait on him.

Martin Tabert was sentenced in Tallahassee on Dec. 15 to serve a term of three months. We do not understand why the Sheriff of Leon County should have told the people he had gone and did not accept the money for his release. This matter you will have to take up with him.

Trusting we have given you the information you desire, we are, yours very truly,

PUTNAM LUMBER CO., V.

Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 17, 1923.—Hon. Norris H. Nelson, Munich, N. D. Dear Sir: Your letter of Feb. 9, 1922, received, and beg to say that Martin Tabert was arrested here on Dec. 15, 1921, for beating his way on a railroad train, which is a violation of the State law. He was fined $25 and costs, or three months.

All able-bodied prisoners that fail to pay their fines are leased to the Putnam Lumber Co., at Clara, Fla., which is 60 miles from this place, and are sent there if they stand a physical examination, which he did, by Dr. B. J. Bend of this city, if they fail to pay their fine and costs within two days time, so you can see this man was in good health when he left here for the camp at Clara, Fla.

He was never brought back here after he was delivered to the Putnam Lumber Co.

There was some money wired to him here after he was gone, but I could not get it, as it was sent in his name. I therefore returned it. Respectfully,

J. R. JONES,
Sheriff Leon County, Fla.

Parents Then Dropped Inquiry

Tabert's parents, satisfied with this explanation and being told their son had been given a Christian burial, did not investigate. In July, 1922, five months after the letter from Sheriff Jones, the Postmaster at Munich received the following communication from a man who mailed it from a town in Kansas:

"Would you please find out whether the parents or kinsfolk of Martin Tabert know, or care to know, the particulars of Martin's death in February of this year? I was an eyewitness in the boy's death and I am doubting whether any particulars were sent to the folks.

"GLEN THOMPSON."

The Munich Postmaster got that letter to the Tabert family as quickly as possible, and then for the first time they began to suspect they were the victims of deception in regard to the death of Martin. They immediately wrote Glen Thompson and the first letter from him was received Aug. 3. Thompson gave them a long list of names of persons familiar with the case and asked them to write each of them. He realized the family knew nothing of the true facts and showed a fine sense of feeling in not giving them the horrible story of Martin's death at one time.

On Aug. 25 a second letter came from Glen Thompson, and then others began to come rapidly from the persons written to at the request of Thompson. The letters all sustained the statements made by Thompson. This letter follows:

"Kansas, Aug. 25, 1922.—Dear Mr. Tabert: Speaking of Martin's case only, and not mentioning any of our many tortures, I would be willing to sign an affidavit to the following:

"I landed at Camp Clara, Fla., in the first days or week of January, 1922, and the first night in camp slept in a bunk beside Martin and from that time on until his death something like a month later.

"I noticed the first night in camp that Martin had swollen feet from boils and that his shoes were too small. I noticed that from time to time Martin talked to the 'Whipping Boss,' Higginbotham, for a bigger pair of shoes or the chance of cutting holes in the ones he had, and, too, at that time he spoke of his headaches, but seemed not to meet with any sympathy.

Suffered From Fever

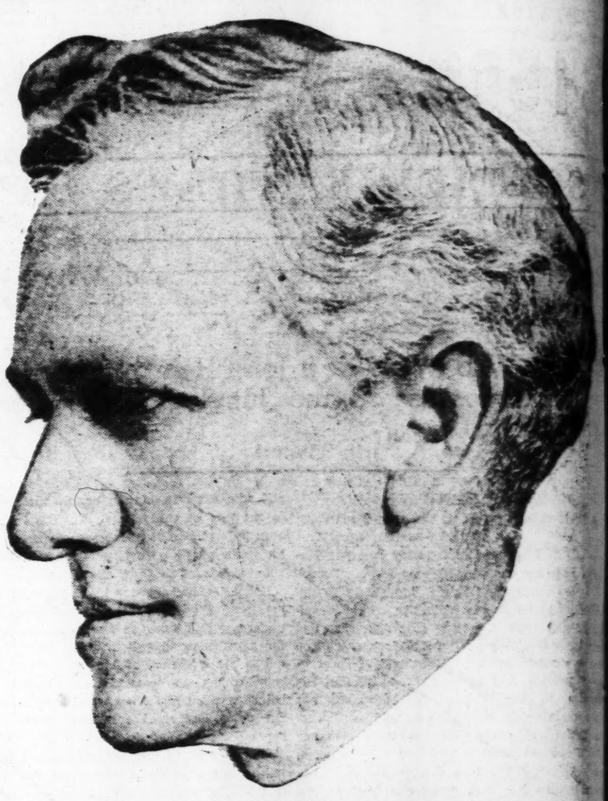
"I was told by the boys that when Martin came in that he was strong and sturdy, but at the time that I first saw him he weighed about 125 pounds. Martin suffered all the way through with sore feet, headache and occasional fever. I remember the first of the month of him having a fever chill and with no attention, except the blankets the boys could throw over him.

"In the latter days of January the doctor was to the camp on his weekly visit and Martin complained at that time to him and showed him a swelling in each of his groins and the doctor lanced one of them. At that time I heard the whipping boss say something to this effect, if not the same words: 'He is no good—always complaining or something.'

"In the last week of January the occurrence happened that I have been leading up to all the time, a thing which seems to me to be contrary even to the State laws of Florida.

"Martin was turned up by Cap Willis for a whipping and reported that Martin was slow in his work and complained of being sick, but that he himself did not think so. The whipping boss was in no mood to use the strap, so he postponed it for two nights. On Friday night he called Martin out of line and by a bonfire and before about 85 convicts he whipped Martin about 35 to 50 licks with a four-inch strap five feet long, three-ply leather at the handle, two-ply half way down. The strap weighs seven and one-half pounds, G. L. Win of Paris, Fla., says. The law of Florida says there shall be but 10 licks with the strap for each offense.

"Martin begged to be let loose, but his speech was not distinct and it seemed he was so weak he could not talk plain. The whipping boss put his feet on Martin's neck to keep him from moving out of position as he whipped him. When he let Martin up, Martin started back to get a bottle of medicine that had dropped out of his pocket, or had been taken out, and the whipping boss drove him into line with the big strap, hitting him over the head, shoulders and back.



GOV. C. A. HARDEE
of Florida, who has promised a thorough investigation of the peonage system in his state, which makes it possible to subject persons to a condition of bondage for trivial offenses.

"Never Had Any Care"

"On Saturday, the next day, I helped Martin [illegible] off a flat car as he came from work to the camp. On Sunday morning he was sick and blind with the fever. The boys fed him at the breakfast table and coffee too hot for us to drink was pronounced cold by him. Martin never ate a square meal to my knowledge in the month that I knew him, but nearly always stood back from the table and gave his to someone else.

"Martin, on this Sunday morning that I speak of, was allowed to be taken in to his bunk and seemed unconscious. From that time on he could not give us his own name or where he was from, and if we had not found some writing in his clothes you might not know today, or ever have known, where he was, for the company does not seem to care for particulars.

"Martin, up to the time of his death, only called for water. The doctor came, I think, on Monday and left some medicine and emphasized giving quinine. On Wednesday he came, looked Martin over and said he would not live until morning. He died a few minutes after 8 o'clock, without a struggle or hardly a move of a muscle, and we were all around him.

"A few minutes before his death we asked the whipping boss to come in and see him, but he seemed not to want to look upon Martin, as he thought because he felt guilty, but ordered some medicine given and Martin then was too far gone to swallow and was sucking the medicine back and forth in his lungs. He never did have any care. * * *

"The doctors pronounced his case pernicious malaria. Martin, I was told by Bob Harris, a convict, was buried at Perry, Fla., in some clothes given by some of the guards there, while he had the trousers used were out of a bundle owned by a nigger that had escaped from the camp a few days previous.

"Martin might have written you for money, but letters were read going in and coming out, and many of them never went, and especially those calling for money to pay out. I had to slip a letter out before I got my money. These are some of the main details of Martin's case and any questions you want to ask, write me."

Since last August the members of the Tabert family have been busy writing letters to persons whose names were given them. They have secured a mass of testimony from men in many states and all tell substantially the same story.

One letter states that the men were taken out early in the morning on flat cars and were forced to work in water and swamps. Sometimes the filthy ooze poisoned the men, their feet became sore and their bodies were often a mass of sores and nothing was done for them. Several of the letters state that Martin Tabert was too sick and weak to do the work demanded and that he had been frequently knocked down and whipped during the day and again at night. The same treatment was given other men.

T. W. Higginbotham, the Warden who whipped Tabert, has been arrested.

When the Tabert family received the letter from Glen Thompson, it arranged to send State Attorney Gudmundur Grimson of Cavalier County to Florida to investigate and check up on the various letters. Grimson returned to Langdon with a mass of letters, affidavits, all of which went to show that the worst claims made in the letters written were but the best that could be said about the matter.

Now Why Did Pauline Frederick's Husband Put Their Shattered Childhood Romance in Such a Book?

Pauline Frederick and her husband, Dr. Charles A. Rutherford, who for several months have been separated. Their troubles, Miss Frederick has declared, were not due to a misunderstanding, but to "no understanding at all." Dr. Rutherford, was the childhood sweetheart of the film star, as well as her cousin.

PAULINE FREDERICK, popular motion picture and stage star, who, for the third time, has found marriage impossible. Her first husband was Frank M. Andrews, a wealthy New York architect.

Another photograph of Miss Frederick and Dr. Rutherford, as they appeared on an afternoon stroll a short time before their separation.

WILLARD MACK,
the much-married playwright and actor, who was Miss Frederick's second husband. He is now married to his fourth wife, who was Mrs. Beatrice Stone, a Salt Lake City actress.

Friends Amazed at "Whiter Than Snow," Dr. Charles Rutherford's Medical Propaganda Work Against the Foes of Motherhood Which Has Woven Into It the Story of His and His Film and Stage Star Cousin's Love for Each Other That Began When They Were Very Small, but Which Went to Smash a Few Months After Their Marriage—She Had Kept Him in Reserve Over Many Years as Certain to Bring Happiness After All Others Had Failed.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 7.

SOMETIMES, when Pauline Frederick gets a divorce, it is warm and sunny and sometimes it is cold and the sky is overcast. In the past the gloom attending her shattered romances has been brightened to a considerable degree by the promise that there was yet happiness ahead in a romance held in reserve, as it were, from childhood.

"I'll end it all by marrying the doctor," she used to say to her mother, when an ill-considered marriage went "on the rocks." And by "the doctor" she referred to Dr. Charles A. Rutherford, her second cousin and her childhood sweetheart, who had been her playmate and protector when the two were growing up on adjoining farms near Waddington, N. Y.

But now, with the object of her childhood affection occupying the role of an unsatisfactory husband and a third divorce impending, there appears only a cloudy sky as she emerges from her latest disillusionment, and those who know her best note that her expressive face, so famous in mimic tragedy, has taken on new lines of suffering that proclaim her tragedy is real.

It was not so many months ago that Miss Frederick whispered to Dr. Rutherford as they left the altar on the wedding day: "The others were long chances, but you are such a safe person." It was not many months later that she was confirming to newspaper men in Philadelphia reports of their separation with the declaration that it was not a misunderstanding that was responsible for her matrimonial troubles, but "no understanding at all." And with that declaration came another to the effect that she did not know where Dr. Rutherford was, and, to tell the truth, she didn't care.

Domestic Troubles Begin at 12

Now, in the wake of their romance, broken afterdouring for many years at long range, there appeared at local bookstores a little volume of some 70 pages from the pen of Dr. Rutherford and bearing the title, perhaps borrowed from a favorite hymn of the old-time circuit rider, "Whiter than Snow."

Not much is to be said of Dr. Rutherford's work as a literary effort, but the mutual friends of the physician and his actress wife have been amazed to find that the author has used as the foundation for his story the childhood romance of himself and Pauline. Not only that, but he has freely worked other incidents in the life of each into the story. This is considered especially extraordinary, since the purpose of the story as a whole is to indict certain practices against child birth and to pillory physicians who unlawfully lend their aid and advice to women who seek to escape the responsibility of motherhood.

Dr. Rutherford, who is a prominent physician of Seattle, dedicates his book "To the thousands of men who have patiently assisted mother instinct bursting for release," and its foreword states that it "discusses a crime without defending it."

With the other romances of Miss Frederick, which ended in the divorce courts, and with the many unhappy incidents which seemed to haunt her path the public is fairly familiar, for they began early and have continued with more or less regularity since. She was only 12, in fact, when domestic tribulation first visited her in the divorce of her parents. The girl was given her choice between them, and Pauline chose her mother.

A recent sequel to this incident received considerable publicity when her father, upon his death in Chicago, left a will barring her from sharing in his property. She contested this will, but the courts upheld it, thus withholding from her $50,000 she would have received if she had not chosen to go with her mother.

It was not many years after she made this choice that she began her stage career as a chorus girl. Then, after she had accomplished the leap from musical comedy to the drama after a bitter struggle and had gained the position of leading woman in "The Fourth Estate," one of the first incidents to sadden her was the suicide of Tommy Thorne, a young actor, whose hopeless love for her was assigned as the motive for his act.

Her first marriage—that to Frank M. Andrews, a brilliant and wealthy New York architect—followed, only to be ended two years later by a divorce, accompanied by her explanation that "My husband has grown indifferent to me." Next was her marriage to Willard Mack, talented actor and playwright. It was a wild and ardent love match, but its course was full of storms, and it ended like the first when Mack was confined in a Los Angeles hospital for treatment for a condition said to have been brought on by excessive use of alcohol.

Cousin Rutherford Waited Patiently

Through all this time Dr. Rutherford had remained single, content to love from a distance, but following her divorce from Mack, the doctor journeyed to California to visit her and there was a hasty runaway marriage, with a wedding breakfast in an owl wagon in a quaint Santa Ana street.

Almost immediately, Miss Frederick's friends say, she had cause to regret her hasty action, for she found that the "safe" love of the middle-aged physician was no better adapted to her fame-fed temperament than was the tempestuous affection of Mack.

Four months after the marriage came the separation. Now, the book appears with fact and fiction so confusingly jumbled, friends say, that Dr. Rutherford is being severely criticised for making any such use of a beautiful childhood idyl.

The Bob and Helen of the story are children together, spend their childhood on adjoining farms in New York State, play the games of youth and lay their plans for the day when they shall fulfill their dream of marriage. By and by Bob goes to Harvard and becomes a physician and Helen achieves fame on the stage. Her career is filled with adventure and romance and there come into her life many episodes of questionable flavor, but never a stain attaches to Bob. He clings to her through it all, a perfect suffering hero, chivalrous and self-sacrificing to a marked degree and blameless until his rigid regard for professional ethics plunges him into difficulties that bring him before the law.

Bob, it appears, was smitten with an infatuation for the blue-eyed Helen remarkably early in life, for the author relates that after he had looked for the first time upon the face of the 9-months-old infant, cooing in its mother's arms, "he was overcome with something that seemed to grip his heart • • • and when he knelt beside his bed each night to say his little prayer, it always ended with 'God bless Helen,' and he resolved he would stand ready to fight for her and love her as long as he lived."

How Bob Always Protected Helen

As childhood grew into youth, "Helen was the most beautiful girl in the valley. She loved everyone and everyone loved her, but there seemed to be something lacking with Helen and Bob that could only be satisfied by getting together. • • • always there was the same greeting, a rush to each other's arms, and one big prolonged hug."

They romped and played over the big farm together and "Bob, being older, took great delight in guarding her from the taunts of the older children and many good scraps he had." There were many minor accidents and adventures, "but it was always reliable Bob she depended on for help."

When Helen was still a small girl her mother took her to live in Philadelphia, but every summer she returned for a long visit at Grandpa's farm and "directly she arrived she was always on the lookout for the old gray horse to poke his nose through the woods with Bob dressed in his best."

Helen, so the story goes, began to show signs of a remarkable soprano voice, and, as Bob was gifted with a fairly good tenor, the two were always happy in song, and never in these years did anything happen to mar the affection of either for the other.

The narrative continues: "As years went by girlhood passed into young womanhood and normal and natural instincts changed. With so many happy days together it was little to be wondered at that this beautiful association in early life grew into great love and devotion for each other in after years. It was accepted by all the valley folk that Helen and Bob loved each other, but only themselves knew how deep that love was. How were the outsiders to know what joy these young people experienced when together they took their long buggy rides in the moonlight behind the old faithful horse—or maybe it was in the hammock out under the old tree, with arms tight about each other, they would lie thrilled with the happiness that comes only with complete surrender."

Bob entered Harvard University and took up the study of medicine, while Helen, at the age of 17, after having had several years of vocal training and fancy dancing under the greatest masters in the country, obtained her first engagement on the stage.

"Their Summer Had Passed"

The time for parting came. • • • "As they stood with arms about each other on the lawn in front of the old farmhouse, with Helen's mother and her grandparents, they knew the summer had passed. They seemed to know that it would be many summers before they would be together again." Under the depression of leave taking, Helen turned to Bob, sobbing: "I don't want to go; I want to be always with you." Grandpa, hearing the remark, then speaks up, although according to the author, he seldom expressed himself. "Helen, that's what I would like to see you do; you and Bob should never be separated," he is quoted. But Helen's mother, it seems, in accord with traditions of romance, had other views, and the reply attributed to her is curt and decisive.

"I wish you would shut up," she exclaimed. "Helen is going to be our greatest actress if I can put her there."

And so Helen is torn from Bob and her life on the stage begins. For a time Bob's outlook on life was miserable enough, we are told, but the author continues:

"Sturdy boy that he was, he finally shook himself together and resolved that real love could never die, that some day they would meet and that together they would make the last long pull up the hill."

Describing the budding careers of both Bob and Helen, the story goes on:

"Helen's first experience was with a road show. That first year she received much favorable publicity because of her natural talents and great beauty. • • • She had not forgotten Bob and frequently long letters of love and affection passed between them."

Then later: "Helen's talent and charm, with her mother's business sagacity, soon put her before the moneyed men in the profession, the men who back the shows. The following summer she was taken to New York, where her mother established herself in a fashionable hotel overlooking Central Park. Helen marveled at the grandness of it all and wrote Bob she couldn't quite understand how a $5000-a-month suite and a big car with a chauffeur at their disposal all the time night and day could be afforded. She was bewildered at this show of luxury and one night at a little private dinner given in their rooms, with two well-dressed, good-looking, clever gentlemen, immensely wealthy, as their guests, she was astounded when her mother dared her to sip a little wine, "not the least bit intoxicating," she said, and smoke a cigarette with her. • • •

Cousin Rutherford Was Neglected

"Helen was kept in a whirl of excitement and other dinners followed. Letters to Bob began to be infrequent. She hadn't time to write. Bob, a hypersensitive chap, cut down his letters, although fearful that the road was beginning to be bumpy for his little girl, but other than offering up his little prayer for her, which he had never forgotten, there was at this time nothing more he could do.

"The two gentlemen friends, with the aid and approval of mother, became almost a part of her New York life. They had secured a wonderful contract for her and in her innocent way she more or less trusted them."

The wine and the cigarettes and the dinners continued, the author relates, until they brought moral shipwreck to Helen, who had learned to love them all. And then suddenly she found herself face to face with the unwed woman's most terrible tragedy.

• • • • • • • •

"Bob hadn't heard a word from Helen in months. He was sitting in his office, thinking and dreaming of her, when a sharp knock was heard on his door and a lady in black rushed in. He arose, dumbfounded. Then he heard the word, 'Bob!' He knew Helen at once. He rushed and threw his arms about her. She did not return his embrace. He was shocked. Joy gave way to fear. 'Helen!' he cried, 'what is the trouble, what is the sorrow that has come into your life?' 'Bob, sweetheart, it is awful,' she replied. 'I must kill myself! I must die!'

• • • "He jerked off the veil, wiped her face, kissed her square on the lips and, in his usual strong way, and with great tenderness, said, 'Now we are all right, dear. You and I for it.' She was happy in Bob's arms and quieted. She said to him: 'Bob, you know where wine and cigarettes lead to with one so full of life and affection as I.' • • •

questions which this caller wanted to ask. And then curled herself in an easy chair just within earshot of the conversation which would not have been quite so difficult if she had been a little farther away.

There was a hint of laughter in the dark eyes she could not keep from wandering from the page she was pretending to read. Being inquired about and talked about was good fun, as she saw it. Her face became more sober when Mrs. Pettit, speaking of Dorothy's father, drew attention to his portrait, in dress uniform, in a frame on the wall. The girl's gaze rested upon the handsome face of her father and she may have been thinking, with a sort of longing, of days in the far Philippines.

She was quickly alert when her aunt, calling her, said, "This is Dorothy," and she smiled a friendly little smile. Her aunt told proudly of Dorothy's progress in school and with her music and at her suggestion Dorothy went to the piano and played prettily, and was genuinely pleased when her playing was praised, but excused herself from singing because she was hoarse. She was well content to let her aunt do all the talking about her, but confided at the last she liked Oklahoma better than the Philippines, because the Philippines were so hot. If she also liked Oklahoma because it was in a fair way to make her a very rich young person, she did not indicate it.

PRESIDENT EBERT'S DAUGHTER STUDYING TO BE LIBRARIAN

Plans to Continue Studies After Marriage—Interested in Welfare Work.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 7.—Fraulein Amalie Ebert, daughter of President Ebert, whose engagement to Wilhelm Jaenecke of the German Foreign Office was recently announced, is studying to be a librarian. At present she is doing a year of practical work in the Berlin State Library. Later she will go to the municipal library at Charlottenburg for her final year's study as she purposes to continue work after her marriage.

Fraulein Ebert is 21 years old. She received her secondary education in the Berlin girls' lyceum. Then she studied philology and library science in Berlin and Heidelberg universities. She is tall and athletic. She resembles her father in appearance and disposition and shares his political views, although only mildly socialistic. She is more inclined to charitable and social welfare activities than to politics.

An ardent Catholic, Fraulein Ebert is active in many Catholic societies. For some time she was identified with Anna von Giercke, the celebrated German Nationalist leader, in charitable and social welfare work.

STORY OF BOY WHO WAS BEATEN TO DEATH IN FLORIDA PEONAGE CAMP

He found, he says, that Sheriff Jones of Tallahassee was little better than a slave catcher, who had arranged with the Putnam Lumber Co. for payment of $20 side money for all able men he could pick up and get delivered to their camp in the swamps to work for 90 days.

He found that returning money sent to men to liberate them was a regular system.

He found men willing and ready to swear to cruelties inflicted upon Martin Tabert.

He could not find any person who positively knew of the location of the grave of Tabert or one who positively knew that he was given a burial more decent than would be given a dog.

He found that the Putnam Lumbeh Co. was an $800,000 corporation which profited largely by the labor of unfortunate men, picked up and forced into their custody through trivial violations of the laws of the State of Florida.

He says Gov. Hardee of Florida expressed indignation and surprise at the facts shown him and promised a thorough investigation. Both the Governor and Commissioner of Agriculture McRae, who is the head of the prison system of Florida, had asked for the repeal of the law allowing leasing of prisoners, at the last session of the Legislature.

A resolution adopted in the Legislature, after reciting the facts of Tabert's imprisonment, the sending of the money and its return, his death and the investigation, declares that the Legislature is "convinced that said Tabert died as the direct and proximate result of physical abuse and torture inflicted upon him by the said Putnam Lumber Co. and its employes, and more particularly by one T. W. Higginbotham; and it is further believed,

"That such abuse occurred after the money intended for the payment of said fine had come into the hands of said Sheriff and should have been devoted to the purpose of releasing said Tabert, and that said Sheriff by connivance and conspiracy with the said lumber company purposely refrained from either forwarding said money to said Tabert, or communicating to the senders thereof the facts as to his then custody or whereabouts, and that he purposely so indorsed said letter and caused it to be returned to the senders, to lead them to believe that he had been released from custody and prevented them from obtaining his release; and it is further believed,

"That a corrupt understanding and agreement existed between said Sheriff and said lumber company to the effect that the Sheriff should endeavor to obtain the arrest and conviction of men for pretended or petty offenses, to the end that when convicted they might be leased to said lumber company, and that for each convict so obtained from the custody of said Sheriff he should receive a cash compensation, and that said Tabert was a victim of such conspiracy.

Urge Investigation.

"It is further believed that, while the legislative assembly is convinced by the showing made to it of the substantial accuracy of the facts heretofore set forth, the State of Florida is in no manner party to the great wrong and that, as represented by its Legislature, it will feel the same sense of indignation as is felt by the State of North Dakota, represented by its Legislature, and that it will to the utmost of its ability desire to redress the wrong done to the citizen of a sister State, and make impossible the commission of such abuses in the future.

"Be it further resolved, by the Senate of the State of North Dakota, the House of Representatives concurring, that the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Florida is hereby memorialized and requested by the Legislature of the Commonwealth of North Dakota, to cause a full investigation to be made of the circumstances surrounding the conviction, leasing and death of said Martin Tabert and to cause such action to be taken as will most surely and expeditiously lead to the punishment of all parties concerned therein.

"Be it further resolved, the State of North Dakota in a spirit of comity and friendship extends its friendly greeting from the furthermost side of the Union to the State of Florida, and requests that such recognition as this communication shall receive be transmitted to the Governor of the State, this assembly being about to adjourn.

"Be it further resolved, that an engrossed copy hereof, attested by the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives, be transmitted by the Secretary of State to each house of the Legislature of the State of Florida."

Whole State Joins Move.

The people of North Dakota are being aroused to contribute to the fund to carry the case through, by the widespread circulation of this resolution, and their response shows that the matter is no longer one which concerns the Tabert family alone. The County Treasurer of Cavalier County, Fred Thompson of Langdon, has been named as custodian of the fund, and an action has already been started in the United States Courts by the Tabert family, in the form of a suit for $3,000 damages against the Putnam Lumber Co.

Numerous Witnesses Available.

Now the story is stirring the nation at large. Newspapers are telling the progress of the case in a score of cities and witness after witness is coming forward to add his knowledge of the circumstances under which Tabert died.

Chief among these witnesses is J. B. Burch, who took over as Warden the camp of the Putnam Lumber Co. a few days after Tabert died, Feb. 1, 1922. Walter Higginbotham, the Warden at the time, is now under arrest, pending a grand jury inquiry into the case.

"Treated Men Very Cruelly."

When Glen Thompson wrote from Kansas last July to give the Tabert family their first hint that Martin might not have died a natural death, Burch was asked what he could tell about the case. He wrote from Perry, Fla., Aug. 28:

"I taken charge of the camp where you speak of Feb. 26-1922 & I understood that the warden a Mr. Higgenbotham had beat a man by the name of Martin to death. I also found some of the men skinned up by the strap.

"I am an old convict warden and have about 24 years experience handling men. Yes they told me the strap weighed 7½ lbs it was a very large strap. I will find out who was there and seen your bro whipped so bad until he died."

On Nov. 24, Burch wrote again to the Tabert family, saying he had found a negro named Tom Wiggins who was with Martin at his death and knew all about his treatment.

Could Eat No More.

Then came a letter from Wiggins. Under date of Dec. 6, he wrote:

"I was glad to no that there was someone allive that would investigate Martin's death because it was realey a horable death for a man to die.

"Yes I was there in prison an no all about it. I seen it evry bit I was standing 7 fet from where the whiping boss whiped Martin he was absolutely killed from unlawfull whiping Martin was whiped with a strap supposed to weigh 7½ lbs he was barberishly murdered he was whiped on Saturday night and died Tuesday night."

Still another witness, A. B. Shiver of Doe Run, Ga., was found by the Taberts. He wrote:

"Your brother Martin was whiped unmurseful I will alsoe say he was sick I can't say wheather his mind was ballanced or not. I cant say hoo wated on him in the building iff anybodie as he was onlie there three days—he was whiped Friday night and worked Saturday and died Tuesday tha had a doctor with him Monday night."

Tabert in Frail Health.

Then came a letter from John Gardner, now a private in Battery F, Fourth Field Artillery, U. S. army. Gardner was a fellow prisoner with Tabert in Florida. His letter, written from Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex., related how Martin, then in frail health, was forced to go to work in the swamps at 4 o'clock in

Dear Doctor:—I am very thankful to you because you cured me of a bad case of Bleeding Piles after suffering twelve years.

After the first treatment I felt better already, so I advised a relative of mine, Mr. Obie Adams, of Boulder, Ill., to also take your wonderful treatment which never caused me any pain nor did it keep me from my work.

The price I paid you for the treatment is the best investment I ever made for my health, so I advise every sufferer from Piles to take your treatment without delay. Very truly yours,

WILLIAM RING.

Was Afraid of Such Barbrous Methods, an Operation and Chloroform, so He Called on Dr. Henrich and Was Cured Without Pain or Loss of Time.

Boulder, Ill., Mar. 31, 1919.

Dr. W. F. Henrich, Dear Sir:—After suffering for ten years from Bleeding and Protruding Piles, you cured me without the knife and without pain, also did not lose a minute from my work on the farm.

Your mild treatment is surely a success. I was always afraid of an operation and chloroform. With your wonderful treatment such barbarous methods are not necessary.

Pile sufferers—don't put off taking Dr. Henrich's Treatment, but call on him at once and be cured for life.

Yours truly, OBIE ADAMS.

Does Your Stomach Let You Sleep

Simple Intestinal Antiseptic Will Remove Gas and Sourness and Give Stomach a Rest.

"I have received wonderful improvement from Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic). I can sleep ALL NIGHT now, something I could not do for years." (Signed) Cora E. Noblett. Note: Sleeplessness is often caused by gases and sour decaying food in the system, which should be brought out.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing foul matter which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful GIVES ALWAYS brings relief. A longer course of treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under supervision of your physician.

Reports from Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 30 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some results only one dose." (Signed) Dr. P. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES removed from my system." (Signed) Dr. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary gas and stomach medicines, as results are rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE and last. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere. Sold in St. Louis by WOLFF-WILLIAMS DRUG CO., 4TH AND WASHINGTON; ENDERLEE DRUG CO., and other leading druggists.

the morning, wading with the other prisoners up to their hips in poison water which caused malignant sores to appear. One day, when Martin was shoveling mud, the letter relates, he became dizzy and fell over in the water. When he was rescued he was severely flogged and from that time on was beaten every night when he returned to the camp from work. Describing his last flogging, the latter continues:

"After supper we was lined up before we went in the stockade and several men was picked out and whipped of witch Martin was one. He laid Martin down beside the fire and hit him about 50 times and told him to get up but Martin was so weak he could not get up quick enough so he laid down again and was hit about a hundred times and was told to get up but couldn't so he beat him some more and several times he hit him over the head with the handle of the 'Black Anty' and left him laying unconscious and some of us carried him in and laid him on his bunk. The next day when he was coming out of the stockade to breakfast he was delirious and was talking to himself so he was taken back to his bunk and as we just got in he died.

"Martin's corpse was taken about 11:30 that night and deposed of I do not know whether he was buried or just thrown in the swamp.

"I could not tell you half of the terrible things that happened down there.

"Martin's back was all scabs and cuts from his shoulders to his knees and I have scars on my back yet I often wished that when Martin was getting wipped that it was me instead of him. Martin never had a doctor when he was sick only once a few weeks before he died a doctor was there and gave him some c c pills. Glen Thompson shure did all he could do for him he was always crying for water and he was trying to tell us something but we couldn't understand anything he said except water."

WHY DID HUSBAND OF PAULINE FREDERICK PUT ROMANCE IN BOOK?

But he devised a plan to help her and even offered to marry her to save her name. And • • •

• • • He soon had her hustling back to New York. • • • He heard nothing further from her and the next summer she appeared at the old farm, very thin and pale. Bob called as usual and the story of her great illness two months after he had last seen her was told. A surgeon of questionable morals had been found. Bob never did blame Helen. • • • After regaining her strength, she returned to the stage and continued success."

Time went on and occasional letters passed between Bob and Helen, and, we are told, "although both seemed to feel that something had happened to turn their lives forever apart, these letters were always welcomed and they seemed to keep alive in both that little spark that made life worth the battle.

"Money and applause of the world did not satisfy Helen. Old inherited traits seemed to be battling for recognition and sometimes, when dreadfully tired, she would long for a real old-fashioned happy home and home support.

"During one of these troubled lonesome times a man, rich, fascinating but unfortunate, appeared in her life. Spurred on by a soul that had seen dark and dreary days, her sympathy went out to this man in his hour of need. He was refined, handsome, brilliant, but a slave to a dastardly habit. This terrible habit Helen could not know, and she did not know that it was the drug that made him her superman. Little did she realize at this time that it was her great sympathy for this unfortunate and not her love that soon won her to be his wife."

Bob Comes On, Winning the Fight.

Bob, in the meantime, had gone ahead with his professional work, winning honor and public esteem. The story continues:

"He read of Helen's marriage. The news hurt, but it did not destroy his great love for or his loyalty to her. Not knowing the man of her choice, Bob wired congratulations, but way down in his heart he said to himself—'All right, Helen, another little mistake; for you and I love each other and some day our roads will join, and if not in this world, in the next.' That was all, and he turned back to his work.

"Months passed on into years. Helen had retired from the stage, but after two years she went to Hollywood and entered the silent drama. Success immediately crowned her screen work and a liberal contract resulted. She was more or less happy in her work again but at this time poor whisky and the horrible drug were making rapid inroads on her husband's last spark of manhood. Sometimes for days he would not return home and word from a hospital would tell of his deplorable condition. At other times he would stagger home a brute. Helen, her marriage vows ever before her, stood this for five years but eventually the divorce courts set her free. • • •

"Due to screen work Helen weakened and for days lay in delirium. • • • That hand of Bob's seemed ever to be around her and as she grew stronger she decided to wire Bob to come to her. • • • In just three days he alighted in Los Angeles. On the evening of the third day • • • Helen, turning her big blue eyes to Bob, said: 'Bob, tell me that you love me.' She gave a merry laugh. 'Bob, you say that just the way you did years ago back on Grandpa's farm.' 'Well, I feel just the same way,' he replied, and kissed her. • • • She threw her arm about him, their lips met and in the long embrace their souls met, too." • • •

"They talked of the future and built their imaginary home. • • •

"What a lovely and wonderful home it will be, Bob,' but—then she stopped—'Bob, you know I was sick years ago back in New York and do you think it ever possible for a little angel to come and stay with us in our home?' 'Yes, darling, I hope God will be good to us. Helen, would you like to be called mother?'"

Mother Still Opposed the Match.

The following morning, so the narrative states, Helen's mother was informed that she was to have a new son-in-law and the effect was volcanic. Mother, it seems, although nearly 70, was endowed with a mind extraordinarily adept at intrigue, and realizing that she was too late to postpone the engagement announcement, resolved to set back the wedding day. But she failed in this, too, it seems, for Bob and Helen were married within the week.

However, the irate mother-in-law was not to be foiled so easily. She thought better of her threat to abandon her daughter and decided to remain, "watching for every chance to inject a deadly poison" to break up this union and make possible the fulfillment of her plans to make Helen "America's supreme actress."

Dr. Rutherford continues the narrative:

"Six months of supreme happiness followed. Helen's health and her youth and beauty returned and the joy of living for both was delightful. * * * Her contract with the films company came to an end and, before she would renew it, she would yield to great pressure from New York to return for a short engagement there on the speaking stage. Both planned to go East with her to see her safely started and at the same time to take a post-graduate course in New York before opening in Los Angeles. * * * A few days before their departure Bob, a sensitive chap, began to experience a new sensation. Everything looked all right to him, but intuitively he knew that something was wrong. He noticed that mother was beginning to use her poison in small doses."

Melodrama in a Major Key.

The melodrama of the finish is excessive. The mother-in-law embitters the scene with her nagging and quarrelsomeness, and the wife is seized with spells of brooding. During the trip East Helen develops a horror of motherhood, accentuated by her mother's chiding and moaning against what that means to an actress. Matters are brought to such a tension that in the close, which is replete with fireworks, Bob shoots a physician whom he blames for blasting his happiness by performing another illegal operation on Helen, maiming both his hands and leaving him a hopeless cripple for life.

Helen again lives in a round of wild parties and liquor orgies, but at last after a particularly riotous Christmas Eve celebration stumbles into the snow-covered street and is brought from her befuddled state of mind by the sound of a Salvation Army troupe singing the hymn "Wash Me and I Shall Be Whiter Than Snow." Her state of grace arrives not a moment too soon, for her testimony is needed to save Bob from the law.

The fast and furious closing episode pictures the court with its prisoner facing a rigorous sentence, but firmly refusing to open his lips to clear himself. Into the room Helen rushes and tells the story of her recent past, and the emotional plea moves the Judge and jury to tears. The prosecutor speaks:

"Your honor, I wish to resign from this case and withdraw every charge I have made."

The Judge replies:

"I accept your withdrawal and further I discharge the prisoner. For a quarter of a century I've been on the bench and in all my experiences I have never heard a story of love and sacrifice like this."

Thus are Bob and Helen reunited.

BODY OF WOMAN BURIED SIX YEARS AGO ALMOST PETRIFIED

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

COVINGTON, Ky.—When Leo Konnersman, sexton at the Mother of God Cemetery in Latonia and an assistant exhumed the body of Mrs. Bernadina Burdick Herzog of this city, which was to be transferred to be buried beside that of her husband, Ferdinand Herzog, who died last January, it was found that the woman's body was in a state of petrification.

Mrs. Herzog died six years ago and her husband remarried. Removal of the body of the first Mrs. Herzog was ordered by Herzog's widow, Mrs. Emma Fisher Herzog, who, with relatives, was present when the grave was opened.

The heavy weight of the casket, which showed evidence of decay caused an investigation. The body was said to have been in a perfect state of preservation and relatives face. Officials at the cemetery voiced the opinion that a few more years in the tomb would have resulted in the body being transformed into solid stone.

What had been the woman's skin had turned to an ash whiteness, with an extremely hard surface, the body appearing as if carved from marble. It is said the hair, which was gray when Mrs. Herzog died retained its color and texture, and appeared to be natural hair growing from a marble statue. Men familiar with the cemetery's locality say that a pond in the cemetery is supplied with water from springs, and the belief was voiced by physicians in Covington that the grave was near one of the springs, which was surrounded by limestone. The limestone impregnated water seeped into the grave, and left deposits which solidified, following the lines of contour of the body, say the physicians.

The body was carried across the Ohio River and there reburied in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

CHICAGO MURDERS ON INCREASE

Record for 1922 Shows 228 Slain, as Killers "Get Better and Better."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO—Murderers have faith in the Coue formula if burglars and highwaymen have not.

Figures tabulated by the Chicago Crime Commission show that in 1920 there were 194 assassinations and in 1921 there were 190. But every day in 1922 in every way the murderers got better and better. They ran their score up to 228 in that twelvemonth.

Burglars were less progressive, their tallies being 5495 in 1920, 4774 in 1921 and a paltry 4301 in 1922. Highwaymen committed 2782 robberies in 1920, 2588 in 1921, but only 2007 in the last year.

Prufrock & Litton

Fourth and St. Charles

New Furniture at Reasonable Pricings For Every Need of Spring

OUR expansive floors are resplendent with stylish offerings in living-room, dining-room and sleeping-room Furniture, not to mention the distinctive odd pieces that make the Prufrock-Litton store a pleasure to visit.

THE importance of selecting Furniture at this time cannot be over-emphasized. You may now choose from our vast stock of authentic designs—and, too, prices are showing an unmistakable upward tendency. May and June brides who put off selecting their Furniture run the risk of paying higher prices.

Ten-Piece Dining Suite

A critical inspection of the Suite sketched above would reveal qualities of cabinet work and excellence of design and finish rarely found in a moderate priced Suite.

This 10-piece American walnut Suite is elegantly carved and has the dull Museum finish. The table measures 44x60 inches and has an 8-foot extension. The 66-inch buffet, china cabinet and serving table are all handsome pieces. Five side chairs and an armchair, with seats and backs upholstered in tapestry, complete this Suite. $340

Just a few Suites—ten pieces—this week

Same Suite, with chairs upholstered in your choice of mohair, $35 additional.

Clearance of Sunroom Pieces

After our February Sale there were a good many odds and ends of reed, fiber, peel cane and imported Chinese grass Furniture remaining on our Fifth Floor, which is devoted to the display of sunroom Furniture.

Meanwhile new Wicker Furniture has been coming in and we are crowded for room. This week we are closing out every single piece of this Sunroom Furniture—many pieces are soiled, many slightly shopworn, some are odd patterns, and many Suites and pieces are fresh and new. All are radically reduced.

There are many "rare finds" in this collection. You can secure an imported Woven Grass Chair, similar to illustration, a $22 value, for $15

Or a Woven Grass Table to match, reduced from $31 to $18

There are scores of other values too numerous to enumerate. Come early Monday morning and make your selection.

Liberal Terms

Pay one-fifth cash, balance in 30, 60, 90 and 120 days.

Convenient deliveries. Many May and June brides are selecting this week for later delivery.

Entertainment in the Home

Compare the home life of today with that of twenty-five years ago, and you can readily see why people spend more of their time at home.

There is the phonograph with its selections of music and talks from the best known artists in the world.

There is the Radio with its concerts, stock market quotations and weather reports from your excellent local broadcasting stations, as well as from far distant stations. Isn't it almost miraculous?

The comfortable and attractive home furnishings of today also add much to home pleasures.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

ANTENNA AREA AFFECTS STRENGTH OF SIGNALS

Lightning-Rod Conductor Gives Better Results Than Regular Aerial, Says Radio Engineer.

Audibility of radio signals apparently has been found to depend more upon the surface area of the receiving antennae than upon their length or height, according to a recent report of the Engineering Foundation by James A. Greig, formerly radio engineer with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America. The use of a lightning-rod conductor as an antenna increased the audibility nearly 40 per cent, although it was located in a basement about one foot below the level of the surface of the earth.

The lightning-rod conductor used in the experiment resembled a flat ribbon about half an inch wide and one-eighth of an inch thick. It is built up of 10 strands of No. 18 bare copper wire braided together to give it a ribbon-like shape. Its percentage of copper is unusually high.

The tendency of high frequency current to collect and to move on the outside of a conductor is one of the reasons given by Mr. Grieg for the surprising results obtained, since the lightning conductor presents a much larger surface area than the usual aerial. It is therefore reasonable to suppose, he said, that a greater number of electro-static and electro-magnetic lines will cut it and therefore induce a larger current therein.

Another factor is said to be the building up (because of the flat surface of the conductor) of a greater electro-static field with relation to the earth. Acting thus as a condenser, a greater amount of energy is stored up than in the usual type of antenna.

The results obtained from an underground antenna of this type excelled by 40 per cent those from an aerial of the usual type, 100 feet in length and strung outdoors at an altitude of 40 feet above the earth. Transmitting stations which had never been heard on the aerial type of antenna were brought in loud and clear. The experiments indicate, Mr. Grieg stated, that the exterior, or antenna, circuit offers a field well worth intensive research.

USE OF HYDROMETER IN CARE OF STORAGE BATTERIES

Reading of Float Indicates Comparative Weight of Electrolyte as Compared With Same Amount of Distilled Water.

The hydrometer used by battery men is simply a gauge of the weight per specific gravity of the battery solution. Considering distilled water as a standard, any other liquid which weighs the same as an equal volume of distilled water under the same conditions of temperature and pressure is said to have a specific gravity of one. Sulphuric acid weighs more than water, so that when it is used to make up the battery electrolyte, the solution naturally weighs more than distilled water. It is the combined weight of the water and acid which is measured.

If the battery is fully charged, the battery solution should weigh 1.250 times as much as water. This is commonly stated as "twelve-fifty" and so marked on most hydrometers. When a battery has discharged, acid in the electrolyte is taken from the solution and combined with the plates, thus weakening the solution and bringing it nearer the weight of water. A totally discharged battery would register 1.100 on the hydrometer. With charging, a reverse process takes place and the acid leaves the plates to re-enter the solution. Naturally the solution becomes heavy and the hydrometer notes the difference.

There is no occasion to add acid to a discharged battery.

—The Wireless Age.

CALIFORNIA LEADS IN NUMBER OF BROADCASTING STATIONS

Every State in Union Except Mississippi Represented in List of March 10.

California still continues to lead in number of broadcasting stations, with 59 in operation, while Texas has climbed to second place with 36. Every state except Mississippi had one or more stations on March 10 when the total of broadcasting stations had reached 588 the highest point since this art was undertaken in September, 1921.

Out of these stations 66 represent educational institutions, 67 newspapers and periodicals dispensing information and news as well as entertainment. Several cities, a number of churches, theaters and, of course, many electrical apparatus manufacturers and distributors are also included.

The number of stations in each State March 10, 1923, follows:

California	59	Indiana	15
Texas	36	Oregon	16
Ohio	31	Colorado	15
New York	30	Michigan	14
Pennsylvania	28	Minnesota	14
Iowa	26	New Jersey	13
Missouri	25	Wisconsin	11
Washington	24	Florida	11
Illinois	24	Georgia	10
Nebraska	23	Massachusetts	10
Kansas	19

Importance of Little Things.

Loose connections, poor insulation, poor ground, poor joints in wires, worn insulation, wires crossing, and many other small matters may put a set completely out of operation.

Broadcasting Stations to Get More Waves; Three Classes Designated

Applications for New Waves Necessary; Amateurs Get Band 150 to 220 Meters—Relief From Interference Expected.

Secretary Hoover announced today that all broadcasting stations now operating may continue to do so on wave lengths of 360 and on 400 meters temporarily, filing applications for transfer to two special classes if they desire to do so.

The two new classes will comprise: Class A, stations under 500 watts in power, similar to the present general class, to which "distinctive" wave lengths lying between 222 and 300 meters will be assigned "so far as is possible"; and Class B stations rated between 500 and 1000 watts, especially qualified for long-distance and efficient service, which may be assigned wave lengths between 300 and 345 meters and between 375 and 545 meters. There are 30 Class B stations today, which will be given special waves within these two bands, although they may continue to operate on 400 until this plan can be put into effect. It is understood that most B stations will receive exclusive waves, except where there are several in a locality in which event they will have to divide time. Under this plan, three stations in any vicinity can operate simultaneously without interfering; one each in classes A, B and C.

Judging from his final report, on the recommendations of the National Radio Conference, Secretary Hoover did not think it expedient to undertake so broad a program of reconstruction, and has compromised on the committee's plan, which he terms a step in ideal development of measures for prevention of interference in public broadcasting. It is evident that limited personnel and funds come into the question of a general revision of broadcasting regulations and the assignment of exclusive waves, while some difficulties present themselves in those bands used by shipping.

In order to provide a systematic assignment of wave lengths to the various stations broadcasting, without hardship, the department proposes to co-operate with the individual stations within the broad confines of the recommendations of the conference.

The regulations follow:

"Class A stations—that is, stations equipped to use power not exceeding 500 watts. In this class it is proposed that the radio inspectors, in co-operation with the station owners, shall assign distinctive wave lengths to each station so far as is possible in the area from 222 to 300 meters. No station will be required to change from 360 unless it is so desired.

"Class B stations—that is, stations equipped to use from 500 to 1000 watts. In this class it is proposed to similarly offer to license these stations on special wave lengths from 300 to 345 and from 375 to 545 meters, having regard to the maintenance of some ship work on 450 meters as outlined above and again no station will be required to change from 360 unless it so desires.

"Class C stations—comprising all stations now licensed for 360 meters. In this class no new licenses will be issued for stations on 360 meters until the plan is entirely realized. Stations which do not wish to move under the general plan may remain at 360 meters, but they will necessarily be subject to some interference at best. It is thought that by the above plan the stations can be gradually brought into accord without hardships.

"Amateur Stations—Under the plan amateurs are given the whole area from 150 to 220, instead of being fixed upon 200 and special licenses on 375. The special licenses hitherto issued for amateurs at 375 will now be issued at 220. Certain special cases will be taken care of otherwise. It is proposed, in co-operation with the amateur associations, to develop an assignment of wave bands in classifications so as to somewhat relieve the present interference among amateurs. It will be remembered that the number of wave bands which can be used among the short wave area assigned to the amateurs is greater in proportion than among the longer wave lengths, and these arrangements expand the area previously assigned to amateurs."

Units in the Electrical Circuit.

Volt—The unit of pressure.
Ampere—The unit of current.
Ohm—The unit of resistance.

NEW BROADCASTING STATIONS

Stations rated above 10 watts which were licensed during the week ending March 31, and will operate on 360 meters, follow:

K F I F—Benson Tech. Student Body, Portland, Ore.; 200 watts.

W R A K—Economy Light Co., Escanaba, Mich.; 200 watts.

W R A S—Radio Supply Co., McLeansboro, Ill.; 20 watts.

W S A P—Seventh Day Adventist Church, New York City; 250 watts.

To Eliminate Noise From Dials.

The scraping of dials on the panel of a radio set can be corrected by placing a thin piece of felt on the back of the dials. They will then work smoothly and without noise.

GOVERNMENT BULLETIN DESCRIBES CONDENSERS

Auxiliary Equipment Increases Efficiency of Most Home-made Receiving Sets.

According to the Bureau of Standards Circular 137, the operation of radio receiving sets can often be improved by the use of a very simple and cheap condenser connected across the telephone receivers and another connected in series with the antenna. Longer waves can be received by the use of a very simple type of loading coil, and, in fact, a loading coil is essential with the average type of aerial when it is desired to receive long waves.

The auxiliary condenser which is used in series with the antenna may also be used when the crystal detector is replaced by a vacuum tube detector, or when an amplifier is added to the receiving set.

The condenser thus connected makes it possible to tune to wave lengths less than the natural period of the set. In other words, when 400 meter stations are heard loud and distinct, yet 360 meter signals are faint or barely audible, the series condenser in many cases will correct the difficulty. It must be remembered, however, that in nearly every instance stations which at the present time broadcast on 400 meters are more powerful than those operating on 360 meters, and a series condenser cannot compensate for the difference in power at different transmitting stations.

A condenser connected across the telephone receivers increases the intensity of signals to a certain degree, and especially with crystal detectors.

These features are described in Circular No. 137 of the Bureau of Standards, the fourth of a series dealing with construction of a very simple radio receiving set, and obtainable from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 5 cents.

'RADIO LETTERS' NEW FRENCH METHOD OF SENDING TELEGRAMS

Communications Mailed to Station, Radioed, Then Mailed From Receiving Station.

France has introduced a new method of communication which combines the postal and radio service with her colonies. On Jan. 18 there was established "radio letters," which, when printed clearly, may be mailed to the transmitting station, radioed to a receiving station and there mailed to their destinations. The charge is said to include postage at both ends of the route and two-thirds of the regular radio charges. The minimum involved a rate applicable to a 20-word message. Radio letters follow the regular radiograms daily or are moved the second day as day messages.

COMPLETE RADIO CALL BOOK ISSUED

Contains Map, Lists of Broadcasting and Amateur Stations and Other Valuable Information.

The second edition of the Citizens' Radio Call Book has recently been issued. It is not only a text book for the beginner, but also a reference book for those already initiated into the science of "listening-in." It contains interesting photographs of Reinartz and Flewelling receiving sets as well as picture-diagrams and schematic circuits of many other hook-ups. Symbols used in wiring plans and a glossary of circuits are included, as well as a radio map and excerpts from the radio communication laws of the United States.

The book is published by the Citizens' Radio Service Bureau, 416 S. Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and costs 50 cents.

BROADCAST MONOPOLY A BRITISH BURDEN

Licensing of Receiving Set Owners to Support Trust Causes Much Criticism.

The Government monopoly in wireless broadcasting in Great Britain, operated through the British Broadcasting Co., has again proved the folly of State interference in the development of public utilities. Radio fans all over the country complain bitterly of the arbitrary system inaugurated by the postoffice of taxing each owner of a receiving set to support the broadcasting company which supplies a mediocre program of silly news reports and impossible dance music.

The combined effect of Government interference and inefficient broadcasting is to make thousands of so-called air pirates who refuse to pay any tax whatever on home-made sets. Through various independent organizations amateurs are expressing their belief that no excuse exists for giving sole broadcasting rights to the British Broadcasting Co. or any other one firm. Nor is there any necessity for revenue if healthy private competition is allowed full sway. As the law now stands, every receiving set sold must bear the stamp of the Government broadcasting company, which means that the extra price includes the Government tax.

However, thousands of companies outside the combine manufacture and sell individual parts from which satisfactory sets are easily made. The home manufacture today is so great that fully 75 per cent of the receivers are of the "pirate" type, no license being required for the assembled product.

Under the present system many owners of receivers tire quickly and after listening to one or two mediocre programs turn all their ingenuity to strengthening their instruments so as to hear programs in other countries. Little hope of breaking the postoffice monopoly exists, but the fans think that they can force the official broadcasting company to improve their programs and give out real news instead of society items.

Radiograms.

A radio was recently installed at the Pennsylvania Industrial Home for Blind Women in Philadelphia, Pa. Fifty women now enjoy the daily concerts.

Because of the mammoth skyscraper buildings in the lower part of New York City, the operation of a radiophone broadcasting station is practically an impossibility.

The State College at Pullman, Wash., is erecting a radio station, with which it is proposed to broadcast complete educational courses for the benefit of ranchers.

Testing for Open Circuits.

The windings of the amplifying transformers may be tested for open circuits by means of a telephone and a single dry cell. The absence of a click or a very faint click when breaking the circuit indicates that the winding is open.

Radio Insulation.

The most widely-used insulating material for radio panels, tubes, and other insulating parts is a laminated substance built of paper or fabric which has been thoroughly impregnated with phenol condensation products.

TESTS WHICH MAY RESULT IN LOUDER SIGNALS

Current Should Flow in Same Direction Through Each Receiver.

Some timely hints on the use of radio telephone receivers have been offered by the Dual Tool Co. of Cleveland, O.

To get the full value from two phones used on a radio horn, the electric current must flow through both in the same direction to make the diaphragms vibrate in unison.

To test, proceed as follows: Attach one phone and note the degree of sound produced, then attach the second phone which should increase the volume. If the second phone does not increase the sound but rather seems to diminish it or cause interference, detach and reverse the wires of one phone. When this is done, if both phones produce more volume than one, they are working in harmony.

A second test is to try reversing the connections of the wires at the plug or receiving set end of the cord. If changing these connections improves the sound, you are then getting the full value of the phones as produced by your receiving set.

When using a single phone with a horn made for that purpose, it is wise to try changing the connections in the same manner in order to determine whether the best possible results are being obtained.

A good set of receivers properly connected is a big factor in the success of your radio set and is absolutely necessary for the proper results with a horn, where two phones are used.

Battery Connections.

When connecting batteries to other radio units, trouble may be avoided by connecting the wires to the battery last, and then just touch the last wire before making permanent connection. There is always a possibility of having wrong connections.

HOOVER CUP AWARDED TO NEW JERSEY AMATEUR

Announcement Made by the American Radio Relay League.

The highest honor in amateur radio, the Hoover cup of the American Radio Relay League, will be awarded this year to station 2OM operated by Frederick B. Ostman of Ridgewood, N. J. Announcement of the award has been made at the League headquarters in this city by a committee of three judges selected by Hiram Percy Maxim, president.

The cup, which is awarded annually by the U. S. Department of Commerce through Secretary Hoover is given to the best all round radio station, the major part of the equipment of which is home-made. Important factors in its selection are ingenuity in design, construction and arrangement, efficiency, consistent transmitting range, obedience to regulations, amount of traffic handled, and the accuracy and completeness of the station log.

In making the award, two other stations were given special consideration, 2FZ, operated by F. Frimmerman, of 749 Prospect avenue, New York City, and 5ZA, operated by Louis Falconi, Roswell, N. M., winner of the cup last year.

IOWA SUNK AFTER HER RADIO CONTROL TESTS

Had Provided Means for Valuable Naval Experiments in Wireless Steering.

The Iowa, first radio-controlled battleship of the world, went to a gallant death recently in the deep reaches of Panama Bay, sunk by gunfire from her younger but more powerful sister, the Mississippi. Her flag was not flying. Naval guns are never trained on the flag, though she was still an American vessel designated as Coast Battleship No. 4. She was sacrificed in the interests of radio-control and naval gunnery.

Her loss amounts to nothing, however, compared with the results of the radio-control experiments carried out successfully, and although she carried some valuable and confidential radio-control instruments, the radio experts of the navy say no secrets were lost. They had learned all that was possible about controlling the old battleship, so she was turned over to the gunnery and ordnance experts as a mobile target.

Within a short time another ship could be fitted with radio control, and it is understood that many improvements are planned. Rumor has it that one of the laid-up destroyers will probably soon be assigned for radio-control experiments and equipped with highly improved apparatus. But which of these fast scouts of the navy will be used has not been decided. Only the allotment of funds and a month or two of time are needed, it is understood. Radio equipment is ready awaiting assembly and installation.

By equipping a high-speed vessel, capable of making at least 20 knots, for radio-control, excellent practice could be given the gunners of the navy, it is said. The ship would be controlled from a mother craft by radio and maneuvered while under fire. One new feature planned for the next radio-controlled craft is likely to be armor or some protection for her aerials and sensitive radio-receiving and controlling apparatus, since the early hits in the recent one-sided engagement in Panama Bay damaged the Iowa's controls and she ran wild during her death throes. Radio has come to be very valuable, naval experts assert, in gunfire exercises of this sort, since by virtue of it live targets can be maneuvered for gunnery training—unthought of and impossible, except by towing, until radio made it practical.

Dust Causes Leakage.

A small brush should be a part of the equipment of all receiving sets. Keep the dust from collecting between the terminals, contact points, on the plates of the variable condensers. Dust the set each day. Radio instruments are delicate, and require care and attention similar to a watch if they are to function with efficiency.

NEW GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

Electron Tube Detector Unit, and a Technical Circular Are Announced.

A circular describing how to build a tube set, the third pamphlet on radio construction to be published by the Bureau of Standards, is now available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 10 cents. Write for Circular 133, "Description and Operation of an Electron-Tube Detector Unit for Simple Radio Receiving Outfits." Letter Circular No. 87, entitled "Methods of Measuring Properties of Electron Tubes," a technical paper intended to advise manufacturers and engineers how the Bureau makes its tests, will soon be ready for distribution.

Importance of Good Aerials.

To get the maximum results out of any installation and to receive the loudest signals, it is necessary to have a well-constructed and well-insulated aerial. A poorly insulated aerial is as bad as a leaky bucket. The charge slowly finds its way to the ground instead of going through the receiving apparatus.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer.

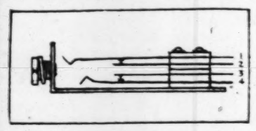
Q. (1) Will the new UV201-A tubes operate on six volts without burning out? (2) Will they work in a Flewelling circuit as well as the UV201 tubes? (3) If a six-volt battery is used, is it advisable to use a vernier rheostat? (4) Why is a longer life claimed for the battery lighting UV201-A tubes than when other types of tubes are used?

A. (1) Yes. If a rheostat is connected in the circuit, a six-volt battery may be used. (2) Yes. (3) The fine adjustment possible with a vernier rheostat is an advantage in a detector circuit. (4) Because they consume only .25 amperes, as compared with 1.0 ampere consumed by the old style (UV200 and UV201a).

Q. (1) What causes the silver-like color on the inside of the 201-A tubes? (2) Are 201-A tubes more efficient than other kinds of tubes? J. McG.

A. (1) The discoloration takes place during the process of exhaustion but does not in any way affect the operation of the tube. (2) The manufacturers claim that they are.

Q. Please explain how a two-circuit telephone jack is connected. G.



A. When used in a detector circuit terminals 1 and 4 only are used. When it is desired to use in an amplifier circuit the primary terminals of the amplifying transformer are connected to 2 and 3. With the phone plug inserted, the receivers are connected to the detector alone, but when the plug is withdrawn the outer clips spring together, connecting the detector output to the amplifier. Likewise, for the second and each additional step of amplification, the telephone jack provides the most efficient and satisfactory method of intercoupling.

Q. Please tell me where I can obtain WD-12 tubes? D. C.

A. They are not yet on the market in St. Louis, but are expected any day.

Q. Will a single-pole single-throw porcelain base switch serve to "ground" and protect an aerial from lightning? E. D.

A. The St. Louis Safety Council specifies that an approved lightning arrester be connected across the aerial lead-in and ground. The switch you mentioned would have to be able to carry 100 amperes and 600 volts to meet the underwriters' specifications.

Q. I wish to retail radio sets and parts. Please tell me where I must obtain a license and the amount of the fee. G. A. F.

A. A license is not required unless you manufacture apparatus.

Q. Is it possible to receive long-distance stations on a crystal set with a loose-coupler wound with finer wire than No. 26, or is this desirable. J. O'B.

A. No. 23 and 24 would give better results than a coil having both primary and secondary wound with No. 26.

Q. Please explain the difference between "A", "B", and "C" batteries. H. M.

A. The "A" battery lights the filaments of the tubes, and may vary in output from 1½ volts for the "peanut" tube, 3 volts for the Vacobub to 5 and 6 volts for UV201-A and UV200. "B" batteries supply the plate current and range in voltage from 22½ for the detector to 120, in amplifier circuits. The "C" battery used in the grid circuit of amplifying tubes, provides the correct negative charge on the grid.

Q. What should be the ratio of amplifying transformers? A. K.

A. From 5 (or 10 to 1 for the first stage, and 3 to 1 for the second stage in audio-frequency circuits. Radio-frequency transformers are usually of 1 to 1 ratio.

Q. I have a two-stage amplifier but am unable to get good results with it. What would you advise? J. B.

A. The usual trouble with amplifiers may be traced to improper connections at the transformer. Try reversing the primary connections, also try reversing the "A" battery leads to the amplifier. Use at least 45 volts on the plates, preferably 67½ volts (for greater amplification), and as much as 100 volts may be used with very satisfactory results.

Q. What do the initials D. C. C., S. C. C., S. S. C. and E. C. mean? J. O.

A. They refer to insulation on wire. D. C. C. means double cotton-covered; S. C. C. means single cotton-covered; S. S. C. means single silk-covered, and E. C. means enamel-covered wire.

Q. Is it necessary to have the polarity of the phones correct in a vacuum tube set? M. G.

A. While not absolutely necessary, most phones work best when current flows through them in the proper direction. This can best be determined by experimentation—reversing the leads.

Q. What size is recommended for a loop aerial? N. P. L.

A. A loop wound on a frame four feet square with 10 turns of No. 18 wire spaced one-half inch apart will be satisfactory. A clip should be used to vary the number of turns in the circuit.

Q. Which is the most satisfactory in a crystal set, a variometer or a vario-coupler?—R. J. B. Jr.

A. Of the two, the vario-coupler is decidedly preferable to the variometer, as much greater wave-length range and also much sharper tuning is possible than with the former.

Let this trial offer prove for you at our expense whether more Iron in your blood will make you well and strong

Physician tells why you must have Iron to give you Health, Strength, Energy and Endurance.

Blood corpuscles rich in iron, highly magnified. Starved blood Corpuscles highly magnified

"Lack of iron in your blood produces the most terrible of all devitalizing weaknesses and makes a man or woman a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable and easily tired out," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician at Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is the iron in your blood that takes up oxygen from your lungs. The food you eat contains carbon. As digested food is absorbed into the blood, the carbon in the food unites with the oxygenated iron in your blood, and by so doing gives off tremendous power and energy, thereby giving you great force, physical and mental vigor, and producing the material which becomes active, living cells, flesh, muscle, bone and tissue, thus performing one of the most remarkable miracles of life. Without iron, even three big meals a day will not do you any good—you do not get any strength out of your food—it is like putting coal into a stove without a fire."

Blood examinations by physicians all over the country show that three people out of every four you meet lack 100% iron in their blood, often due to modern methods of cooking and modern diet. For centuries scientists tried in vain to produce iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. At last the problem was solved, so that you can now obtain this newer form of iron from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron, which is ready for immediate absorption by the blood the moment it enters the system. A single daily dose of this newer form of iron gives your blood the opportunity of assimilating in concentrated form, iron like the iron that you could get by eating raisins, apples or spinach. It is often remarkable what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor, force and energy a little more iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

COLE MARCH PRODUCTION SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

Production figures for the month of March as given out by J. J. Cole, president and general manager of the Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis, show a gain of more than 300 per cent over the production during the month of February and the schedule of cars to be built to satisfy the demand during April will be far in excess of all anticipations.

"It is remarkable," says Mr. Cole, "how the motor buying public has grasped the real story behind our new merchandising plan and how quick they are to take advantage of a plan that means a real saving to them.

"Operating under our new sales plans we have found it necessary to increase our manufacturing facilities to take care of the increased demand and at the rate orders are coming in, we will be building more than a thousand cars per month before the end of 1923.

The Cole is distributed in St. Louis by the Cole Eads Motor Co.

LAWS have been made in many cities requiring police inspection of motor brakes at regular intervals.

Results of a recent investigation in Brooklyn, N. Y. show that 80% of all auto accidents are due to defective brakes.

Whether your brakes have to undergo police inspection or not you want to be sure of them always—for safety's sake.

The sure way is to have your lining and brake mechanism examined periodically at a reliable garage or service station.

There is one near you. You will find the name and address at the bottom of this advertisement.

COURTESY CODE FOR MOTORISTS OFFERED

New York Auto Merchants Would Have Motorists Attach Safety Code to Windshields.

Tentative approval has been given by the bureau of safety of the police department of a plan formulated by the Automobile Merchants' Association, of New York City, whereby all motorists would be required to keep before them for a period of 30 days, a courtesy code devised by the Association. The plan has met with the unanimous approval of the members.

If the idea is carried out as originally planned every motorist will be obliged to paste on his windshield a printed copy of the code, keeping it there for at least a month. Provision for compelling the automobilists to comply with the suggestion are being considered.

The code contains 11 suggestions of a general nature and, displayed as suggested, would act as a constant reminder to the driver to refrain from contributing to conditions that breed accidents. The idea is heralded as a good one and one that is applicable to all sections of the country as well as in New York City proper.

The code follows:

AUTOMOBILIST, ATTENTION!

1. Respect the rights of pedestrians.
2. Cheerfully obey the traffic officer. He protects you as well as pedestrians.
3. Keep to the right of the road.
4. When turning begin bearing in toward turn at least a block away.
5. Go slow around corners.
6. Give pedestrians plenty of room—if in doubt stop.
7. Mutual forbearance and courtesy make friends.
8. Read the motor vehicle law and traffic regulations.
9. On slippery roads drive with extreme caution.
10. A child on the highway is a danger signal. Slow up and if in doubt stop.
11. Reckless drivers are the enemies of all careful motorists.—N. Y. Automobile Merchants' Association.

GENUINE PARTS ONLY SHOULD BE USED

The recent results of a long series of tests in automobile manufacturers' laboratories indicate the danger to owners in using anything but genuine parts in such service replacements as may be necessary.

For example: In Dodge Brothers' laboratory at Detroit a test was recently applied to rear axle shafts. The genuine Dodge Brothers axle shaft withstood six complete turns in the test for torsion strength, while the best of several counterfeit shafts withstood only 1¾ turns. In testing steering wheel knuckle bolts—the genuine bolts bent double without breaking when put under a given pressure. When the same pressure was applied to counterfeit bolts, they snapped without exception, showing brittleness and defective core.

In the opinion of Frank R. Tate, president of the Tate Motor Co., Inc., Dodge Brothers distributers, such tests show very plainly why it is the best policy for motorists to depend upon service stations approved by the factory building their car, for any service parts that may be required for such replacement work as may be necessary. It is only here that parts can be guaranteed as being genuine parts.

Automobile manufacturers build their parts for service work as well as they know how because it is absolutely necessary in order to maintain the car owners' good will.

All car owners should realize the extreme importance to them of always getting genuine parts. If repairs or replacement of parts become necessary it is worth having it done in the most capable manner by an established place of business which has the stamp of approval of the manufacturer back of the car.

FRANKLIN PRODUCTION SETS NEW RECORD

More Franklin cars were produced in the month of March than we ever turned out at the Syracuse factory in any single month before, according to William Dunk, production manager. Production for the month aggregated 1501 cars. That is at the rate of 18,000 cars per year.

Production for the first quarter of this year set up a new high mark for Franklin, exceeded by 200 cars the previous best quarter's record made in the first quarter of 1920. Production will continue at the present rate of 60 cars daily.

Shipments for the first quarter were nearly three times the number recorded during the same period in 1922, according to sales department officials. Unfilled retail orders now on hand are more than six times the number on hand at the same time last year. The Franklin Motor Car Co. distributes the Franklin air-cooled car in St. Louis.

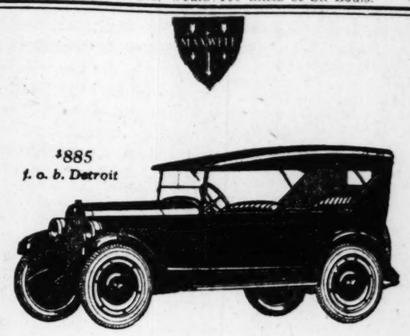
MAXWELL OUTPUT EXCEEDS SCHEDULE

Production figures for the first quarter of the current year the Maxwell Motor Corp., partly estimated, indicate a probable total output of 13,250 cars. It is now predicted by company executives that 1923 will be the biggest year in Maxwell history, outdoing the 60,000-car production originally planned for 1923. The March schedule allowed for a production of 5183 cars, this figure was surpassed according to S. B. Ward, president of the Ward Motor Co., Maxwell and Chalmers distributors.

In February 3834 cars were made against 3560 cares scheduled. January's schedule called for the production of 3495 cars and 3801 were produced. Capacity operations will be required during the rush period from April to July, it is expected, and plans are being made accordingly.

DETROIT TO ST. LOUIS.

Cadillac cars produced since 1914, when the first eight-cylinder "Standard of the World" made its appearance, if parked end to end, would make a solid line stretching out for 383 miles. This would reach from Detroit 100 miles beyond Chicago, 60 miles beyond Pittsburg, or within 100 miles of St. Louis.



$885 f. o. b. Detroit

The delightful ease of riding of the good Maxwell has contributed greatly to winning the high favor which it everywhere enjoys. The comfort of the driving position is particularly commented upon by experienced motorists.

SINGLE-SIX FOUR-PASSENGER SPORT CAR $2650 at Detroit

It is the special privilege of Packard to share with the public, economies effected by long experience and exceptional manufacturing resources.

This policy is reflected in the Single-Six and its production basis. For the first time it brings within reach of a numerous body of motorists, those superior qualities for which Packard is the symbol.

It is for this reason that the Single-Six establishes a standard for performance that, when measured by the dollar, remains unequalled and unchallenged.

WILLYS MARCH SHIPMENTS GREATEST IN HISTORY

The Willys-Overland company have just finished the largest month's shipment of Overland and Willys-Knight cars in the history of the organization. Shipments in March totalled 20,277 automobiles.

This figure is included in the grand total for the first quarter of 1923 of 44,478 cars, nearly three and one-half times as many as were turned out during the first quarter of last year by the Willys-Overland organization.

Willys-Knight shipments for the first quarter equalled the total shipments of Willys-Knight cars for the entire first half of last year, and at the present rate will excel the entire year's production of 1922 by the middle of May.

Retail orders for Overland and Willys-Knight motor cars on file at this date in the hands of dealers total a greater amount than ever before at this season and are increasing daily. President John N. Willys predicts an unprecedented record for Willys-Overland business in 1923.

LIMITATION OF TAXES ON AUTO ADVOCATED

Motor Vehicle Conference Committee Urges General Taxation for Highway Construction.

Limitation of taxation on automobiles to the amounts necessary for the maintenance of improved highways and the administration of State motor vehicle departments with the State as the sole taxing agency, is advocated in the report of the Motor Vehicle Conference Committee on which is represented the American Automobile Association, the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' Association, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the National Automobile Dealers' Association and the Rubber Association of America. Representatives of these five great national organizations, after a careful study of the taxing situation in all parts of the United States, declare that Federal, State and municipal lawmakers and governing bodies are turning to motor vehicle manufacture, sale and use as fertile fields for raising a big share of the annual revenues needed to finance governmental activities, and in doing this are placing special taxes on the automobile, which are rarely based upon sound theories of economics or equity.

The committee contends that no money derived from the special taxation of the motor vehicle should be spent for maintenance of highways unless such highways are located where the highway transportation needs of the State require and unless such highways are built of materials and in a manner to meet these needs. It is pointed out that every tax assessed against an automobile, with the exception of the personal property tax, is a special tax and the automobile is subjected to a greater percentage of these kind of taxes than any other one class of property.

Development of good roads and their maintenance during the days of the animal-drawn vehicle were financed through the expenditure of money taken out of the general purse, the lawmakers holding that the whole people benefited by the expenditure of money for such purposes. With the advent of the automobile this view gradually changed until today every legislator with a pet road building scheme for his own community plans to foist additional taxes on automobiles throughout the State in order to raise the necessary money. Many legislators hold to a new theory, namely, that motor vehicle transportation should pay every penny of the highway burden annually.

The Conference Committee regards such a theory as unwise economically and entirely unfair and unjustly hampering to the logical and legitimate growth to which the motor vehicle is entitled. It believes that the best interests of all concerned will be best served by general taxation for highway construction and special taxation of motor vehicles for highway maintenance.

Consumer Eventually Pays.

"Every tax that is levied against the automobile eventually comes out of the pocket of the consumer," said M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman of the American Automobile Association. "The widespread use of the automobile has placed small cars in the hands of thousands who can ill afford to pay an additional tax and who should not be required to pay special taxes while vast properties owned by men of wealth, which automatically increases in value through the building of these same good roads, are not required to pay any special taxes.

"For instance, suburban real estate developments have flourished near all cities as a direct result of the increased growth of the automobile and property which could readily be bought for $500 an acre a few years back is now selling for $10,000 and $12,000 an acre through subdivision into lots. The good roads which many legislators presume to charge to the automobile have aided in increasing the value of that property."

The Motor Vehicle Conference Committee, in discussing gasoline taxes, declares that gasoline consumption is a fairly accurate and practical measure of highway use and that a tax upon this fuel constitutes a fair method of taxation provided it is not imposed as a super-tax on all the other taxes that the motorist is now required to pay. It is pointed out that its extension should be opposed unless the annual proceeds as a single tax or in conjunction with other taxes are made to conform to the amount which properly and equitably should be levied upon the motor vehicle.

The main consideration, the committee report concludes, is that irrespective of the particular form of special taxation any state may adopt, the all important thing is that the aggregate amount of these special taxes upon motor vehicles in any one year shall not be more than is necessary to maintain the improved highways of the State.

A Treasure of a Car

The public has a way of giving honor where honor is due. Certainly Overland was never more worthy. It is the best Overland ever built—at the lowest price. It is better looking, more comfortable, more dependable and more economical.

In our sober judgment Overland is the greatest automobile value in the world. And we back it up to the limit of our resources.

THE MUT MOTORIST.

The following article was awarded first prize in a recent "Knocker's Contest," conducted by the Syracuse Journal:

I knock the mut motorist.

He leaves the curb without signal—stops suddenly in traffic without warning.

He uses his horn instead of his brakes in a street filled with playing children.

He steals places in traffic and "cuts in" regardless.

Overtakes and passes another car near the brow of a hill, or on a curve.

Stops his car on a curve in the road without getting out of the roadway.

He hogs the road.

His lights are blinding, nor will he dim them—damn him.

He drives with a snoot full.

He is a curse—an abomination—an affliction to humanity.

I knock him.

By A. M. Taylor, assistant advertising manager, Franklin Automobile Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

What Do You Desire Most In Your Motor Car?

Dependability? Oakland gives you a definite "Mileage Basis Plan" with which you can estimate the large number of trouble-free miles your Oakland will deliver.

Beauty? Women, especially, regard the Oakland as a beautiful car. Closed bodies are among the finest built by Fisher—ample proof of their beauty, comfort and superior equipment!

Value? No other car—anywhere near Oakland's price—gives you so much automobile for so little money! Let us show you why.

Three Long Strides in Advance

More advanced engineering features are incorporated in the Rickenbacker Six than in any other car shown this season.

Space forbids enumeration of them all. But three features represent three long strides forward—and maintain Rickenbacker leadership.

The Tandem fly-wheel—one on each end of the crankshaft—rendering this motor free from those "periods" of excessive vibration you have experenced in all other cars you have driven.

The Differential Brake Equalizer—prevents skidding and makes for safety.

And—the Air Cleaner retains the smoothness and greatly adds to the life of the motor.

Drive a Rickenbacker yourself—the sensation will be a revelation to you.

Demand is tremendous.

Only way to be sure is to order now—at once.

Today—won't be a minute too soon.

OAKLAND CLOSED CARS HAVE FISHER BODIES

Both the five-passenger coupe and sedan of the 1923 Oakland line which have been in production but two months are radically new in body design. For the first time these new closed bodies are being built by the Fisher Body Co.

The Oakland streamline has been enhanced by the new, sweeping, full crown fenders which are wider, heavier and extend over the wheels in a deep arc. The lowering of the running board an inch and a half, combined with the new fenders, are mainly responsible for the appearance of fuller depth, of more grace and power.

The windows of these new closed models are deeper and wider and afford utmost visibility for all occupants of the car. Interior appointments and fittings are likewise new to conform with the new exterior design. All pillars are metal covered.

The interior trimmings on cushions and seat backs is plush mohair velour, while wall and head lining are of gray plush mohair velour. The carpet is to match. The new refinements include cross bar type door handles; pull-to handles on the doors, two-key lock on the right door and inside lock on the others.

The principal standard equipment features include metal visor covered with waterproof fabric and adjustable rear-view mirror and double windshield wiper, curtains for rear and rear quarter windows, door windows regulated by crank control and dome light snubbers.

The five-passenger coupe takes the place of the four-passenger coupe. It is built on the same chassis as the sedan. A platform is provided in the rear for carrying a trunk, while the body back itself is protected by trunk bars.

In addition to the many refinements and improvements common to both closed cars, the five-passenger sedan has a larger cushioned front seat, which affords a greater amount of room for the two occupants. The sedan has four doors. The new Oakland models are now on display in the showrooms of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co.

BOTHELL TO SELL COUPE DE LUXE BODIES

J. F. G. Smith, sales manager of the Coupe de Luxe Body Co., builders of the coupe de luxe, triplex and duplex four-passenger coupe bodies for Ford cars announces that the Charles A. Bothell company of Philadelphia, Pa., have been appointed distributers for their products.

Charles A. Bothell, who is president of the company, is well known in the automobile industry in St. Louis owing to his many years connection with the Packard Motor Car Co. of Missouri as truck sales manager.

Smith also announced that although the production at the factory in St. Louis has been increased over 25 per cent during the past two months the factory is oversold and behind in deliveries.

PEDAL AND LEVER.

Always keep the foot pedal and hand lever in proper position, so that the footpedal will never go down far enough to strike the floor board, and so that the hand lever will never pull back and strike in its slot.

NEW MARMON PHAETONS NOW BEING PRODUCED

Two new phaetons are being brought out by the Nordyke & Marmon Co., a four-passenger phaeton at $3185 and a four-passenger convertible phaeton at $3350, both mounted on the standard 182-inch wheelbase. The lines are the same except that the convertible type includes sedan sides. The More Automobile Co., distribute the Marmon in St. Louis.

TAINSH JOINS KISSEL AS SALES DIRECTOR

George A. Kissel, president of the Kissel Motor Car Co., Hartford, Wis., has announced the appointment of John Tainsh as vice president of sales.

For the past nine years Mr. Tainsh has been general sales manager of the Mitchell Motors Co., Inc., of Racine, and has a wide acquaintance among automobile manufacturers, distributors and dealers throughout the country.

STUDEBAKER PRODUCTION REACHES 50,000 MARK

Studebaker production for the current quarter will be well over 50,000 cars, according to Ed. Weber, president of the Weber Motor Co., Studebaker distributor. During the first two months of the year 23,000 cars were produced and the final figures for March are expected to exceed 13,000 cars, or 2000 more than the monthly average this far this year. In January a schedule of $5,000 cars for the first quarter was called an optimistic one.

TO STRAIGHTEN OUT BENT FRONT AXLE

A method of restoring a front axle which has been bent is to take two lenghts of 4x4-inch joist just long enough to reach from the upper side of the axle outside each spring plate to a cross timber of the ceiling or roof of the garage. Then if a jack is placed beneath the axle at the bend enough pressure may be applied by means of it to force the axle back into shape.

TIPS FOR CAR OWNERS THAT SHOULD BE HEEDED

Frequent Inspections of Working Parts Essential to Maintain Efficiency of Automobile.

Here's a few tricks of the trade for the car owner whose pockets are not bulging with money. Some "inside facts" bearing on overhauling that old bus.

Suggestions of how to start in, follow:

1—Gasoline.

Is tank full?
Are pipes clean?
Is carburetor clean?
If carburetor needs adjusting, do it; otherwise leave it alone.
Does manifold leak?

2—Compression.

To test: Open all petcocks except on cylinder to be tested.

Crank engine, noticing how strong compression is on each cylinder in turn.

You must turn the crank over twice for each cylinder.

3—Ignition.

A. Test for sparks by taking wire off any plug; hold wire about one-eighth of an inch from plug; crank engine with switch on. Spark should jump to plug. Make sure about switch being on for test.

B. Are batteries run down? Does vibrator i(if any) buzz? Is timer clean? Does timer motor make good contact?

C. Are any wires loose, burnt, wet, broken or short-circuited? Are spark plugs clean and points one-fiftieth of an inch apart?

D. Does magneto armature revolve? Is safety spark gap clean? Are interrupter points clean and adjusted right? Do all brushes make good contact? Is distributer clean? Is distributer motor loose, broken or making poor contact?

E. Check all magneto wires as per "C."

Note—Loose wires and terminals, neglected batteries and dirty gasoline cause much trouble. The above covers everything needed to start a gasoline engine; to keep it running, cooling, lubrication and a free exhaust are necessary.

Having got the car in good running order, the next step is to keep it in that condition, and if the following 17 rules are observed, the repair bills will be small:

1. Storage battery inspected every two weeks.
2. Grease cups every 1000 miles.
3. Springs oiled every week.
4. Oil and gasoline connections inspected every week.
5. Crankcase drained and washed out with kerosene every 500 miles.
6. Universal joints packed with grease every 1000 miles.
7. Differential and transmission packed with grease or oil every 1000 miles.
8. Spark plugs cleaned every 1000 miles.
9. Carbon removed from cylinders twice a year.
10. Valves ground every 5000 miles.
11. New piston rings every 18 months.
12. See the wheels are in line once a month.
13. See that the water is circulating every time the car is started.
14. Bearings on wheels inspected once a month.
15. Gasoline pipe and carburetor thoroughly cleaned every month.
16. Self-starter inspected every month.
17. Steering wheel and steering knuckles inspected once a month.

WORN BRAKES CAUSE OF MANY AUTO FATALITIES

Life insurance companies point to the increasing death rate for automobile accidents. In 1922, in proportion to population, the number of automobile fatalities was higher than ever. But the great and encouraging fact from the standpoint of motorist is that accidents are not increasing as rapidly as motor vehicles, according to J. W. Perry, general manager of the automotive department of Johns-Manville, Inc. Per automobile on the roads, fatal accidents are nearly 50 per cent fewer today than they were in 1914.

If you were an owner or an operator of an automobile in 1914, the chance was one in 356 that your car would be involved in a fatal accident. In 1922, the chance against you was but one in 800. Though the total number of automobile fatalities has shown a steady progress for the last eight years, the death rate per automobile has shown just as steady a decline.

According to a study just completed by Perry in 1915, one out of every 453 automobiles figured in a fatal accident; in 1916, one out of 468; 1917, one in 503; 1918, one in 670; 1919, one in 675; 1920, one in 780; 1921, one in 795, and 1922, one in 800.

Recent investigations have shown, according to Perry, that probably as high as 75 per cent of all automobile accidents are due to worn brakes and brakes improperly applied, which is to say that this year 11,000 of the 15,000 probably automobile fatalities may be prevented if motorists would give proper attention to their brakes.

There are at least a dozen rules on the subject of brakes, according to Perry, which, if rigidly followed, would do much toward keeping the motorist out of jail or the hospital. If the owners and operators of automobiles in America could be convinced of the necessity of adjusting brakes every 30 days, keeping brakes on both sides operating with equal pressure, using the motor as a brake on hills, studying the brake under varying conditions, applying brakes slowly, and always allowing liberal margins of safety.

ILLUMINATED GASOLINE GAUGE ON NEW STEPHENS

An unusual feature of the new Stephens sport-type "foursome" suggests the extra convenience which can be built into a car. If you are touring at night in an average car and get to wondering about your gasoline supply, the chances are you keep on wondering until you can reach a light.

On the "foursome," the gasoline gauge has been mounted at a point on the gasoline tank where it is illuminated by the combination stop and rear light. There it is in plain view, in darkness as well as daylight.

The Stephens is distributed in St. Louis by the Berning-Payton Motor Co.

STANDARDIZATION OF HEADLIGHT LAW URGED

Standardization of laws governing headlights throughout the country is one of the chief aims of the Conference of Motor Vehicles Administration, of which several states, including New York, already are members. It is believed that ultimately the various statutes regulating headlights, which conflict in many cases, will be welded into uniformity.

The states in the conference at present, which includes the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, are seeking also to standardize brakes, traffic and traffic signals among the communities of its members.

Extra tires not in use on the car should be stored in a cool, dark, dry place.

"What kind of a Battery is in your car, John?"

"I don't remember, Bill—had it CAMEL-ized a year ago and haven't looked at it since!"

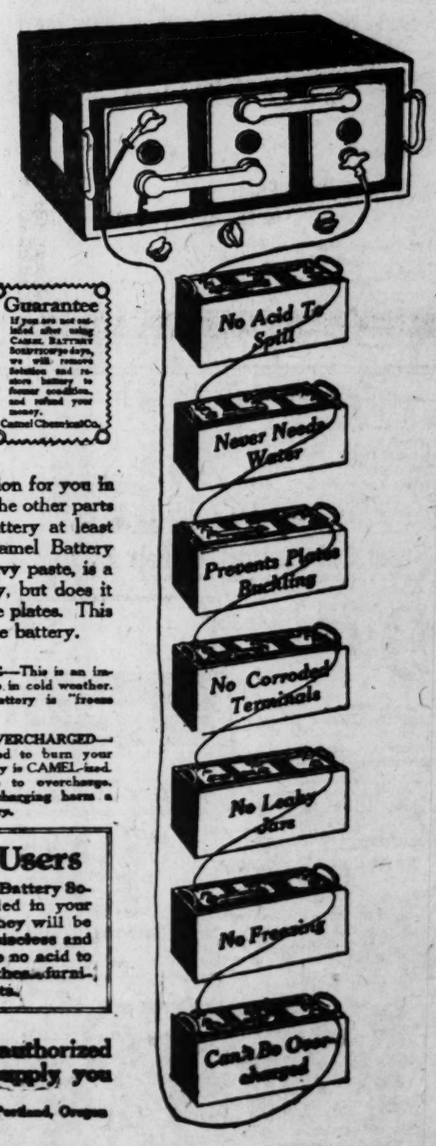
Any car owner can CAMEL-ize his own battery, and if we have no Camel Battery Station in your vicinity write us giving size of battery and we will supply you direct.

Now You Can End Your Battery Bothers

Camel Battery Solution is a chemical discovery which takes the place of water in storage batteries. When installed, it forms a heavy paste which will not evaporate nor spill. You need never add water, your battery terminals will not corrode, and your battery will last longer and give better satisfaction. Discharging does not harm, and overcharging is impossible.

Briefly, this solution does three important things, any one of which saves more than its small cost. They are these: 1—Prolongs the life of a battery. 2—Eliminates danger of ruining battery by neglect—makes it practically "forget" proof. 3—Actually makes battery more efficient.

CAMEL BATTERY SOLUTION



Guarantee
If you are not satisfied after using CAMEL BATTERY SOLUTION for 30 days, we will remove Solution and restore battery to former condition, and refund your money.
Camel Chemical Co.

ANY authorized battery service station can install Camel Battery Solution for you in 30 minutes. When CAMEL-ized, your battery is just as efficient as the other parts of your car and you pay no attention to it. Lengthens the life of your battery at least 25%—eliminates all danger of ruining your battery through neglect. Camel Battery Solution does not harden or liquify—it remains the consistency of a heavy paste, is a perfect conductor and does everything that water will do in your battery, but does it more efficiently. It entirely eliminates the washing effect of water upon the plates. This feature alone eliminates a great deal of wearing and prolongs the life of the battery.

1 NO ACID TO SPILL—A CAMEL-ized battery can be turned on its side, or upside down. It will not spill or leak.

2 NEVER NEEDS WATER—Many batteries are ruined through failure to add water. A CAMEL-ized battery needs no water. It is neglect proof.

3 PREVENTS PLATES BUCKLING—Whenever the water in a battery gets below the level of the plates, sulphation of the plates immediately sets in and a great deal of resistance is created, which means an excessive amount of heat, which in turn causes the plates to buckle. This cannot happen in a CAMEL-ized battery. Camel Battery Solution keeps the battery cool and the plates straight—another feature that means long life.

4 NO CORRODED TERMINALS—Corroded terminals are caused by slopping of the acid. Because there is no acid to slop and spill, Camel Battery Solution absolutely prevents corroded terminals.

5 NO LEAKY JARS—Many a battery has been ruined by a jar springing a leak, allowing the acid to drain out. Because of its consistency Camel Battery Solution will not drain out, even if the jar is badly cracked.

6 NO FREEZING—This is an important feature in cold weather. A CAMEL-ized battery is "freeze proof."

7 CAN'T BE OVERCHARGED—You don't need to burn your lights if your battery is CAMEL-ized. It is impossible to overcharge. Nor does under charging harm a CAMEL-ized battery.

Radio Users

Have Camel Battery Solution installed in your batteries. They will be absolutely noiseless and you will have no acid to spill on clothes, furniture or carpets.

Installed in 30 Minutes—Any authorized CAMEL-izing Battery Station can supply you

Czar's Letters to His Wife Give Details of Family Life

Historical Documents Now Being Printed for First Time Reveal Russian Emperor as a Timid, Weak Man Whose Great Virtue Was Love of His Home -His Joy at Finding "Willy" of Germany in a Good Humor When They Met at Reval Naval Maneuvers.

For the empire smarting under his despotic rule these were eventful years. Often he makes picturesque observations of persons and events around him, gives startling new glimpses behind the scenes of European royal life. But always the recurring refrain chants his blind, even pathetic, devotion to his "own precious darling," his "lovy mine," his "sweety dear," his "beloved wify Alix."

Nicky goes to Denmark to attend the funeral of his grandmother and writes Alix with shocked and startling frankness about the conduct of the royalty assembled there for the obsequies.

Again his uneasy fear of the Kaiser is indicated when he joins the German Emperor for naval maneuvers and is relieved to find that "Willy is in the best of spirits."

Nicky's typical state of mind when he was away from home is reflected in this letter, written during a journey on the imperial train nearly four years after his marriage and after the birth of Olga and Tatiana, his eldest daughters:

Sept. 22, 1898.

"My Own Beloved Sweet Wify:

"I just got your first dear telegram from Livadia. It is comforting to know that you are safely at home!

"God grant I may meet you there as quickly as possible. After all, it is a long journey. How sad I am not to see your sweet, beloved face I cannot tell you. It is true we are so accustomed to being constantly together that now we are separated I feel lost. Have you been ill, deary mine?

"Yesterday I walked at one of the stations where we got out together and gathered small shells off the ground. The shells and a tiny dolls of the children's remained in your cabin here on the table. I like to look at them because they remind me of my wify.

"Not for a second does the vision of your angelic face leave my mind, and whatever I do I always think you are somewhere near me! In the evenings we sit together and play cards, like in the afternoons—it happens to me even then to feel my eyes suddenly become moist and lumps rise in my throat, all that because poor huzy is alone! Alone."

The letter is resumed on Sept. 24:

"We have just arrived at Libau—it is fine but cold and rather windy; but what does it all matter since my sweety is not with me. I am writing to you now in my cabin on board the dear Polar Star—the two little inscriptions on the windows have remained as they were. My darling—I miss you so dreadfully and I am so jealous of the 'feldjager' (courier) who is bringing this letter—that he will see you, my adored wify!

"I love you, I love you, pray for you and think of you night and day. I kiss you and Olga and Tatiana tenderly. Give my love to Irene and my compliments to everyone.

"Ever your own truly loving huzy. God bless you and the children!

"NICKY."

Two weeks later the Czar's grandmother, the Queen of Denmark, died, and he went to Copenhagen for the funeral. On Oct. 10, 1898, he wrote:

"My Own Beloved Sweet Darling Wify:

"Here I am, arrived at last after that endless voyage by rail and sea, sitting at the same table as two years ago in the big middle room, which was our sitting room there in 1896. This is my room now. Aunt Thyra is my neighbor to the right (Mama's old room, and Aunt Alix, later Queen Alexandra of England) is left in OUR bedroom! Everything reminds me so painfully of my sweet little wify that I could cry, knowing you to be so far away.

What Happened in Denmark

Nicky dilates at length upon the loneliness and tedium of his voyage, and then continues with impressions of the royal kinfolk who met him and the funeral arrangements, thus:

"The yacht anchored at a place near Copenhagen called Bellevue—a small pier and a few houses. My astonishment was great when on landing I was met by dear Apapa (King Christian of Denmark), Mama and the whole family. They all looked more cheery and less worn out than I imagined. As soon as we drove up to the house they led me into the bedroom where stands the coffin, shut and surrounded by masses of flowers—wreaths which look very pretty.

"Still I must say it seems sad to me to think that the body does not remain in a church hereby—I think it would be preferable in every respect. Poor Papa looks remarkably fresh; he goes into that room constantly and then takes long, long walks—on which, of course, the family accompanies him.

"The reason of the delay of the funeral is that everything concerning the burial, black cloth garments, catafalk, etc., have been lost in a fire that occurred some years ago and the ceremonials have disappeared! Apapa wants the funeral to be a State ceremony, and they therefore need such a long time to get these preparations ready. When I come back I shall tell all I have heard from Mama and the others about poor Anama's (the Queen's) last days—touchingly sad!

"My sweet darling, I love you too madly and deeply for words, everything here reminds me so of you. But now alas, I must end, as the messenger might miss the train. God bless you, my beloved own little wify. Kiss the children tenderly for me, Irene also. I shall write as often as I can. I picked the pansy for you in the garden. Goodby, my joy and happiness.

"Ever your very own loving true huzy,

"NICKY."

Fighting at the Funeral

King Christian was sometimes called "the Grandfather of Europe." His children and grandchildren included Queen Alexandra and King George of England, Empress Dagmar of Russia, mother of the Czar, King George I of Greece and King Haakon of Norway, as well as other lesser rulers. Thus, thirty-six members of various European reigning families were gathered at the Danish Court for the Queen's funeral ceremonies. Two days later the Czar wrote from Copenhagen to "beloved darling Alix:"

"I have got quite into the family again. They all ask us about you and the children and regret your absence very much. Mother dear and Apapa were exceedingly sorry you had not come, as they had not heard about Irene's long journey to China.

"Of course I explained to them about the difficulty we both experienced during the first days after Anama's (the Queen's) death, as to whether I or we two were to go to Denmark. Mama told me that Apapa expressed the wish that I was to come, and it was for his sake that she had telegraphed to me. Therefore, I feel that I have done my duty and am pleased in this sense to be here with them. On the whole we are thirty-six members of the family living here together and some in town.

"We lunch and dine and walk in a crowd; and do not see the ladies and gentlemen! (Court attendants.) Anyone who saw the family at the table could not imagine that the grandmother was dead and that everybody was assembled here for the funeral. Such jabbering laughing and fighting are going on all day. Aunt Olga told me that Apapa had said he felt happy and comforted seeing the young generations going on with boisterous manners, as nature has got its laws that nothing can change. The days are spent exactly as they used to be, much time lost in dawdling and waiting for each other. It astonishes us all to see the amount of walking dear Apapa takes every day; one could never say he is 80.

"Your name is continually used here (Aunt Alix and little Alix of Cumberland), and that makes me start up every time and gives me a shock. Fancy boysy is so and that he is alone, that it has not made me forget about his very existence. He sends his respects to lady, Christian (prince), and Adine looks very happy; she is rather fattish. Maud is thinner than ever, but looks well and drives every day on her bicycle with Charles near her. The Cumberland cousins are very nice and all three are such tall, handsome, charming girls, Misha (Grand Duke Michael, the Czar's brother), that sinner gets on perfectly with them; during the walks two of them always hang on his arms.

"God bless you, my own beloved little wify — and I never cease praying for you and our sweet little daughters, and every night in my bed I send you three my fondest kisses and blessings.

"Ever your own truly loving and passionately devoted old boob and huzy,

"NICKY."

"Georgie" Writes "May"

The present King George of England—"Georgie"—was there, and his epistolary constancy to "May," now Queen Mary, was revealed in an ardent letter Nicky wrote three days later:

"Oh! how I wish I were with you in dear Livadia, near the lovely blue sea. And the nights—it so hard to be separated then. Not one kiss before sleeping!

"Cheer up, my beloved, only one week more and then huzy shall be again quite yours, and utterly yours, and in your dear loving arms. I don't know what I shall be capable of doing the moment I see you! It will be early in the morning of the 9th in Sebastopol, I hope, if the sea is smooth the day before and if Wify chooses to cross over in the yacht!

"Georgie is sitting and reading in my room. He writes daily to May. Is not that good? But now, my darling, I must close, as the others are going out for a walk God bless you, my own Alix; a tender kiss to you, Olga and Tatiana."

Throughout the royal funeral ceremonies in Copenhagen, Nicky was impatient to return to his "own beloved little wify," and on the eve of his departure, Oct. 16, he wrote to her:

"Tomorrow morning, Misha and I leave. My heart leaps already for joy at the idea alone of our meeting and at the same place, let us hope, where we separated.

"My Alixy, my beloved sweet wify-kins, I love you passionately, madly my own little darling."

Alone on His "Sopha"

The following Spring the Czar's third daughter, Marie, was born. That Summer the death of his brother called him to Moscow. On his departure he poured forth his emotion to Alix in this letter:

PETERHOF, July 22, 1899.

"My own sweet little Wify dear:

"It seems strange to write to you, while I am sitting downstairs in my room and I know that you are quietly on your balcony. But tomorrow I shall be far away and I do not want to let a day pass without your hearing from huzy, either from his lips or on paper, how he loves you and the three little ones. My darling, our separation this time is not long, so be cheery, and try and have the babies with you as much as possible. Please invite my old dog for your meals and do not forget to feed our dickies outside

"I rather dread the meeting in Moscow. After four years separation, to see one's brother arrive in a coffin—is a horrid idea. I am afraid it will also upset poor mama! Well! There is nothing to be done, we must as usual take courage and carry our cross patiently, as Jesus Christ bids us. But sometimes it is overwhelmingly hard

"I dare complain the least, having such happiness on earth, which I could not think of, having a treasure like you, my beloved Alix, and already three little cherubs!

"From the depth of my heart do I thank God for all His blessings, in giving me you. He gave me paradise and has made my life an easy and happy one. Labor and passing troubles are nothing to me, once I have got you by my side. Perhaps my expression does not show it, but I feel it deeply.

"Sweety-darling, it is very, very hard for me to have to leave you. It hurts me to think that you will be alone for two nights! At least you can have the baby with you, if you like, but huzy will sleep solitary on the sopha in our railway carriage!

"God bless you, my beloved 'dushka' (little soul). Be sure that my prayers and thoughts are constantly around. I must end, as we both want to play besique.

"Goodnight, my sweet darling Alix, my own wife, my joy, my happiness, my one and all! God bless you and the dear little daughters! Ever your own truly devoted and deeply and passionately loving huzy.

Czar and Kaiser at Reval

This picture was taken aboard a warship when the two Emperors were viewing naval maneuvers. "Willy was enchanted" and Nicholas was uneasily hoping he would remain so.

Waiting for the Kaiser

The Czar's dislike for the Kaiser—revealed in other installments—and his uneasiness over encountering him are again indicated in a letter written in 1902. Willy and Nicky are to meet at naval maneuvers off Reval. Admiral Rodjestvensky, whose fleet was disastrously defeated a few years later by the Japanese off Tsushima, was in charge of Willy's welcome. On July 23, 1902, Nicky wrote from Reval:

"The bay is very fine and deep; we lie near to the shore, which, is convenient for my old dog, who enjoys his walks and feels really well. After luncheon I visited the flagship Minin and spoke about all details for Willy's reception—with the excellent Admiral, Rodjestvensky. From there I went straight on shore and drove through the whole town with Uncle Alexei."

The arrival of Willy and the Kaiser's militaristic delight over the display of floating war force are described in a letter from Reval the next day:

"My beloved Wify:

"Thank you a thousand times for your dear letter, which came before lunch, but which I read only before dinner. The weather was glorious the whole day. We left the yach at 7 in the morning and steamed out for an hour to meet William. He came with two other ships at the right time on board the Standart.

"We passed the lines of the ships—his tow and the Polar Star following, and then we anchored at our old place. It was a very pretty picture and he seemed delighted, especially as I begged him to say good morning to the crews. After that I paid him a short visit with Uncle Alexei and then I showed him the Retvizan. During luncheon on board our yacht it poured for a short time, but then it got beautiful again.

Likes the Crown Prince

"At 3 we went on board the Minin and left with the whole squadron. I must say they maneuvered and shot at targets very well. At 6 we got back to our yachts. At 8 we are going to dine with William. Then some more shooting when it gets dark. Rather a full day as you see!!

"I like Friedrich Heinrich (the Crown Prince) very much—he is so well brought up He asked much about you. Willy also; he is in the best of spirits till now. Let us hope he may continue so. Bulow (the Kaiser's Chancellor) that idiot, appeared as a hussar, too ridiculous—I think I am going to give Lamsdorff (the Czar's Foreign Minister) a Cossack uniform.

"God bless you, my love, my sweet darling Alix. I kiss you and the children lovingly.

"Your very own,

"NICKY."

"Willy Is Enchanted"

On July 25, still at the maneuvers at Reval with the Kaiser, Nicky writes, describing the scene in the bay and the impression the Russian gunners made on the German visitors, and continues:

"All thanks to him. Please write to M. to have him thanked from me from the bottom of my heart. I cannot tell you how happy I am, though I try not to show it before them all. This morning there was shooting at long ranges, and at targets on the island with full charges. The noise was terrific, but we all put wadding into our ears, which was much better. After that I took Willy on the Pabeda, which he admired still more than the Retvizan.

"He showed me his cruiser, the Prince Heinrich, a very strong and new ship. This afternoon we all landed on the empty island Carlos and looked at land maneuvers of 2500 sailors with eight guns. That reminded me of Bjorke last year. The dear men did it remarkably well, especially the march past with a very good band. Wily was enchanted. Today he gave me his aguillettes and I mine! Most amiable and modest, without any nervousness and no serious conversation!

"God bless you, my sweet darling Alixy, I kiss you and children tenderly.

"Your own,

"NICKY."

NEXT SUNDAY'S INSTALLMENT—More intimate word pictures of European royalty appear in the Czar's letters of the next period of his reign, from 1902 to the eve of the World War. The sinister forerunner of Rasputin enters the lives of Nicky and Alix. What happened when the Shah of Persia came to the army maneuvers, the Russo-Japanese War and inside glimpses of the Czar's famous visit to the Kaiser in Berlin in 1913 are some of the high lights of this installment.

In succeeding installments will appear historically important revelations from the Czar's World War letters.

Medical Society Offers Free Service to Crippled Children

Many Improveed by Treatment Last Year

Offer of St. Louisans Open Not Only to Local Children of Parents Who Cannot Pay, but to Those Outside —First Clinic April 23.

The St. Louis Medical Society has determined by resolution to repeat last year's survey to learn how many crippled children in and about St. Louis are not receiving corrective treatment because of the inability of their parents to pay, and to renew at this time its offer to provide free medical, surgical, hospital or appliance treatment for those children.

The offer is not confined to the crippled children of St. Louis, but is open to children residing in any part of the Southwest, which commonly regards St. Louis as its capital. Last year the committee received the names of crippled children from seven states outside Missouri.

The same method of searching out the children will be employed as last year. The Post-Dispatch will print from day to day a blank to be filled in with the names of untreated crippled children of parents unable to pay, to be mailed to the Medical Society either by the parent or other persons knowing of the existence of the crippled child.

The Committee on Public Health and Instruction of the Medical Society will inquire into the cases reported and will notify the parents of the children to present them at specified times during a three-day clinic to be conducted at its building, 3525 Pine street, April 23, 24 and 25.

Specialized Service Provided.

At that clinic members of the society who specialize in orthopedic surgery, general surgery, pediatrics and neurology will examine the children and will prescribe the treatment necessary to accomplish a maximum betterment of their condition. In this way, the children will receive the best specialized service obtainable in St. Louis.

The parents then will be instructed to present their children at clinics or to take them to hospitals for treatment for so long a period as may be necessary.

This method, used last year, resulted in the names of 473 children being reported to the society. Of these, 123 were from outside St. Louis. The number examined in the clinic was 269 and of these 213 were referred to clinics or sent to hospitals. Forty-four physicians participated in examination and diagnosis at the clinic.

Most of the children referred for treatment were sent to the clinics of Washington and St. Louis universities. Other were sent to city hospital and to hospitals in which orthopedic clinics were conducted.

The Committee of Public Health and Instruction has obtained a record of the disposition of the cases from Washington and St. Louis universities, but because of lack of systematic follow-up records in other of the clinics and hospitals has not a complete check upon the children who passed through those institutions.

Marked Improvement Shown.

Of 75 children instructed to report for treatment at Washington University Dispensary, 48 appeared. Investigation by the clinic disclosed that of the 27 not reporting, two had died, five had removed from the city, four were not crippled, but were suffering from a neurological condition that could not be bettered by clinic treatment; five were not found and five still are promising at more propitious times to enter the clinic.

Of the 48 reporting to the clinic, operations for the improvement of their condition was performed upon 16; the condition of 16 was otherwise markedly improved and they weer discharged and 16 still are reporting for treatment.

The record at the St. Louis University clinic shows that 32 of the 43 children assigned reported and obtained treatment. Of these, 14 have shown marked improvement and have been discharged. Others are still receiving treatment with prospect of improvement.

The Committee on Public Health and Instruction of the Medical Society is composed of Dr. A. H. Hamel, former president of the Missouri State Medical Association; Dr. Hanau Loeb, dean of the school of medicine of St. Louis University, and Dr. Nathaniel Allison, dean of the Washington University School of Medicine. The committee's comment upon the result of its first campaign follows:

First Campaign Success.

"This committee feels that the Medical Society has been fully compensated by the results of its first campaign. The improvement in the condition of many of the children, some of whom have recived free treatment for more than a year, has been so great as to wholly revolutionize the future before them. In again offering the facilities at its command for the care of other crippled children, the committee feels that there exist in country districts adjacent to St. Louis many crippled children, who can be virtually made over physically if their parents become aware of the means at their disposal. In undertaking its second campaign, the committee feels that it is likely that a large number of the cases reported will be from outside the city. It further feels that parents of crippled children who have not continued to bring their children for treatment will be moved to resume. In many cases progress is tedious and parents frequently become discouraged. A second campaign undoubtedly will serve to revive in the consciousness of those parents their obligation to faithfully pursue any course which will tend to improve the physical condition of their children.

"The committee desires at this time to repeat some general comment made at the opening of its 1922 survey. The care, and particularly the vocational training of crippled children is a function of the State. Many states accept the responsibility and have provided hospitals and sanataria for the children. Missouri, as yet, has provided no such institutions. The State failing in the flunction, it falls upon the medical profession to do all in its power to relieve these children.

"In former times, the cripple remained a cripple, was dependent either on his relatives or the community and was reduced to the submerged of society. He became a professional beggar or worked at some occupation that threw into the foreground his pitiable condition and his appeal for sympathy and charity. The medical profession at this time recognizes the moral claim the cripple has upon us and undertakes to satisfy the claim in the light of recent progress in orthopedic surgery.

Two Classes of Cripples.

"Cripples may be divided into two classes—the actual cripple, that is he who is deformed or made lame and will remain so; and the potential cripple, he who is diseased or injured in such a way that before him lies the possibility either of becoming an actual cripple or of having such a condition alleviated or prevented.

"The Medical Society is concerned chiefly with the latter class, for the possibility of accomplishment is great among these children. Most deformities in children are either congenial (present at birth) or the product of tuberculosis or infantile paralysis. One common congenital deformity is club foot. Taken within a few days or weeks after birth, the reasonable expectation is that, with treatment over an extended period, the feet can be straightened so that the child can walk with no appreciable impediment. This has been accomplished in St. Louis in a number of aggravated cases. Improvement in the condition of children with club feet can be had up to the age of 12 or 14 years, but early treatment is the most profitable. The committee urges all mothers of children with club feet to advise the committee at once. Much good can be accomplished in these cases.

Tuberculosis in Joints.

"Tuberculosis of the joints is an affliction which not only produces bad deformities in the extremities, but also 'hunchback.' If not arrested, it may result in general tuberculosis and often death.

"If uncombated, it produces deformities which grow more aggravated as the disease progresses. When the disease is arrested, the progress of deformity also is arrested and in some cases, lessened.

"Cure of tuberculosis of the joints have been effected in numbers of cases and children who were bedridden and facing the prospect of always being bed-ridden have been enabled to get about and to help themselves to a considerable degree. Tuberculosis of the joints requires long treatment, best had in special institutions that are at the command of the Medical Society's Committee. However, when parents prefer to have their children remain at home, treatment under those conditions can be provided also.

Trial Should Be Made.

"The effects of infantile paralysis range from paralysis of some isolated set of muscles to total paralysis. In some cases, complete recovery is possible. In others, partial improvement can be had. In some, only small relief can be given, but the degree of progress possible cannot be told without trial.

"Neglected, paralysis of one set of muscles commonly causes deformities because of overaction in other sets of muscles.

"The committee cannot urge too strongly that parents who have children with some irregularity in their physical makeup report their cases at this time. The chief requisite of success is early treatment.

"Many crippled children are now being cared for in the manner the committee has at its command, but the channels that have brought in these children have exhausted themselves. Other methods of seeking are needed. Persons living outside of St. Louis who know of some crippled child should write to the committee also."

SPECIAL TRAIN TO TAKE VETERANS TO NEW ORLEANS

Cocoanut Oil Makes a Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten your hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

To Keep Hair Curly in Most Trying Weather

You needn't worry about damp or windy weather spoiling the wavy appearance of your hair if you use stimerine. And you can dance all evening without having your tresses stringing about your face. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a bottle of liquid stimerine from your druggist and follow the accompanying instructions. It will enable you to have just the prettiest waves and curls, so natural looking no one will guess they were artificially produced. The curliness is quickly acquired and lasts considerably longer than where the heated iron is used. Life, luster and beauty of the hair are preserved by this harmless product. It leaves no sticky or greasy trace.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

INGROWN NAILS

Toe Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen the Skin

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

WELL, I haven't had much time lately to dope out many new jokes. I have been helping the Girls in the Follies make out their Income Tax. A vital question came up, do Presents come under the heading of Salary? You know that's a mighty big item with us. When I say Us, I don't mean Me, as no one has given me anything yet, but I stick around in case a few crumbs drop.

I have been looking for a bribe from some of our prominent men to keep their name out of my act, but the only ones who even speak to me are the ones I mention. So I guess about the only way you can get a Man sore nowadays is to ignore him.

One Girl wanted to charge off taxicab fares to and from the theater. I told her she couldn't do that. She said, "Well, how am I to get there?" I said, "Well, as far as the Government is concerned, you can come on the Subway." She said, "Oh! What is the Subway?"

Another Girl who has been with the various Follies for 10 years wanted to know what She could charge off for Depreciation. And she was absolutely right, because, if, after being with them for that long, and you haven't married at least one Millionaire, you certainly have a legitimate claim for Depreciation.

I reminded one of the Girls that she had neglected to include two of her Alimony allowances. She said, "Do I have to put them all in?" I said, "Why, certainly you do." The Girl said, "Well, how did the Government keep track of them? I couldn't."

WELL, I haven't had much time lately to dope out many new jokes. I have been helping the Girls in the Follies make out their Income Tax. A vital question came up, do Presents come under the heading of Salary? You know that's a mighty big item with us. When I say Us, I don't mean Me, as no one has given me anything yet, but I stick around in case a few crumbs drop.

I have been looking for a bribe from some of our prominent men to keep their name out of my act, but the only ones who even speak to me are the ones I mention. So I guess about the only way you can get a Man sore nowadays is to ignore him.

One Girl wanted to charge off taxicab fares to and from the theater. I told her she couldn't do that. She said, "Well, how am I to get there?" I said, "Well, as far as the Government is concerned, you can come on the Subway." She said, "Oh! What is the Subway?"

Another Girl who has been with the various Follies for 10 years wanted to know what She could charge off for Depreciation. And she was absolutely right, because, if, after being with them for that long, and you haven't married at least one Millionaire, you certainly have a legitimate claim for Depreciation.

I reminded one of the Girls that she had neglected to include two of her Alimony allowances. She said, "Do I have to put them all in?" I said, "Why, certainly you do." The Girl said, "Well, how did the Government keep track of them? I couldn't."

One Girl charged off a non-providing Husband under the heading of Bad Debts. We charged off all Cigarettes smoked in Public under the heading Advertising.

One Sweetheart who paid for a Girl's Dinner every night went thoroughly broke in Wall Street by trying to corner Canned Tomatoes in the late Piggledy-Wiggledy uprising. We figured up what the dinners would be for the rest of the year and charged him off as a Total Loss.

Of course, while the girls had these tremendous salaries, I was able to help on account of my technical knowledge of them (as I dress with their Chauffeurs) and on account of my equal knowledge of making out an Income Tax with any man in the World, As none of us know a thing about it.

Look what I saved them on Bathing Suits! I had them all claim they bought various Suits. And I defy even a Congressional Investigating Committee (and you certainly can't pick any more useless Body of men than they are) I defy them to say that a Bathing Suit on a Beautiful Girl don't come under the heading of Legitimate Advertising.

Now, as I say, these Girls all wanted to do what was right, as they could afford to, but this Income Tax has not acted that way with the Men. The Income Tax has made more Liars out of the American People than Golf has.

Even when you make one out on the level, you don't know, when it's through, if you are a Crook or a Martyr.

Of course, people are getting smarter nowadays; they are letting Lawyers, instead of their conscience, be their Guide.

There is some talk of lowering it, and they will have to. People are not making enough to pay it.

And, by the way, the only way they will ever stop Bootlegging, too, is to make them pay an Income Tax. (At present it is a Tax-exempt Industry.) Income Tax has stopped every other Industry, so there is no reason why it won't stop Bootlegging.

Thrifty Girls Incorporate.

Of course, some of our more thrifty Girls have followed the example of their Male Tax Dodging friends and Incorporated (as the rate is lower on Corporations) Wall Street attended to that little matter when they were drawing the Tax Bill up in Washington.

These Girls had to do that, the same as men, to protect their Salaries. Of course, the big Gamble in buying into these Individual Corporations is the Lucky chance that she might make one or more more wealthy marriages during the year. When of course, her being Incorporated, all she gets comes under the heading of Income, and you, as a Stockholder, get your Pro Rata Share. If she lands a big one you have struck Oil. Then, on the other hand, she may marry for love. In that case you have brought in a Duster.

Now, I can't tell you the name but I was lucky enough to land 5 shares just before a Blonde Corporation married a Multi-Millionaire who was over 70 years of age. Us Stockholders have figured out at our last meeting that if he dies when we think he will (and we have no reason to believe otherwise, unless the Poison acts as a Monekey Gland) why, just those 5 shares will make me independent for life.

I don't want to use this space as an ad, but I have been able for a small monetary fee to tip off my friends just what stock to buy. You see I am in a position to judge as I watch who is in the front row every night and I can just tell when Meddlesom's Spring Song will start percolating for some particular Corporation. Now, at the present time, there is every night in the front row a Millionaire Oklahoma Oil Magnate and a Bootlegger, both angling for the same Corporation. If this Bootlegging person lands her, why her Stockholders are made for life, but if the Oil Magnate comes through, (for sometimes these female Corporations are swayed by sentiment) why the stock won't be worth within a thousand Percent of what it will if the Bootheel Party lands.

Now, take me personally; this Income Tax thing don't bother me at all. You are allowed 200 dollars for each Child, and my Children and my Income are just coming out even now.

Nick's Promising Career.

Well, we have had quite a few prominent Visitors in to look us over lately. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth with a party of Friends were in last night, and were good enough to come back in the dressing room and give me all the latest on Washington.

I told her I had heard her Husband, Nick, might be the next Speaker of the House. She said she didn't know. I told her I would hate to see that, as now he had an awful lot of friends. Being Speaker of the House is just like jumping, in a small Town, from Town Marshal to Justice of the Peace. That is as far as you can go politically. So I hate to see Nick get in bad and spoil a promising Career. I can understand him wanting to be Speaker of a House, as I have visited them at home, and it will at least be a Novelty for him.

I asked her who it looked like the Democrats would run. She said she heard more of Ford than any one. Well, that will at least save everybody the trouble of asking who is he, and what has he done?

Among the prominent Movie Visitors last Night was Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese Screen Star nd his cunning little Japanese Wife. After introducing them to the audience, I said that they were a Movie couple who were still married to each other, which might not mean so much in their Country, as perhaps it was a Native custom to stay married in Japan, but that is this Country it was a novelty.

Would Catch Prince in Net.

Well, see by the Papers where the Prince of Wales over in England fell off his Horse again today. That's got so it is not News any more. If he stayed on it would be News. England is all worked up over what to do, as they are afraid he will be hurt. I should suggest they have men follow along on foot with a Net and catch him each time as he falls.

CATHOLIC PASTOR'S GOLDEN JUBILEE

The Rev. Eugene Coyle of Kirkwood to Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary of Ordination April 18.

The Rev. Eugene Coyle, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church in Kirkwood, best known in St. Louis as former pastor of the Old Cathedral, will celebrate the golden jubilee of his ordination Wednesday, April 18.

On that day solemn high mass will be celebrated in the church at 10 a. m., followed by a reception to visiting clergy, and dinner at 12:30 o'clock. In the evening, members of the parish and residents of Kirkwood will attend a reception in the school hall.

Father Coyle, who is 75 years old, was born in Ireland, and began his studies for the priesthood in that country, finishing his course in Milwaukee. He was ordained at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, by Bishop Ryan. He served in this city and in several North Missouri parishes before his appointment, by Archbishop Kenrick, as pastor of St. Patrick's. In 1885 he was made pastor of the Cathedral, at Second and Walnut streets, and remained there for 20 years, during which the neighborhood of the Cathedral changed greatly, and the seat of the diocese was transferred to the New Cathedral on Lindell boulevard.

In 1915, Archbishop Glennon appointed him to the Kirkwood pastorate, and he has since brought about the reconstruction of the church building, and improvements in the pastoral residence, the home of the teaching sisters and the parish cemetery.

About 250 members of the clergy are expected to attend the jubilee, and, it is announced, "drink a toast in pure spring water" to the jubilarian.

AN INSULT TO SACCO.
(From the Seattle Union-Record, Labor.)

Adding insult to deepest injury is the only explanation of the action of Judge Webster Thayer in ordering an examination of Nicola Sacco's sanity as he lies upon his prison bed on the thirty-first day of his hunger strike.

Unimaginable as it may be to the stodgy jurist, there are still left in America men who will risk death for their convictions. Sacco is one of them, and Judge Thayer's action casts contumely upon himself and the bench.

It should be noted that the Boston Bar Association has interested itself actively in the Sacco case now, determined to see what kind of justice has been meted out to him and his companion, Bartolomeo Vanzetti. If there is any examination to be made, let it be made into the practice of American jurisprudence. The National Bar Association recently advised a complete overhauling of our judicial system with just such cases as the Sacco-Vanzetti trial in mind.

The imputation that a man who hunger strikes in protest against the viciousness of a prejudiced trial is crazy is deeply insulting not only to Sacco, but to the millions in America whose causes have at various times been represented by hunger strikes. Our suffragists had to do this and with remarkable success. Probably the most noteworthy example in recent history is the hunger strike of Terence MacSwiney, which broke the spirit of the British Government.

The heart of labor is with Nicola Sacco today. Workers know that if he is insane it is because he has been driven so by a vile persecution, but in the absence of proof of insanity they care rather to level that charge at the social system, which seeks to break the Saccos and Vanzettis on its rack.

WHY IT IS TYRANNY.
(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

Harding can go to Florida and enjoy himself—and the political prisoners can stay in jail and do time for exercising the traditional American right of freedom of speech. Harding could release them with a stroke of his pen? He does not do so—because he and his friends do not believe what the political prisoners said was true. Probably if we knew all they said we would not believe all of it either. But what difference does that make?

The essence of free speech is that you let the other fellow have the same liberty of expression which you claim for yourself, no matter whether you agree with him or not. It is this great fundamental principle which our officials have undermined—and, by doing so, have earned for themselves the name of tyrants. It is not mere idle use of language when we call them tyrants. Their actions are the quintessence of tyranny—and the appellation is accurate.

Back in the eighteenth century a French encyclopedist, Claude Adrien Helvetius, wrote a book—De l'Esprit, by name—which was condemned by the Parliament of Paris to be publicly burned. Voltaire wrote to him, "I wholly disapprove of what you say, and will defend to the death your right to say it."

That is the correct attitude. Neither the capitalist politicians who deny I. W. W.'s and Communists freedom of speech, nor Communists who deny Socialists and capitalists freedom of speech, have the broad-mindedness of Voltaire. Freedom of speech and press lies at the very basis of civilized society. Without these fundamentals there is no freedom at all.

STEEL DICTATORSHIP.
(From the Labor Age, Union Labor)

So long as the United States Steel Corporation has not accepted the democratic policy of conferring with organized labor, no nook or cranny of the trade union movement is safe from attack. The choice of the wage earners of the United States seems to lie between giving effective help to the steel workers in their organizing efforts and submitting to the benevolent dictatorship of Mr. Gary and his oligarchy throughout industry.

We know what that dictatorship means. It means spies and detective agencies. It means corporation control of local governments and of constabularies and police. It means the influencing of the press and clergy and so of "public opinion." It means the 12-hour day, wages set solely by "supply and demand," no conference with organized workers, completely autocratic control of industry.

A corporation with the policy of the Steel Trust behaves in the community precisely the same way that conquerors behave in the midst of a hostile population. It behaves in the way that autocratic governments have behaved from the beginning of time. It rules not by consent, but by force and craft. Are American workmen satisfied to accept this type of dictatorship? Or do they prefer open, decent and self-respecting democracy? If they do prefer the latter, their salvation rests entirely upon their own foresight and energy.

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of labor unions and the Communist and Socialist Parties, showing the trend of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

AN INSULT TO SACCO.
(From the Seattle Union-Record, Labor.)

Adding insult to deepest injury is the only explanation of the action of Judge Webster Thayer in ordering an examination of Nicola Sacco's sanity as he lies upon his prison bed on the thirty-first day of his hunger strike.

Unimaginable as it may be to the stodgy jurist, there are still left in America men who will risk death for their convictions. Sacco is one of them, and Judge Thayer's action casts contumely upon himself and the bench.

It should be noted that the Boston Bar Association has interested itself actively in the Sacco case now, determined to see what kind of justice has been meted out to him and his companion, Bartolomeo Vanzetti. If there is any examination to be made, let it be made into the practice of American jurisprudence. The National Bar Association recently advised a complete overhauling of our judicial system with just such cases as the Sacco-Vanzetti trial in mind.

The imputation that a man who hunger strikes in protest against the viciousness of a prejudiced trial is crazy is deeply insulting not only to Sacco, but to the millions in America whose causes have at various times been represented by hunger strikes. Our suffragists had to do this and with remarkable success. Probably the most noteworthy example in recent history is the hunger strike of Terence MacSwiney, which broke the spirit of the British Government.

The heart of labor is with Nicola Sacco today. Workers know that if he is insane it is because he has been driven so by a vile persecution, but in the absence of proof of insanity they care rather to level that charge at the social system, which seeks to break the Saccos and Vanzettis on its rack.

WHY IT IS TYRANNY.
(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

Harding can go to Florida and enjoy himself—and the political prisoners can stay in jail and do time for exercising the traditional American right of freedom of speech. Harding could release them with a stroke of his pen. He does not do so—because he and his friends do not believe what the political prisoners said was true. Probably if we knew all they said we would not believe all of it either. But what difference does that make?

The essence of free speech is that you let the other fellow have the same liberty of expression which you claim for yourself, no matter whether you agree with him or not. It is this great fundamental principle which our officials have undermined—and, by doing so, have earned for themselves the name of tyrants. It is not mere idle use of language when we call them tyrants. Their actions are the quintessence of tyranny—and the appellation is accurate.

Back in the eighteenth century a French encyclopedist, Claude Adrien Helvetius, wrote a book—De l'Esprit, by name—which was condemned by the Parliament of Paris to be publicly burned. Voltaire wrote to him, "I wholly disapprove of what you say, and will defend to the death your right to say it."

That is the correct attitude. Neither the capitalist politicians who deny I. W. W.'s and Communists freedom of speech, nor Communists who deny Socialists and capitalists freedom of speech, have the broad-mindedness of Voltaire. Freedom of speech and press lies at the very basis of civilized society. Without these fundamentals there is no freedom at all.

STEEL DICTATORSHIP.
(From the Labor Age, Union Labor)

So long as the United States Steel Corporation has not accepted the democratic policy of conferring with organized labor, no nook or cranny of the trade union movement is safe from attack. The choice of the wage earners of the United States seems to lie between giving effective help to the steel workers in their organizing efforts and submitting to the benevolent dictatorship of Mr. Gary and his oligarchy throughout industry.

We know what that dictatorship means. It means spies and detective agencies. It means corporation control of local governments and of constabularies and police. It means the influencing of the press and clergy and so of "public opinion." It means the 12-hour day, wages set solely by "supply and demand," no conference with organized workers, completely autocratic control of industry.

A corporation with the policy of the Steel Trust behaves in the community precisely the same way that conquerors behave in the midst of a hostile population. It behaves in the way that autocratic governments have behaved from the beginning of time. It rules not by consent, but by force and craft. Are American workmen satisfied to accept this type of dictatorship? Or do they prefer open, decent and self-respecting democracy? If they do prefer the latter, their salvation rests entirely upon their own foresight and energy.

...RAH AND RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA.
...m The Worker, Communist Organ.)

...re are several motifs driving ...ecognition of soviet Russia by the United States. Militant labor demands it, knowing it will be an aid to the Russian and the world revolution. Unthinking workers feel that it will provide more jobs, as it will, through the development of trade, so they are for it. Farmers, similarly, see an outlet for the surplus from their fields. Industrial overlords behold new opportunities to profiteer. And all the time the old party politician assures himself of an opportunity to make political capital for himself.

We give United States Senator William E. Borah credit for being sincere in his desires for the opening of trade relations with and the recognition of the Russian soviet republic. Yet his speech at Madison Square Garden left much to be desired. Since 16 different nations, among them Japan, have already cleared the way, it seems, that a member of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, as Mr. Borah is, could make a much stronger fight for a thing in which he deeply believes.

Mr. Borah's address was more an apology to, rather than a defiance of, the great capitalist forces in this country that have not only successfully opposed recognition of Russia's Government, but have exerted their utmost strength in an effort to overthrow the First Workers' Republic.

It cannot be that Senator Borah is merely using the recognition issue as a political football to keep himself in the limelight. Those who have suspicions in that direction will watch closely his promised trip to soviet Russia. They will eagerly scan any statement of position upon his return. They will be watching to see whether Senator Borah will support his belief in recognition with the kind of a fight that will bring it about.

THE PATRIOTIC BREED.
(From the West Virginian Federationist.)

Notwithstanding all the lip service of the captains of industry and the propaganda of their "kept" press for 100 per cent Americanism, the Manufacturers' News, speaking for Big Bizz is braying now for a halt on Americanism work among aliens unless immigration bans are lifted.

In defense of the change of heart of Big Bizz its official organ says, "The difficulty is when a man becomes Americanized he will not do the work. Assimilation, as it is called, produces men for the top. It makes too many Generals. There must be some privates to make a well balanced army."

Very naively put, but what they mean is, that when the aliens are Americanized they will refuse to accept a coolie wage and working conditions. Hence they want the foreigners kept in ignorance and poverty.

COST OF GOVERNMENT CONTROL.
(From Labor, Organ of Railway Unions.)

According to a report just submitted to President Harding by Director-General of the Railroads, James C. Davis, the total cost to the public treasury of Government operation of the railroads was $1,250,000. In addition the Government paid the railroads under the guaranty clause of the Cummins-Esch bill between $525,000,000 and $600,000,000 for losses sustained during the first six months of private operation.

An analysis of these figures reveals some interesting facts.

For example, during the period of Government operation the average monthly deficit was less than $50,000,000, while during the six months of private operation under a Government guarantee the deficit per month was practically $100,000,000.

Therefore the deficit under private control was twice as large as under Government control.

In considering this matter of "losses" it must be remembered that freight and passenger rates under Government control were, on an average, at least 25 per cent lower than they are now under private control.

If the Government had charged the people as much for carrying freight and passengers during the 26 months of Government control as the managers have been permitted to charge since Sept. 1, 1920, there would have been no "deficit" under Government control.

On the contrary, there would have been a surplus of not less than a million dollars.

NEW METHOD HEALS RUPTURE

Kansas City Doctor's Discovery Makes Truss or Operation Unnecessary.

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of Dr. Andrews, the well-known hernia specialist of Kansas City. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard, gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the Post-Dispatch who writes him at his office, 638 Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. He wants one person in each neighborhod to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

FAREWELL SERVICES TODAY IN ST. JOHN'S EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Edifice at Fourteenth and Madison Streets to Be Abandoned for New $150,000 Structure.

Farewell services in the old building of St. John's Evangelical Church, which has been in use at Fourteenth and Madison streets since 1853, will be held at 10 a. m. today, the Rev. T. A. Haefele, pastor, conducting the services.

The principal speaker will be the Rev. L. Hazberle, known as the "grand old man" of the Evangelical Synod of North America. He formerly was pastor of St. John's, and served there during the Civil War days 60 years ago, from 1862 to 1879. He left to become director of the Eden Evangelical Theological Seminary, then located at Marthasville, Mo., now located on St. Charles road, near Wellston.

The removal of the church to its new edifice at Grand boulevard and Lee avenue, recently built at a cost of $150,000, marks the passing of one of the old landmarks in the early German colony in North St. Louis. Not until during the pastorate of the Rev. F. Klemme, 1901 to 1919, were English services introduced at St. John's, and German still is the language of some services.

The new building will be occupied next Sunday. St. John's, now in its seventy-second year, has a membership of 521.

Reduced Rates to Encampment.

The forty-second State encampment of the Missouri Department, Grand Army of the Republic, will be held in Sedalia, beginning May 8. Veterans and their wives may obtain railroad tickets at a round-trip rate of one fare and one-ninth, these tickets being good from May 3 to May 12.

MARCH CONTRACTS IN HOME BUILDING A NEW U. S. RECORD

Contracts for That Month in Central West Increased 17 Pct. Over February, but Decreased 9 Pct. From That in March, 1922.

PLANS CONTEMPLATE $86,709,000 OUTLAY

Forty-four Pct. of This Sum Involved in Projected Residential Construction; Data on Other Sections Given.

Residential construction contracts awarded in March were greater than in any previous month on record, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation. Total residential contracts last month in the 36 eastern States of the country (including about seven-eighths of the country's total construction volume) amounted to $175,705,000. This figure brought residential construction started during the first quarter of the year up to $412,285,000. This class of construction has proceeded thus far at a rate 44 per cent ahead of the rate of the early months of 1922.

Construction contracts let in March for all classes of construction in these 36 states amounted to $371,447,000. The increase over February was 32 per cent. In 27 of these states the increase over March, 1922, was 14 per cent.

Residential construction in March represented 47 per cent of the total construction started during the month. ROTH GROVE ADDITION MORE THAN HALF SOLD

E. Davis Realty Co. States; Lots Expected to Be Out of Market in 30 Days.

According to the E. Davis Realty and Mortgage Co., more than half of the 212 lots comprising the new Roth Grove Addition have been sold. Indications are that the addition will be entirely out of the market within the next 30 days.

Apartments, residences and flats are permissible in the addition under the restrictions, provided the construction measures up to prescribed standards.

The lots are being bought by both builders and speculators, the former being in the majority. Plans have already been completed for several handsome apartment structures and for a large number of residences for this tract. The addition is situated on the south side of Olive Street road, just west of Ferguson avenue, in University City.

It is opposite Pershing School terrace and is within throwing distance of the Pershing Public School terrace. The width of the Olive Street road is to be increased to 100 feet, which will add immeasurably to the importance of this thoroughfare, which will then have the status of a boulevard, and will be an attractive feature in connection with the Roth Grove addition.

The prices at which the lots are being sold include the cost of sewer and water mains and all surface improvements, which are to be of a high order.

LAST OF 40 COLONIAL HOUSES IS NEARING COMPLETION

Buyers Have Advantage of Ten-Year Payment Plan—Other Homes Under Way.

One of the largest and most unique home building projects in the city is being completed by the Majestic Homes Corporation in the 6700 block of Chamberlain avenue.

Last fall the company bought both sides of a block 1000 feet long, and began the erection of 40 colonial houses.

The first homes completed were quickly sold and occupied, others are being completed daily, and with favorable weather, all will be finished soon.

Every advantage gained in handling the work by an efficient organization is given the purchaser and the 10-year payment plan on which the houses may be purchased has met with great favor.

A few weeks ago the company bought over 2000 feet of desirable residential property in Kirkwood and being erected in a lot of 100 feet, and colonial houses. Only one house is being erected in a lot of 100 feet, and as all the improvements are in and many large trees are on each lot, the section will be a beautiful park within a few months.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

ALLIED ART EXPOSITION TO BE HELD AT CHASE APRIL 2

Money Realized to Be Used for Art Scholarships and Convention Next Year.

Plans are under way for the Allied Art Exposition to be held at Hotel Chase April 24. There will be six costume and five attendance prizes in connection with a ball which is to be a feature of the exposition. These prizes will be awarded by a committee comprising Dawson Dawson-Watson, chairman; Mrs. J. P. Thomy, George S. Johns, Thomas W. Garland and Charles M. Rice.

Pictures to be auctioned have been donated by W. K. Bixby, who gave a $10,000 canvas; Charles Nagel, Mrs. Lon O. Hocker and M. A. Newhouse. The Advertising Club has appointed a committee to arrange for a display of advertising art, and there will be space for a display of printing art.

Invitations to the art ball have been sent out. Money realized from the exposition will be devoted to creating art scholarships at Washington University and to prepare for the convention of the American Federation of Art here next year.

BIG DOWNTOWN REALTY DEALS ARE REPORTED PENDING

Important Negotiations Being Conducted by Mercantile Trust Co.—Another Deal Involves $2,000,000.

By Berry Moore.

Many offers were submitted during the week as a basis for extensive speculative and investment operations in the downtown district and in the West End, as well as in the intermediate centers of the city, and details of the transactions are expected within a short time.

The most important of negotiations are being conducted by the Mercantile Trust Co., whose heads, it is understood, have induced another big concern to make St. Louis its headquarters. The Mississippi Valley Trust Co., through William R. Cady, reports a deal pending involving $2,000,000 or more, while Preston J. Bradshaw is working on plans for a big building project.

John Hill, contractor, has been disclosed as the purchaser of the site of the 11-story Majestic Hotel at the northeast corner of Eleventh and Pine streets, sold by Simon Van Raalte, through the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Co. The price paid was $275,000.

The site has 70 feet on Pine by 109 feet on Eleventh, and is held under a 99-year lease by the Burden Building Co., of which Hill is president, and which erected the building.

The sale was announced in the Post-Dispatch several weeks ago, but the name of the purchaser was withheld by the agents.

Charles M. Levy, owner of the Claridge Hotel and president of the Hub Furniture Co., was the purchaser of the West End Hotel at the southwest corner of Vandeventer avenue and West Belle place, the sale of which was reported recently by the Weisels-Gerhart company, but the identity of the purchaser of which was not made public. The reported consideration was $75,000. The hotel is to be remodeled.

Heavy Dealing in Real Estate.

From all surface indications the volume of real estate operations this spring will attain record proportions, with the demand for flats and apartments on both a speculative and an investment basis the dominant factor of the situation.

The week's largest transaction in the West End was the purchase by a client of the Kempland-Rodermeyer Real Estate Co. of the Sterling Apartment at 5311 Pershing avenue, for $500,000. The building returns annual rentals aggregating $100,000. The seller was F. L. Cornwell, an attorney, who was represented by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co.

PROFITS

Marshall Field accumulated a fortune of approximately $200,000,000.00—largely by buying property AHEAD OF THE INDUSTRIAL GROWTH of Chicago.

Fortunes have been made in St. Louis in the same way—some of them are in the making RIGHT NOW in University City.

Population doubled in less than two years; more than 120 apartment houses built in 1922—AND ALL ARE OCCUPIED—dozens more now under construction.

ROTH GROVE

—is next, and that is MORE THAN HALF SOLD ALREADY.

Fortunes will actually be made in ROTH GROVE by those who BUY NOW—ahead of the development.

Why not get YOUR share of the huge profits that are ABSOLUTELY SURE to be made here in the next few weeks? You must buy NOW, though, if you want to be AHEAD.

Drive out TODAY. Do not miss this great opportunity. A trip through Delmar Race Track and Delmar Garden, then one block north on Kingsland Avenue to Olive Street Road, then one block west to Roth Grove will convince you that there are fortunes awaiting YOU here.

Our liberal terms make it possible for you to buy a lot with a very small down payment or you may pay all cash. Fill in and mail coupon for details and plat.

EXPLAINING AMES PLACE

SOME REAL ESTATE EXPERTS HAVE QUESTIONED THE WISDOM OF OFFERING CHOICE HOMESITES ON KINGSBURY BL., PERSHING AND MELVILLE AVENUES IN AMES PLACE AT PRICES OF $45.00 to $60.00 PER FOOT WHEN EVERY FOOT OF IT IS WORTH $75.00 TO $90.00. FRANKLY, WE HAVE MORE OF THESE LOTS THAN WE CAN USE AND HAVE A LARGE AMOUNT OF MONEY TIED UP HERE WHEN WE NEED IT IN OUR BUSINESS. WE ARE THEREFORE SELLING THESE LOTS AT THE RIDICULOUSLY LOW PRICES WE HAVE PUT ON THEM, REALIZING THAT THE PRESENT PURCHASERS, IF THEY DECIDE NOT TO BUILD, WILL UNDOUBTEDLY MAKE A PROFIT OF $15.00 TO $30.00 PER FOOT WITHIN TWELVE MONTHS' TIME. COMPARE THESE PRICES WITH THE SURROUNDING PROPERTY AND SEE HOW CHEAP THEY ARE.

WE BELIEVE, AND DO NOT HESITATE TO SINCERELY ADVISE OUR CLIENTS, THAT AMES PLACE LOTS ARE THE BEST SPECULATIVE BUY ON THE MARKET AT THE PRESENT TIME.

Our belief in Ames Place is so firm and sincere that we are willing to back it up with cash. Here is our proposition:

Buy as many lots as you want, paying 1-3 cash, with balance payable in one and two years, and if any of your lots are unsold one year from date we will, on request, buy them back at the price you paid plus 6% interest on your money. We will give you a WRITTEN CONTRACT to that effect. YOU CAN'T LOSE.

FIFTEEN NEW HOUSES HAVE BEEN STARTED IN AMES PLACE DURING THE LAST 30 DAYS, AND EVERY NEW HOUSE BUILT ADDS TO THE VALUE OF THE REMAINING LOTS.

AMES PLACE LIES IMMEDIATELY NORTH OF WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY AND WEST OF PARK VIEW, IS BUILT UP AND SURROUNDED WITH HIGH-CLASS HOMES OF SOME OF ST. LOUIS' MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS. THE IMPROVEMENTS CONSIST OF WELL-PAVED STREETS, BRICK ALLEYS, ELECTRIC STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM; GAS AND WATER PIPES ALREADY BROUGHT INTO EACH LOT READY TO CONNECT. UNIVERSITY CAR DIRECT TO AMES PLACE, DELMAR CAR TWO BLOCKS NORTH, KIRKWOOD-FERGUSON CAR DIRECT; BEAUTIFUL PUBLIC SCHOOL AND HIGH SCHOOL WITHIN THREE BLOCKS.

Traffic Traffic Traffic Trucks

Remanufactured trucks in 4000-lb. and 6000-lb. capacities. They carry the same guarantee as a new truck and are sold at a big reduction. When you buy a Traffic you get the best that money can buy, and it don't take all that you take in to keep it running and to pay for it.

Get some of the $88,000,000 bond money. Now is the time to start—if you have enough money to make a small down payment, and haven't the work, we will finance you on the truck and get you a job. If you are ambitious, here is your chance.

Let us explain how we can put you in a paying business with a small capital.

Traffic Motor Truck Corporation
5200 N. Second

BRICK TRUCKS
4000 Pounds and 6000 Pounds Capacity

After trying several makes of trucks to haul brick we have found the TRAFFIC the most practical, owing to the great power, short wheel base and being able to go and get back quick. So says one of the large brick companies.

You have probably wondered why there are so many TRAFFICS hauling brick. The reason above is one, but the main reason is that the TRAFFIC does its work at a small cost of upkeep and the payments are so small that it does not take all you make to pay for a TRAFFIC.

We can place several trucks on this class of hauling. A small down payment is all you need. We will get you the work.

THE LURE OF FASHIONS 3000 YEARS OLD

—Drawn by Dan Smith

Discoveries in the tomb of King Tutankhamen, in Egypt, have captured the imagination of the world, and as a result milliners, costumers and jewelers are busy with designs revealing Egyptian motifs. And the modern girl will as readily adapt herself to the new modes, without a doubt.

BABY, SEEMINGLY DEAD, SAVED BY ADRENALIN

THE ISAACSON BABY AND HIS TWIN SISTER.

Injection of secretion directly into new-born infant's heart had result which has been called "a miracle of science"—How adrenalin acted to stimulate heart action and supply oxygen to the blood—Pulmotor aided baby in taking the first breath which marks the beginning of a child's independent existence ::

By ARTHUR BENINGTON.

WHAT newspapers call "a miracle of science" was performed by a Brooklyn physician a few weeks ago when a baby, one of twins, seemingly died within a minute of birth and was brought back to life by the injection of adrenalin directly into its heart.

This, however, was no miracle but a novel application of the well understood action of the drug adrenalin at a critical moment. The condition of the baby was a not uncommon one; but in nearly all of such cases, when the baby does not respond to ordinary treatment, death is accepted as an already accomplished fact and no further effort to bring back life is made. Dr. Mininberg of the Park Maternity Hospital, who brought the twins into the world, is, however, one to whom every difficulty is merely a challenge. In this emergency he was fortunate enough to hit at once upon the one possible remedy, and acted so promptly that he beat death to it.

Adrenalin is a commonly used drug. It is the extract of the adrenal or suprarenal glands, generally of sheep. These glands, so-called because situated just on the top of the kidneys, are among the most important of the ductless or endocrine glands, a few others being the thyroid, thymus and pineal. These are called "ductless" because they have no duct opening into the veins or other vessels of the body, such as have the salivary glands and kidneys, for example, but give up their secretion to the blood as it flows through them. Their secretion is very small in quantity but most potent in effect. The precise qualities of most of these secretions are as yet only beginning to be understood; adrenalin, that of the suprarenals, is the only one that has been thoroughly studied over a sufficient length of time to establish certainty as to its action.

If you have a serious nosebleed, it is adrenalin which the doctor will apply to the mucous membrane of your nose in order to stop the flow. If a minor surgical operation must be performed without drawing blood, the surgeon will first soak the tissues with adrenalin (probably mixed with cocaine to prevent pain). For adrenalin makes the muscle cells contract powerfully. Their contraction squeezes the tiny capillaries, driving out any blood that may be in them and preventing any more from entering. This contraction lasts for several minutes, which enables the surgeon to perform the operation in full view, without the part being obscured by blood.

It was this muscular contraction which Dr. Mininberg wanted to produce in the Isaacson baby: he wanted to start the muscles of the heart to contracting. For the heart is a pump, which expands and contracts, and each contraction drives the blood out, first through the pulmonic artery into the lungs, where it meets the fresh air and absorbs the oxygen which purifies it and gives it life, second through the aorta to all sensitive parts of the body.

But adrenalin has another, more subtle effect discovered recently by Dr. Charles E. de M. Sajous of Philadelphia. The most important substance in the blood corpuscles is called hemoglobin. It is their coloring matter, which changes from blue to red, according as the corpuscles are laden with carbon dioxide or with oxygen. In the lungs the corpuscles give up the former and absorb the latter, turning from blue to red in the process. Thus laden with oxygen, the hemoglobin is called oxyhemoglobin. Adrenalin makes this possible, supplying to the hemoglobin the substance which enables it to become converted into oxyhemoglobin in the lungs.

Now, this has a most important bearing upon a case such as that of the Isaacson baby, especially when one considers a moment what is actually taking place in the body of a new-born infant. We must remember that the baby, though alive for many months before birth, has never breathed; its little lungs are collapsed; its blood is supplied with oxygen through its mother's lungs; its circulation is a part of hers; the beating of its heart is subsidiary to the beating of hers: not one of its organs has yet acted for itself. Suddenly all this is changed. The baby heart is left to beat by itself, of its own power, and the baby lungs at the first inrush of air, produce a gasp, as they expand for the first time to oxygenate the blood that the heart is now pumping into them. This moment is the most critical shock in life, for all the mass of complex and exquisitely delicate automatic machinery which has hitherto been doing nothing but develop or evolve out of the several layers of cells of the primitive cell, is suddenly, almost instantaneously, set in motion, left all to itself, to move harmoniously for 70, 80 or more years.

No wonder if some babies die at birth! The wonder is that the vast majority survive!

One of the final instructions that professors of obstetrics give to their students at medical school is what to do when new-born babes do not take that first gasp which fills their lungs with air and stimulates their hearts to pumping. The late Dr. Penrose at the University of Pennsylvania, a teacher famed for his great common sense, used to tell his classes that under such circumstances they should hold the baby up by its legs and give it one sharp spank. Another usual way to shock the lungs into the first gasp is a dash of cold water.

Now, let us see what happened to this little Isaacson twin. In the first place, he and his sister were very delicate. They weighed only a few pounds each. Otherwise the girl was normal and breathed without assistance. But the boy, after a gasp or two, stopped breathing. His heart ceased to beat. Most people would have said he was dead.

Not so Dr. Mininberg. Seizing a hypodermic syringe and opening his tube of adrenalin, he took a few minims of the fluid in the needle, stabbed its point through the infant's chest wall, between two ribs, straight into the heart itself and squirted the fluid into the muscle.

What happened then?

The muscles of the heart are an intricate knot of fibers which inclose the four cavities which receive and eject the blood. By the contractions of these interlaced fibers the cavities are squeezed into contraction. A small artery, called the coronary, supplies blood direct to these heart muscles. When the adrenalin was squirted in among the muscular fibers, it penetrated the coronary artery; the muscular cells instantly contracted, the coronary artery was squeezed and forced to send the blood in it, together with the adrenalin, circulating throughout the muscles of the heart, thus carrying the drug into contact with all the fibers and making them all contract.

The compressed auricles drove the blood in them into the ventricles; the ventricles contracted even more forcibly because the muscles that enwrap them are more powerful: the high pressure on the blood in them closed the valves between them and the auricles and forced open the valves between the ventricles and the pulmonary artery and aorta, so that the blood instantly gushed into these great vessels. That from the right ventricle rushed up the pulmonary artery and flooded the lungs, while that from the left ventricle rushed through the aorta and so throughout the body. The minute quantity of adrenalin in the blood that flowed to the lungs was enough to give the hemoglobin in the red corpuscles the power to absorb oxygen, even to crave for it, and the oxygen already in the lungs turned it into oxyhemoglobin, ready to furnish all the body with the action it needed. The action was thus started. The physician

Permanent Wave Effect Now Quick, Cheap and Easy

New Liquid Discovery Makes Straight Hair Wavy, Soft and Wonderfully Curly

YOU have always longed for soft, fluffy, curly hair. And now—at last—you can have it! For science has perfected a wonderful new liquid, which when applied to the most stubborn hair, gives it a beautiful permanent wave effect, making it wonderfully curly, delightfully soft, gloriously wavy.

It is called Domino Curlette. Nothing just like it has ever been known before. No occasion to do away with your tried and tested method of kids or silk curlers. But Domino Curlette is something more, something different, something entirely unique. Use the same old kids or silk curlers but before doing so moisten your hair with just a few drops of Domino Curlette—and, behold! A miracle of beauty will have been performed. Not only you, but your friends will be astonished at the sudden, beautiful transformation in your hair.

A Marvelous Beauty Discovery

A so-called "permanent wave" costs about $25 and sometimes lasts four months, often less. But now you can have what we consider a far more beautiful wave—full of life and fluff—and you can have it now for only $1.00!

Just think what this means! No more costly fees to hairdressers. No more sitting for hours and hours undergoing the tortures of permanent wave methods. For in just a short time, in your own home, you can now acquire charming wavy hair that your friends will always envy. Domino Curlette is just what you have been waiting for. On all sides beauty experts proclaim it one of the greatest beauty discoveries in years.

Natural—Not Artificial—Waves

No matter how straight, dull or unmanageable your hair may have been, just one application of this wonderful discovery will make it fall in soft, glistening waves and natural silky curls. It will give even the most lifeless hair a new entrancing lustre. Only one application will keep your hair wavy and in curl usually for a week or more!

If you have experimented with new-fangled "permanent wave" methods, you undoubtedly know how injurious they are to the hair. Not only do they often kill the natural lustre and life of the hair, but they produce curls and waves too artificial looking to be beautiful.

But how different is Domino Curlette! This remarkable preparation contains the very elements needed to make your hair naturally wavy, and naturally curly. That is why it always adds a new charm, youthfulness and beauty to one's appearance.

Don't let your beauty be spoiled by straight, dull hair. No matter how you wear your hair, Domino Curlette will beautify it immeasurably. No more straight, wispy, strands—no more straggly ends. For with Domino Curlette your hair will always be neat, well-dressed, dainty and charming. Try it once—and you will be amazed and delighted with the results

Watch the Amazing Transformation!

No matter how straight or dull your hair may be you will be simply astonished at how Domino Curlette makes it soft, wavy and charming. No more torturous electric treatments. NEWEST ROMANCE OF SCIENCE:

Because some flowers "went to sleep" in a Chicago greenhouse 15 years ago, scientific inquiries began which resulted in announcement that a new and valuable anesthetic has been discovered—Use of ethylene gas, the "dope" that put the blossoms to sleep, in general surgery and in obstetrics is indicated—Tests on animals and men prove it superior in many respects to "laughing gas" and other agents of anesthesia ::

FIFTEEN years ago some carnations "went to sleep" in a Chicago greenhouse. Last month a member of the medical faculty in the University of Chicago announced the discovery of a new anesthetic which promises to make general surgical operations safer and to be of great benefit to women in childbirth. The connection between the sleeping flowers and the new anesthetic is direct. The one led to the other.

One of the most fascinating romances of science lay folded in the closed petals of those carnations that went to sleep. "Now it may be told." In its essentials it is a sort of poem. The poetic element begins with the beauty of the blossoms, fresh from the serenity of rural neighborhoods, where they were grown. Shipped into the vast and violent city, they were to do duty perhaps as tokens of love worn in buttonholes on "Mothers' Day." Or they were destined to the happy function of serving as gifts from lovers to sweethearts. Or it may have been that their province was to brighten the tedious hours of invalidism in home or hospital.

But early in 1908 the poetry, apparently, was taken out of the proposition by an unexpected difficulty which diverted the blossoms from their intended destiny. The word "apparently" is used with reservations. As it turns out now, the circumstance mentioned was, in fact, an incident introduced for the heightening of the poesy inhering in this scientific romance. If those carnations had kept wide awake they no doubt would have served their ends as Mothers' Day boutonnieres, as lovers' tokens, or as sickroom cheerers. In a day or so they would have shriveled and been cast aside. But because they simply couldn't keep awake they will be entitled to perpetual memory, if the claims and hopes of the two Chicago experimenters prove to be well founded, as servants to humanity in the relief of pain, in the saving of lives, in the perpetuation of the human race.

Now, if you don't perceive the poetry in a simple yet exceptional story like that, you are a hopeless proser. From here to the end this tale is going to be told you in plain prose, with a masterful effort to reduce the scientific terminology to a minimum that will permit all of us to understand just what that doctor in Chicago and his associate have been doing.

This account of the discovery of the new anesthetic has been translated, so to express it, from a profound article written for the Journal of the American Medical Association by A. B. Luckhardt, Ph. D., M. D., and J. B. Carter, B. S., M. S., both of the University of Chicago. Dr. Luckhardt is associate professor of physiology in that institution. With Mr. Carter he conducted the patient experiments, covering 15 years, resulting in the discovery that ethylene gas in its purified form possesses many advantages as an anesthetic over nitrous oxid, commonly known as "laughing gas."

Experts in anesthesia, who have witnessed some of the Luckhardt-Carter tests on both lower animals and humans, are said to hold that the possibilities of lung abscesses and the resultant pneumonia always attending the administration of "laughing gas" are minimized by the new formula, thus removing one of the most serious menaces in surgical operations.

It is said also that ethylene gas produces no cardiac complications, having absolutely no effect upon the heart action. The claim is made that in this respect it is vastly superior to both ether and chloroform, administration of which always endangers the heart to a greater or lesser degree.

Another element of superiority claimed for ethylene is that the patient can be brought out from under its influence immediately by administration of oxygen. Furthermore, it renders the subject more completely unconscious than does nitrous oxid.

Ethylene gas has been administered by Dr. Luckhardt and Mr. Carter before a number of eminent physicians and surgeons, all of whom, it is said, have given the new anesthetic their unqualified approval. Dr. D. B. Phemister, a noted member of the staff of the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago, has been quoted as enthusiastic in praise of the discovery, pronouncing it a complete success. He has had it tried on himself.

Already the new anesthetic has been used for surgical work in the Presbyterian Hospital, a number of operations having been performed with its use by Drs. Arthur D. Bevan and Dean de Witt Lewis, Dr. Isabella Herb administering the gas.

The discoverers, however, are not making extravagant claims. To their learned article they append this conclusion: "This must be considered as a preliminary report of experimental work which has not been carried far enough to warrant general clinical use. We reserve for further study and experimentation in the clinic and laboratory the many problems which the study of the gas has suggested."

Carnation growers in the Chicago suburbs sustained severe losses early in 1908 because the flowers, when placed in the greenhouses for distribution to customers, showed a tendency to go to sleep, their petals closing up in a few hours. Also, the buds already showing petals failed to open according to promise. The growers could not understand this drowsiness on the part of the carnations. Inquiry was begun, members of the Hull Botanical Laboratory staff lending their efforts to the task. They suspected a certain culprit—ordinary illuminating gas. Their experiments proved the guilt of this culprit, but the guiltiness resided in an ingredient which forms only about 4 per cent of the whole. This ingredient is ethylene, which is described as a colorless, gaseous hydrocarbon.

Investigations showed that one part of ethylene in 2,000,000 parts of air caused the flowers already open to close in 12 hours, and one part of ethylene in 1,000,000 parts of air prevented the opening of buds already showing petals.

The incident of the sleeping carnations was made public. University of Chicago savants became interested. If ethylene had such marked toxic effects on flowers, what about its toxicity for animals? That is to ask, since it put flowers to sleep would it not also put animals to sleep? The possibility of a valuable new anesthetic presented itself. But quite naturally arose the additional question, would animals ever wake up after the ethylene had put them to sleep? And, if so, would they show ill effects? In other words, would ethylene be a safe and sane agency for rendering animals, including man, temporarily unconscious? Finally, could it be of general benefit in surgery?

This was the problem which Dr. Luckhardt and Mr. Carter set themselves to solve. The laboratories of the university are equipped with every necessary appliance. Only the intelligent, patient, persistent use of the equipment was required for the experimentation. Luckhardt and Carter supplied that requirement. They first prepared their ethylene by a chemical process not necessary to explain here. "The purity of the ethy-

Then they were ready for the initial tests. It was a great day in the laboratory when the first frog was subjected to ethylene gas and put beyond the possibility of jumping. The animals used for the experiments were, successively, frogs, white mice, white rats, guinea pigs, rabbits, kittens, dogs—and men. Man, of course, was the ultimate objective. These careful investigators, like the law of evolution, worked up slowly and gradually, yet surely, to the human.

It was a still greater day when the first man, J. B. Carter himself, went "under the influence" and—but that would be telling, whereas we should let the narrative run along and the story unfold naturally. We shall not even interrupt the smooth flow to tell you just why, in the course of these studies, "various amounts of ethylene gas were allowed to bubble through diluted dog's blood." Briefly, that was done to learn the chemical effect of the gas upon the blood, and it was a part of the "safety-first" program. Nitrogen, hydrogen and nitrous oxid concentrations were used also in the experiments, to determine effects in comparison with ethylene.

The frogs were placed in wide-mouthed bottles, the gases in the desired percentage concentrations were introduced under water, and the bottle tightly corked. In an 85 per cent mixture of the various gases, frogs were anesthetized after 20 minutes by ethylene. At the end of the same period, in similar concentrations of hydrogen, nitrogen and nitrous oxid, the frogs were virtually normal. When 100 per cent of the various gases were used, ethylene anesthetized the frogs in four minutes, nitrous oxid in 15 minutes, hydrogen and nitrogen not at all. "Ethylene, compared with nitrous oxid, anesthetizes frogs in approximately one-fourth the time," state the experimenters. "Recovery from the ethylene is complete in two minutes."

The result of the tests on white mice is stated thus: "Ethylene, compared with nitrous oxid, anesthetizes white mice not only in lower concentration, but in one-half the time."

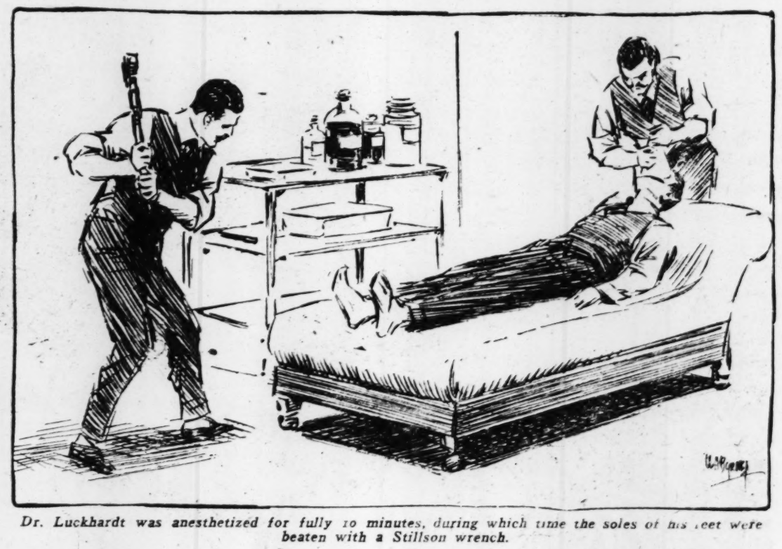
The mice and other sub-human animals, excepting frogs and dogs, were placed in bell jars, into which the various gases used in the tests were introduced. Ethylene anesthetized white rats in seven to 12 minutes, nitrous oxid requiring 30 to 35 minutes. Rabbits, guinea pigs and kittens went sound to sleep in 10 to 20 minutes, these being the extremes recorded in the various tests. Periods of 20 to 40 minutes were required in the case of nitrous oxid anesthesia. In all animals anesthetized by ethylene, recovery took place promptly in from one to three minutes.

Small, young dogs were used. The dog's nose, after being shaved closely, was inserted into a metal flask, or mask. The apparatus included a motor which pumped the gas into the dog's lungs at the will of the operator. "Complete anesthesia was obtained in from two to five minutes, the animal passing through an excitement stage—showing increased knee-jerk, dilated pupils, slightly increased respiratory rate, but very little struggling—into a surgical stage with abolition of the knee, skin and sight reflexes, retention of the corneal reflex, complete muscular relaxation and pinpoint pupil."

When the ethylene-oxygen mixture was replaced with air in the dog's lungs, the subject wagged his tail in two minutes, walked in three minutes, and showed no signs of evil after effects, except a slight salivation. One dog was anesthetized for 45 minutes, 15 times during a period of three weeks, the results each time being absolutely consistent with the others of the series. "The animal always completely recovered in three minutes, romped and played in five minutes, and, up to date, has shown absolutely no signs of evil after-effects." As a matter of fact, this dog is reported as having gained considerably in weight during those three weeks. He was an emaciated tramp when he got the job and he was fed well during his term of service. Both the food and the gas seemed to agree with him.

In the case of some of the dogs certain and sundry wounds were made in their bodies, to ascertain if the anesthesia was a perfect pain killer. The results showed that it was. These animals, after recovery from the influence of the gas, were put to death painlessly. They were martyrs to science. The good that they did lives after them.

Now, at last, we arrive at the assumed apex—man. If a frog and a mouse, a rat and a cat, a guinea pig and a dog can take ethylene gas without harm, surely a man should be able to follow suit. Nevertheless, no chances are to be taken along with gas-taking. Our friends, the learned investigators, have no thought of "trying it on the dog," humanly speaking, by hiring some hard-up undergraduate of the Chicago U. to breathe in a few quarts of ethylene gas and go off into a sudden, deep, mysterious sleep. Two gentlemen by name Luckhardt and Carter are indicated first in the diagnosis.



Dr. Luckhardt was anesthetized for fully 10 minutes, during which time the soles of his feet were beaten with a Stillson wrench.

"On the basis of our experiences with ethylene reported above," runs the Luckhardt-Carter narrative, "it seemed desirable to investigate its analgesic and anesthetizing properties on the human subject. For such trials a larger supply of ethylene was necessary. After what seemed a fruitless search we were able to obtain the gas tanked by a commercial chemical company. The gas so obtained proved to be as pure as quoted and we proceeded to test out its properties in combination with oxygen on ourselves, using a Clark gas apparatus and appliances for its administration. We append briefly our experiences to date with it:

"Experiment 1.—J. B. Carter, reclining, Jan. 1, 1923, held the mask to the face with one hand and held up the other arm. He was given gas plentifully mixed with oxygen until the extended arm wavered. Administration was discontinued. Just enough was given to give a sense of well-being and exhilaration. At no time was there change in the color of the face.

"Experiment 2.—A. B. Luckhardt reclined and held the mask and extended the arm as did Mr. Carter. Mr. Carter gave the gas mixture. The arm soon wavered and dropped (in less than one minute). There were no asphyxial sensations. There was a sense of contentment and well-being. There was no apprehension of possible danger. Everything seemed well. Pains from an active frontal sinus infection left. The subject was satisfied to lie there under the influence of the gas for all time. He did not think that consciousness was completely lost at any time. He came out rather rapidly from a half-sleep, with slight inco-ordination of gait, lasting a few minutes."

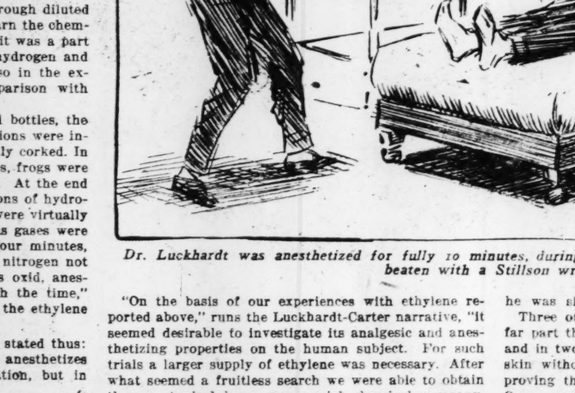
Thus it is seen that both Mr. Carter and Dr. Luckhardt came safely through the experiment. Several subjects then volunteered. A. J. Carlson was the first to undergo the test after the experimenters had tried it on themselves. "After a minute or less the extended arm fell awkwardly and laterally against the wall with a thud. The subject was quiet throughout. Administration of the pure gas, with occasional oxygen inhalations, continued for three or four minutes. The subject thinks he was conscious but felt extremely comfortable. He came to after a minute or so. He states he was slightly nauseated for several hours after."

Three other volunteers were anesthetized similarly, far part the stage of analgesia (insensibility to pain), and in two cases a safety pin was pushed through the skin without provoking reflex movement of the arm, proving they didn't feel any pain from the pricking. One man laughed a great deal before complete anesthetization. On recovery, he talked excitedly and incoherently of his experience. Only after several minutes did his speech assume a logical tendency. He had no recollection whatever of having had the blunt safety pin thrust through the skin of his forearm.

Carter and Luckhardt served alternately as subjects for two further tests, each anesthetizing the other far past the stage of analgesia. "Neither felt nauseated except for possibly slight abdominal discomfort for several minutes after recovery, this always being prompt and complete except for slight weakness and unsteadiness of gait immediately on getting up from the couch." Dr. Luckhardt desired to turn over on his side and go to sleep. Mr. Carter went through a period of excitement in coming out of the anesthesia, so that restraint by holding down the extremities was found necessary.

"The learned doctor and his able associate seemed to like it. They wanted more of the same. On Jan. 28 both went into complete surgical anesthesia from ethylene gas, which means that surgeons could have cut into them anywhere without their feeling any pain or being conscious of the operation. Dr. Luckhardt was anesthetized for fully 10 minutes, during which time he was pinched in the ear and the upper right arm, and the soles of his feet were beaten with a Stillson wrench. "Of none of these procedures had he any recollection. In the course of the following week a large 'black-and-blue' area developed on the upper arm at the place of greatest injury." The black-and-blue spot was sufficient evidence that the doctor had been pinched hard enough to make any man howl if conscious.

"In addition to such observations on ourselves," continues the record, "we anesthetized lightly and for a short period of time (about five minutes) several other volunteers—Carl Johnson, T. Boyd and G. Turner. Mr. Johnson arose from the couch a little pale and slightly nauseated. Mr. Boyd was slightly nauseated, but his discomfort left him within the next hour while he was working about in his laboratory. Turner passed through a period of excitement during recovery from the anesthetic."

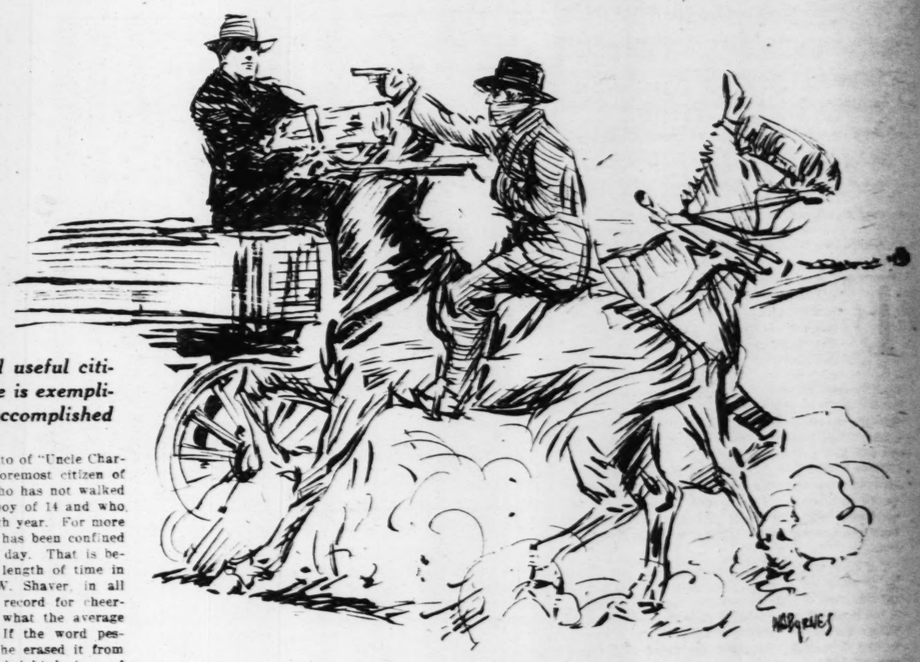


The device shown in this diagram was used by Luckhardt and Carter in testing the use of ethylene gas on dogs. The pump E-F, driven by electricity, circulated the ethylene (in A) and oxygen introduced at X through the connecting tubing and to C, a mask for the dog's snout, the carbon dioxid being removed on passage of the circulating gas mixture through the jar D, containing soda lime.

Possible advantages of ethylene over nitrous oxid, if used for human anesthesia, are summed up thus by Lockhardt and Carter: Anesthesia may be maintained in the absence of all signs of asphyxia, in the absence of effects on blood pressure, in the absence of dyspnea (difficulty of breathing), and with complete muscular relaxation. It may be used in obstetrics (childbirth cases), a state of complete analgesia being possible at a concentration of 80 per cent ethylene. There is rapid recovery after long-continued administration, without evidence of after-effects. "These advantages would make possible its use in many persons and conditions in which nitrous oxid is specifically contraindicated, such as in children, in diabetic patients, in old age, in advanced arterio-sclerosis, in high cerebral pressure, in operations on the brain, in major operations and in obstetrics."

70 Years In An Invalid's Chair

Though he hasn't walked a step since he was 14, Charles W. Shaver of Evening Shade, Ark., now 85, has had a life of adventure and romance — Kept books, ran a store, served as Postmaster and as County Treasurer, married, built a home, reared a family of four children—A cheerful and useful citizen, his philosophy of life is exemplified by what he has accomplished



"Yes, I've got more money, but you'll not get it," was the reply.

"ALWAYS play fair" is the motto of "Uncle Charlie" Shaver, sage and foremost citizen of Evening Shade, Ark., who has not walked a step since he was a boy of 14 and who now is in his eighty-sixth year. For more than 70 years this man has been confined to a wheel chair every day. That is believed to be the world's record for length of time in an invalid's chair. But Charles W. Shaver, in all probability, holds also the world's record for cheerfulness and usefulness, considering what the average person would term his handicap. If the word pessimism ever was in his vocabulary he erased it from the page early in his life. In the bright lexicon of his manhood there has been no such word as fail.

The philosophy of life held by Mr. Shaver is exemplified in the things he has done and in the spirit in which he has done them. No man in Sharp County, of which the little town of Evening Shade is the county seat, has made more of a success of life than has Uncle Charlie. He has succeeded through exercise of the will to succeed, which means that he has planned wisely and worked faithfully. He has been a successful business man, a public official who believed with Grover Cleveland that "a public office is a public trust," and a useful worker in the church. Into his life romance has come, and he has reared a family, three sons and a daughter, all of whom have lived useful lives. Uncle Charlie now is a great-grandfather.

The fifth child in a family of 12, Charles was born Oct. 16, 1837, on his father's farm near Evening Shade. As a boy he was healthy and full of the joy of life. He loved fun, and he had plenty of it up to the time in his fifteenth year when he was stricken with an illness that laid him on his back utterly helpless for a year or more. Then, gradually, he regained the use of his hands, so that he could write and could feed himself; but ever since the beginning of his illness, now more than 70 years ago, he has been unable to walk and has required always a personal attendant. His father held slaves, and until the liberation of the negroes in 1863 Charles had a strong young black man to help him get around. Since then he has been under the necessity of hiring an attendant.

In the early years of his invalidism, Charles quite naturally found time hanging heavily upon his hands. The other boys could get out and work in the fields, swim or fish in the stream that ran through the farm, court the blooming Arkansas belles. Charles had to sit at home in a chair with rollers placed under the four posts. He had a little sister of whom he was quite fond. His mother had much sewing to do for the large family of children. Charles learned to sew, and he made his sister's clothing. But there was nothing effeminate about him. There was a notion prevalent, as in all such instances, that he was not fitted to do a man's work in the world. Charles Shaver soon dissipated that erroneous notion.

His father operated a general store at Evening Shade. The elder Shaver's eyes failed him, so that he could not attend to the bookkeeping. Charles, whose "three r's" education had been supplemented by the reading of such books as he could get, was drafted into service at the store as bookkeeper. For many years (in fact, until the mercantile business was suspended) he did that work. But in the middle of the Civil War it was found necessary to close the store. War raged all around. Most of the men were absent, fighting for the Confederacy. Those left at home had little or no money with which to buy goods. For that matter, it was virtually impossible to keep up a stock of goods. The source of supply was shut off.

Now came into the life of the crippled young man his one opportunity for adventure. Evening Shade ran short of salt. Like many other communities in the South during war time, the town discovered that common table salt was the one absolute necessity which had failed. Salt must be had, at all hazards. Some women and a few old men of the town organized a salt-seeking expedition. The plan was to load up some cotton bales and drive to New Madrid, Mo., 200 miles distant, sell the cotton, buy salt and drive the ox teams back home with the precious cargo. Charles Shaver determined to make the trip. He was lifted into one of the wagons, and the journey to New Madrid was made without unusual incident.

New Madrid was within the Federal lines, but that fact merely added sauce to the adventure. The caravan of cotton got through the lines somehow, the bales of staple were turned into good hard money—gold—and an abundant supply of salt was purchased out of a part of the proceeds. Then the caravan turned back for the homeward journey. The roads were infested with robbers. The route ran through a region full of bushwhackers. Some of those fellows didn't care which side of the national controversy a traveler might be on; what they wanted was hard money.

Somewhere between New Madrid and Evening Shade one night the ox teams were halted by robbers. "Money or your lives" was the demand, made at gun's points. "Shell out!" cried the robbers. Some of those in the party shelled out promptly, but Charles Shaver was not of that group. He had a small piece of paper money in his vest pocket, which one of the highwaymen took.

"You've got more," said the bandit; "shell out, now!"

"Yes, I've got more money, but you'll not get it," was the reply.

Shaver was threatened with death. He still refused. One of the men then hit him over the head with a revolver.

"Now, I guess you'll give it up," he said.

"No," replied Shaver; "you might as well kill me as to take my money from me, and I so far from home and in my condition."

The robber turned away, but came back presently and apologized for having struck Shaver, saying that he didn't know at the time that the young man was physically helpless.

But Charles was in no mood to accept apologies. He was a young man of spirit.

"If you will get off your horse," he said, "and give me one of your pistols, we can settle this matter without any more words."

The highwayman grinned, but decided not to accept the challenge to an impromptu duel. Shaver was molested no further. He had his money, in $5 gold coins, sewed up in his clothing, some of it in the bands of his trousers, and he got home with it intact.

So ended the one heroic adventure of Charles W. Shaver away from home. At home his adventures have been perhaps less heroic in the sensational sense, yet truly heroic nevertheless. For instance, there was the matter of his love affair and marriage.

After the war the merchandising business was reestablished. It took time and a lot of pluck. Eventually the liabilities of the old store were paid off and prosperity began to come the way of the Shavers, father and son. Charles still kept the books, and at times he served as salesman in a small way. Also, he found some adventures of a sort when he was lifted to a saddle and rode horseback through the rural regions of the county, collecting for the firm. This experience gave him a feeling of independence. Moreover, it made him acquainted with a great many citizens of the county, whose votes in years to come he was to get.

A friend of the family thus briefly tells how romance came into the life of Charles Shaver:

"The business was carried on without any very striking event for some years, when Charlie found a woman that he wanted to marry. When this became known a perfect storm of protest was raised by his family and by the family of the woman he intended to marry. Both families thought it absurd. They could not make a living, was the idea, and all that sort of thing. But, as is usual in such cases, they married, and their subsequent life showed that they got along as well as others. They were married in May, 1871, and went to housekeeping two months later.

The "GOLDEN KITTEN" of MEXICO

Idol of the country beyond the Rio Grande is Maria Conesa, musical comedy actress—Won her way into hearts of the people with topical political songs—Has 200 dresses and 300 hats—Has returned to her native Spain and hopes to conquer London and New York :: ::

Maria Conesa as "Sancho Panza" in a musical comedy version of "Don Quixote."

FOR 14 years "the golden kitten" has been the idol of the Mexican stage, but only now faint echoing whispers of her greatness and fame are beginning to cross the Rio Grande. The lights of Broadway have never blazoned the name of Maria Conesa. It would mean nothing to American theater goers if it suddenly flashed forth on the electric signs, and yet from Sonora to Chiapas, in the sister republic, it is a name the very mention of which brings forth salvos of applause. This is especially true just now, since Mexico has lost its "golden kitten."

Maria Conesa, temporarily at least, has withdrawn her effulgence from the Mexican stage in quest of new worlds to conquer. She is now in Spain, the land of her birth. She has made one successful invasion of Paris and has her saucy little eye on London and New York.

The departure of the "golden kitten" for Spain was the occasion for a great demonstration by the friends and admirers of this idol of the musical comedy stage. Seven hundred bouquets of flowers were sent to her private car at the railway station in the City of Mexico and thousands thronged the depot and regretfully shouted "adios" as she waved her farewell from the rear platform of the train. "La Gatita de Oro" was gone, but not forgotten, for there were memories of the thousands of times when her winning stage smile, her sweet voice and her graceful dancing had enlivened an evening at the theater for those she left behind.

Maria Conesa was born in Valencia, Spain. She joined a juvenile theatrical company at the age of 15 and after several barnstorming tours in Spain she went to Cuba. She is remembered in Havana as an attractive dancer and a fair musical comedy actress, but her stay there was not remarkably successful. Yet, in the light of her subsequent career in Mexico, her greatness and fame have been so recognized in Cuba that when she passed through Havana recently on her way to Spain she was received with no less acclaim than was Caruso on his final visit there.

When Maria Conesa, accompanied by her widowed mother, arrived in Mexico in 1909 there was no reason t predict that within a few short years her fame would sweep the country. She had not established her right to stardom and in her early appearances in Mexico her name did not have "top-line" position on the program.

But that was a year of political unrest in Mexico. The Diaz administration had brought great prosperity to the country through letting down the bars to foreign capital, but there were signs of the storm which later was to effect a political and economic upheaval. Opponents of Diaz were clamoring for his resignation. There were plots and counterplots and the political kettle was threatening to boil over.

Maria Conesa tried the topical song as a short cut to fame, and it was effective beyond all her dreams. She introduced to the Mexican stage the political skit and the song designed, under camouflage, to attack certain features of the Government and the local administration.

Critics agree that at this time Maria had no great claim to stage presence and no remarkable talent as a singer. But two qualities she had, and these put her songs over and made her the idol of the people. The first was perfect enunciation and the second was magnetism—that rare quality of which Spaniards and Mexicans speak as "simpatico."

In the course of a few months she rose high in the public favor. To the singing of topical songs she added Spanish and Mexican dances. Success seemed to agree with Maria. Through constant study she improved her voice and her figure, originally rather scrawny, began to take on those beautifully rounded curves which are the accepted lines of beauty in the Latin-American countries.

Petite cuteness is one of "the golden kitten's" characteristics. She is about 5 feet tall, with light brown hair, brown eyes, wonderfully white, even teeth and a general air of "chic."

The suddenness of Maria's popularity, based on her topical songs, was shown shortly after her arrival in Mexico when the municipal authorities of Mexico City caused her to be arrested for making fun of the Government. She was fined 500 pesos, normally about $250. That night when she appeared on the stage the audience showered her with gold, silver and bronze coins, which whistled through the air from all parts of the theater, to fall upon the stage at her feet. The janitors swept up a sum very near to 2000 pesos. In discussing this incident just before departing for Spain "the golden kitten" said it marked the turning point of her career. It showed her that she was firmly established as an idol of the great mass of the people of Mexico. They had taken her, a Spaniard, into their hearts and regarded her as the stage's representative of Mexican ideals and aspirations. From that time on all was plain sailing. There were additional proofs of her popularity in the ever-increasing number of letters from admirers who offered her everything, from flowers to jewels and from candy to marriage.

Maria was now developing into a first-class musical comedy and revue actress. She sang Mexican songs. She has been given credit for having given the Mexican stage a place in the sun, for the works of Mexican composers and librettists were practically unknown, and certainly not appreciated, until she produced them and traveled through the country playing them at provincial theaters.

The affectionate nickname, "the golden kitten," was bestowed upon her because of the elaborateness and elegance of her costumes, for which she is justly famous. She often appears on the stage dressed entirely in gold. Her wardrobe is said to include more than 200 costumes, 600 pairs of shoes and 300 hats.

In 1910 Maria married Manuel Sanz, son of one of Mexico's wealthiest men. They have a son who is being educated in the United States.

Today she should be worth at least a million pesos, but the fact is that she is in possession of a sum vastly insignificant by comparison. She is the fount to which all professional appeals are made, and it is said of her that she has never refused to extend a practical helping hand to one who has appealed to her. She is ready, at all times, to meet medical bills, to pay funeral expenses, and in any and every way to assist her less fortunate fellow artists.

"La Conesa" is known in Mexico, in Spain and in Paris for the wonder of her stage costumes—they are worth 100,000 pesos—for the elegance of her stage appearance and for the unfailing excellence of her taste. A celebrated American writer lately in Mexico said of her that she was the most elegant stage personality in Latin America. In Paris, that city of the "chic" and the "simpatismo" which go so far to make the women of that city world famous, Maria was, as they say in Spanish, "en casa"—she was at home and in her own environment. Here she sang and danced the Spanish dances she had learned in her own sunny Valencia and the success she achieved was unprecedented in the annals of Latin-American artists. The second night she appeared in the Theater Des Arts standing room was not to be found and during her stay there she filled the house night after night.

The Mexicans say Maria is a Spaniard by birth, but a Mexican at heart, and therefore they love her. It is felt that of all the actresses who have appeared in Mexico she most faithfully interprets Mexican psychology and idiosyncrasies.

She says she will visit France again and England before she returns. She speaks French and Italian fluently and can make herself understood in English.

Maria is now a woman of parts. Her figure is the pride of Mexico and her smile retains all of its old charm and attraction and much of its provocativeness. Her appearance on the stage is the signal for a storm of applause and she has, during the last 12 years, never been known to appear without the gift of at least one bouquet of flowers.

Her home in Mexico is filled with testimonials of the esteem in which she has so long been held and a day might well be spent in examining some of the hundreds of tokens of appreciation which have from time to time been presented to her. She is very fond of all domestic animals—especially police dogs, of which she has eight. When she motors one of these invariably accompanies her.

Her ambition in life is to conquer London and New York and other of the principal cities in Saxon countries. Her husband, who is now in Mexico City expects to leave for Europe within the next few weeks to travel with her. The Anglo-Saxon is cold and undemonstrative, but Mexicans think they will be moved from their traditional phlegmatism when they see Maria—"La Gatita de Oro"—of whom a well-known critic has said: "Whenever a female child is born then is born an actress, but Maria is more than an actress—she is a gentle woman and a sincere lover of all mankind." And all mankind in Mexico loves her, so the feeling is reciprocal.

The Insignificant Clue Which Led To The Captu

They were just ordinary business letters, but a shrewd detective dug out of them the help he needed in starting a search for wrong-doer, following the latter's spectacular disappearance—An account of ingenuity, enterprise and patience which were rewarded :: :: :: ::

By WILLIAM NELSON TAFT

IT WAS one night in early fall that Bill Quinn and I were browsing around the library in the house that he had called "home" ever since a counterfeiter's bullet had incapacitated him from further active work in the secret service. Prior to that he had lived, as he put it, "wherever he happened to hang his hat." But now there was a comfortable little house on Long Island, with a den where Quinn—much against the wishes of his wife—kept the more unusual and often grewsome relics of famous criminal cases.

While wandering around the room, picking up the threads of the stories connected with the different mementoes—stories which were more thrilling than fiction, for they were all accounts of events that had actually happened—I frequently noted a framed letter which hung on the far wall, close by the photograph of the woman who had been known as Mrs. Armitage. There was nothing about the letter that was unusual, and I had searched it time and again for some clue as to the reason that it occupied a place of honor among Quinn's collection.

"Was it a matter of secret ink?" I asked the former Government agent. "Or had the firm to which this seemingly innocuous communication is addressed been connected with a smuggling conspiracy or something of the sort?"

"Wrong on both counts," smiled Quinn, tapping the tobacco down into the bowl of his pipe with a calloused thumb. "There isn't a trace of secret ink or concealed writing on the whole thing, and the firm to which the letter was sent was absolutely free from suspicion. Bring it over here under the light and see if you can find anything in it."

But even under the strong glare of the table lamp I could discover nothing that seemed out of the ordinary. At Quinn's suggestion I removed the back of the frame, and even held the sheet of paper up to the light searching for a watermark. But the one I found was one that may be seen on thousands of business letters every day—the trademark of a well-known paper manufacturing company.

With a wry smile and a shrug of the shoulders I replaced the letter in the frame and hung it back in its place upon the wall. Then, turning, I demanded: "Come on, what's the story? There's one there, or else that letter wouldn't be in your crime museum. What's it all about, anyway?"

Quinn failed to reply until he had struck a match and made certain that his pipe was drawing freely. When this important ceremony had been attended to, he slipped back more comfortably into his big armchair and answered: "Yes, there is a story—a big one, too. What's more, I don't blame you in the least for failing to pick up the clue that lies hidden in that letter, for it's concealed in such an obvious place that not a person in a thousand would spot it—and even they couldn't sense its presence unless, like C. D. West, they had access to all the correspondence of which that letter formed only a single item.

"You remember West, don't you?" Quinn went on. "He's the chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Manufacturers' Association whose activities figured so strongly in that case you wrote up under the title, 'The Trail of the White Mice.'"

* * * * * * * *

Into West's office one day there came one of the big men connected with the association, a credit manager by the name of Samuel Charters, who handled the business for the Berkley Co., manufacturers of silks, laces and other valuable textiles. Charters brought with him a most remarkable story, which, boiled down to its essentials, was that the apparently prosperous firm of Meyer Rosenbaum & Co. had vanished from the face of the earth!

"There they were one day," Charters said, "doing a business of a million dollars a year—I've seen it with my own eyes—and the next day," he snapped his fingers, "they simply ceased to exist."

West leaned forward across his desk with intense interest, his fingers twisting the pencil which he always kept in readiness for note-taking.

"Let me have the details," he said, "and don't omit anything—no matter how unimportant it may appear."

"The trouble doesn't appear to be that there are too many details," Charters responded, "but that there are too infernally few. However, here they are: Meyer Rosenbaum & Co. seem to have started in business about nine months ago; at least, that's the earliest that any members of our association had any dealings with them. Their credentials and references were all quite satisfactory, but, of course, we protected ourselves adequately on the first orders. These were paid for within 10 days, in order to secure the benefit of the usual discounts. Then they ordered again and again, still meeting all their obligations with exemplary promptness.

"On the third of last month we received a big order, with a request for 60 days' credit. That wasn't unusual, when the size of the bill was considered, for it came pretty close to the $100,000 mark. I didn't want to take any chances, so I went down to the Rosenbaum warehouse one day and looked around on the quiet, just as an extra precaution. Everywhere there was evidence of a big and prosperous business. The warehouse was busy with incoming and outgoing orders. Everybody seemed to be hustling. Everything appeared to be shipshape. So I O K'd the order.

"Yesterday morning the business of Meyer Rosenbaum disappeared into thin air, as did Meyer himself and everybody connected with the outfit. The owner of the building found it absolutely empty—he has a bill for two months' rent that's due, incidentally. Every stick of furniture and equipment was gone, and the place had been thoroughly swept and cleaned. There wasn't as much as a scrap of wrapping paper left, to say nothing of any letters or books. After spending the day in a vain endeavor to round up something I determined that the only thing to do was to come up here and turn you loose on the case."

"Pity you wasted 24 hours," West growled. "They've got a week-end start as it is, and * * * But, never mind. Nobody can clear out of a place as big as that warehouse and not leave some traces behind them. Let me have all your correspondence with Rosenbaum and the names of any other firms that you know they did business with. I'll get the letters from them, too."

But the result of West's collection was an extremely small batch of correspondence. Rosenbaum & Co. had evidently been careful to confine the major portion of their communications to the phone, with Rosenbaum himself keeping well in the background.

West, of course, had no hope of unearthing any clue to the whereabouts of the missing wholesaler, except in what he could read between the lines of his letters to creditors. Obviously, a man as clever as Rosenbaum would let no indication of his plans creep into the actual working of his correspondence. But this did not worry West, who had years of experience in making typewriting reveal things to him that the writers never intended it should—and never suspected that it could.

"A typewritten sheet," the commercial detective explained to Charters, "has just as much individuality as a finger-print. In one respect it has more. The print of a man's thumb reveals his identity only. The print of the typewriter not only reveals the identity of the machine but of the person who operated it."

"You mean to say," the credit manager interrupted, "that you can tell the difference in the work done by two machines of precisely the same make and size?"

West smiled.

"That's child's play," he answered. "You can take two brand-new machines of precisely the same model, fresh from the factory, and can instantly tell them apart by their typewriting. There will always be certain little peculiarities in the spacing, in the relative position of one type bar to another, minute differences in the shape of capital letters, and the like. It may take a magnifying glass to bring them out, but they're there.

"In addition, the identity of the typist shows up just as strongly. It may be a tendency to pound one letter harder than another. It may be the variations in rapidity with which various combinations of letters are run off, or dozens of other little peculiarities which are bound to show up under close study. These letters, for example," and he tapped the pile in front of him, "tell me a good deal. But there are not enough of them to tell me all I want to know. I'm going to hunt up the other creditors that Rosenbaum & Co. must have had throughout the country and get their correspondence in addition to what we have here. Then, I think, I will be able to report some progress. In fact, it's a certainty that I will, unless our friend Mr. Rosenbaum is a whole lot cleverer than I give him credit for, being clever enough to realize that even a letter written and signed by a stenographer may contain some damning bits of individual evidence."

By the end of the week West had on his desk more than 300 letters written upon the letterhead of Meyer Rosenbaum & Co.—letters ranging all the way from complaints about minor points of service to orders totaling $50,000 and more. What had at first seemed to be a $200,000 fraudulent bankruptcy developed into a $1,000,000 operation even before the returns were all in. It took a considerable time to line them up, but, in the end, West had before him the correspondence between Rosenbaum and more than 50 firms scattered from Boston to Los Angeles. Then he settled down to the task of analyzing what he had.

First of all, he went straight through the mass of letters. His first impression had been correct. There could be no doubt that every one of the letters had been written on the same typewriter!

But apparently this one machine had had a large number of operators, if the initials at the lower left-hand corners of the letters meant anything. This struck West instantly as being distinctly unusual. The picture it brought up to his mind—a picture of a number

"didn't remember much about him." The second produced little more, and the third unconsciously echoed Charter's own description: "Short and dark and inclined to be fleshy." And not one of the trio could add anything further of interest.

"I've had six jobs since then," said No. 3, running the tips of her well manicured fingers through her blonde hair. "How'd you expect me to remember what all my bosses looked like? I remember that I got paid and told that I needn't come back. That was enough for me."

No. 4 on the list was Agnes Harkins, the girl whose initials, "A. H.," coupled with the general excellence of her work, led West to hope that she might produce some more enlightening information. But application at Miss Harkins' residence—a boarding house in the middle twenties—brought the statement that she had returned to her home in Greenville, Tex., to be married.

That night found West en route for Greenville, a wire having brought the news that Miss Harkins was there and would await his arrival.

Three days later the commercial detective was face to face with the girl herself, and he was relieved to find that the contour of her face and the snap of her dark eyes bore out the impression of capability and brains which he had obtained from her typing.

"Yes," Rosenbaum's former stenographer told him, "I worked there for a week, and the whole six days were just like one long nightmare. Mr. Rosenbaum was the most disagreeable, suspicious creature I ever came across," and her eyes fairly snapped at the memory.

"What did he look like?" West inquired, casually, wondering whether his trip half way across the continent had been made in vain. But the answer reassured him.

"He was short and inclined to be fat," the girl replied. "His hair was dark and parted across a bald spot on top. You didn't notice that unless you came close to him—but it was. His eyes were rather small and set firmly close together, and his skin had the blue-black color that comes when men with this kind of hair shave very closely. But the thing about him that nearly drove me crazy was the way in which that thick under lip of his kept twitching all the time. You didn't notice it at first. It was almost imperceptible, unless he was excited. But after a while you got so that you kept watching for it. At least I did. It reminded me of a rabbit nibbling at a leaf. But I couldn't seem to keep my eyes away from it! Ugh!" and the girl shuddered.

"Did Rosenbaum seem to have any associates?"

"There was a man called Charlie that used to come around quite frequently. I don't think I ever heard his last name, or, if I did, I have forgotten it. He was just the opposite from Mr. Rosenbaum—tall, blond and rather good-looking. The only trouble was that he knew it. Dressed always a couple of jumps ahead of the style and, like most men that dress that way, rather fancied himself a lady-killer. Between them they made me mighty nervous, and I guess that's why I lost out. Mr. Rosenbaum told me on Saturday—just after I'd come back from mailing a registered letter, I remember—that I could have my pay for the week and another week's salary instead of notice, and that I needn't return. I think that was close to the best news I ever had."

"A registered letter?" West mused. "You don't happen to remember to whom it was addressed?"

"No, I don't think I do," the girl replied, slowly. "Let's see, now. It was a firm in Wilmington, Del. I remember that much. And the name was peculiar. Something beginning with 'Liver,' it seems like."

Further questioning failed to bring forth anything more of interest, so, with thanks and a check to be added to the accumulating wedding presents, West turned northward, intending to stop in Urbana, Ill., to interview the fifth girl on his list, who had also returned home. Here the information he obtained was practically the duplicate of that given by Miss Harkins, save for the fact that stenographer No. 6 had been discharged after mailing a registered letter to a firm in Dover, Del.

"No," she said, in answer to West's question, "I don't recall what the name was. It may have been Liverright, for all I know."

At the end of some six weeks, during which he had covered several thousand miles, West had interviewed nearly all of the 15 girls who had worked for Rosenbaum & Co. There had been enough evidence in the batch of letters he had previously collected to convict the members of the "bankruptcy gang," lacking only clues as to the identity of the men themselves. And now he had these clues.

From the testimony of the girls it was apparent that hardly a week had passed without a registered letter having been sent either to Dover or to Wilmington. So West's next visit was to the chief of the Postal Inspection Bureau.

"I'd like to look over the records for about six months back," he said, "of registered mail to Delaware—to Dover and Wilmington, particularly."

But there were no letters on the list with the name of Rosenbaum & Co. as the sender. The man with the twitching lip had evidently thought it best to send these communications as personal matters or had used an assumed name.

"However," as the commercial detective pointed out to the postal inspector, "we've got the name of the man to whom they went, all right. Liebowitz in each case—sometimes in Dover and sometimes in Wilmington. Wonder if there are two of them, or if that was just a stall? Guess Delaware'll be my next stop, inspector. These two Liebowitz gentlemen will stand investigation."

There were two Liebowitzes, and they proved to be just as worthy of West's attention as he had hoped they would be. True, both of them had disappeared from their former haunts, but one of them, West discovered, had married a sister of "Come-On" Charlie Greenfield of Philadelphia, whose operations through the mails had more than once caused the postal authorities to get dangerously close to him.

So West dropped off at Philadelphia on his way back and the inspectors there again threw out their nets for "Come-On" Charlie.

Then for a while nothing happened. West didn't worry, though, for it was one of his characteristics that he could be patient and, at the same time, implacable.

It was about three weeks later that he sat at his desk in New York reading a batch of credit reports from various agencies. Here and there a familiar name greeted him. Here and there appeared a peculiar relation of facts or figures that seemed to warrant investigation. And then his eye caught an item from Baltimore that challenged his attention. It was a report on a man named Julius Steinhart, a wholesale dry goods merchant, who appeared to be doing an excellent business. His assets were satisfactory. His stock was large. His sales were big. He had been in business for several months. But it was not these things which caused West to reread the report with extra interest; it was a little footnote stating that this was the first report on Steinhart.

How, without any previous record of business, had he been able to buy such a large stock without any of his creditors having requested a rating up to this time? West's lips met in a thin line and the corners of his eyes tightened perceptibly.

"Yes," he remarked, "a trip to Baltimore ought to be very well worth while."

The following morning the commercial detective took up his position only a short distance away from Steinhart's establishment and noted that a distant view of that merchant reminded him very much of the description of Rosenbaum. But before West went any further he visited three credit men in Baltimore with whom he was on intimate terms, and also stopped in at a stationery store, where he had a rush job done.

The next afternoon Julius Steinhart received a call from Mr. Charles Phillips of Phillips & Sons, Athens, Georgia.

"I'm not the regular buyer for the firm," Mr. Phillips admitted, in response to Steinhart's inquiry as to who had suggested his name, "but I happened to be passing through Baltimore and I heard from several of my friends that you had a fine line of goods"—and Phillips rattled off the names of three of the foremost jobbers in Baltimore, whom he suggested for references.

Steinhart excused himself and phoned to the men whom Phillips had mentioned—"merely as a matter of form," he explained. When he returned the Georgia merchant saw that his lower lip was twitching violently. Evidently the report had been a good one, and he sensed an opportunity for staging a sale that would possibly clean up the major portion of the goods he had on hand. The usual details were cleared up and an appointment made for the following day, when Phillips was to select the stock he wished sent down to Athens.

But when West returned to his hotel he found a long-distance call from Philadelphia telling him that the postal authorities had rounded up "Come-On" Charlie Greenfield, both of the Liebowitzes and several of their accomplices.

"Rosenbaum's the only man that's missing," the inspector informed him.

"And he won't be missing long," West retorted. "I'll have him in the morning, if things go right. I'd go back and get him now, but his place is closed by this time."

When he arrived on the scene the next morning, however, he found that Steinhart had "been called out of town," and, from the general air of activity around the place, West realized that news of the capture of Greenfield and the Liebowitzes had reached his quarry the night before and that preparations were being made for a quick get away with all the goods on hand. Stopping only long enough to place everyone in the establishment under arrest and to put his official seal upon the door, the detective started out again on the trail of the one man he wanted. As he left the office he caught sight of a framed photograph upon Steinhart's desk—the picture of a plump, middle-aged woman, with a child on either side of her. The picture had been taken in a rolling chair on the Atlantic City Boardwalk, and, from one of the electric signs that appeared in the background, West knew that it was not more than two weeks old, for the sign had only recently been swung into place.

Steinhart's family were, therefore, presumably in Atlantic City, and, in spite of the fact that his flight would necessarily take him through Philadelphia, it was a good bet that the man West was after would go to the sea shore, ship his family somewhere else, and then attempt to make his escape on one of the crowded holiday trains.

A three days' search of the Boardwalk hotels failed to produce any sign of the missing wholesaler, and West was on the point of concluding that his hunch had

ONE winter when on the way to their sea island, Mrs. Peabody of Boston stopped over at the big hotel with the 14 white columns and had her appendix taken out. During her convalescence Peabody, having nothing better to do, explored the city of Charleston, and discovered that a lost great-great-grandmother of his had been a LeGare street girl, and was buried under a tangle of Malayan jasmine in the churchyard of St. Michael. Having some papers to sign, Peabody carried them to a notary public. Peabody held up one hand, swore that he was himself, signed the papers and entered into conversation with the notary. This one, an elderly gentleman, had done no business in a week but, being a member of Charleston society, was agreeable to talk to. Crops, duck shooting, wrought iron balconies, chips on shoulders, money, manners, Sea Island cotton, sieges, earthquakes, tidal waves and hurricanes were reviewed with mutual enjoyment by the Beacon street millionaire and the Meeting street notary. Mrs. Peabody's late appendix was delicately referred to, and, last of all, Peabody's great-great-grandmother.

"She was a LeGare street girl," said Peabody, "Mary Chilton."

At this a look of more than friendliness beamed in the notary's eyes, and he reached for his black felt hat.

"Make your appeal for help direct to the bartender, Cousin," said Mr. Ravenel, the notary.

A little later:

"Cousin," said Mr. Peabody, "name your poison."

For an hour they stood each with one foot raised six inches from the floor, and upon a little sea, one-half appeals for help, one-half terms in toxicology, drifted into a warm friendship for each other.

And it was arranged that the Peabodys should never again pass through Charleston without stopping. And other matters were arranged and settled forever; namely, that blood is thicker than water, and that of the late unpleasantness between the North and the South there is much to be said on both sides.

After a while the gray Southerner went home to his wife, and the Northerner, looking like the boy Arthur, went home to his. And each spoke to his better half of the other eloquently and with enthusiasm.

During the next week almost everybody in Charleston that was anybody called upon Mrs. Peabody, and her rooms at the big hotel were filled with choice flowers, and the bowl on the marble-topped table by the sitting-room door filled with "cyards."

* * * * * * * *

Another year found the Peabodys once more at the hotel of the 14 white columns. They had been entertained, they said, far more than was good for them, and they had determined to wind up the Charleston season with a great ball of their own providing, not, indeed, to pay for hospitality received, but to put on record that hospitality had not been all upon one side. About invitations there was no difficulty whatever. People are in Charleston society or out of it. And the only people asked to the ball, who were not in it, were Northern friends of the Peabodys, collected from Aiken. Among these was Miss Muriel Gardner of Boston. She came over two days before the others, without even a maid to chaperon her, and was met at the station by Mrs. Peabody's social adviser, Robert Chilton, first cousin of Mr. Ravenel, the notary.

"But," said he, "I have never seen her."

"You have simply," said Mrs. Peabody, "to address yourself to the prettiest girl who steps off the train.

They turned into an avenue of live oaks, but it was more like a tunnel, for the huge, twisted trees, meeting overhead, roofed the weed-grown roadway and kept out the moonlight.

I'd go with you if I could, but I can't. And Peabody is in the cellar with the management looking over the champagne. Besides," she added, mischievously, "I have telegraphed her to beware of a youth half-past-six high, with red hair."

"'Beware of the handsomest man in the station,' would have been sufficient," said young Chilton, "and more complimentary."

Then he set out for the station. He walked because he could not afford to ride. He walked slowly because it was a hot day, and he could not afford to become overheated in his other good suit of clothes. What money he had in pocket was to pay for Miss Gardner's hack from the station to the hotel. But in the young man's mind there was no thought of poverty or riches, since nothing but evil conduct could alter his great position in the world to which he belonged—that delightful world in which few men are trying to get rich, and in which many aren't even trying to make a living. His heart was not open to envy or malice; but color found entrance, beauty, gaiety, mischief, moonrises and sunsets.

Once or twice in his young life he had been well off. But the hurricane of the preceding summer had destroyed his little crop of Sea Island cotton and left him destitute of ready cash. He had resigned from his clubs, climbed high upon the water wagon, eschewed poker, sold his little automobile to pay his debts, inked the worn places on his second-best suit of clothes, and continued to enjoy life, the respect of men and the admiration of the ladies.

girl in the world. If, then, she elected to wed hotel, he would be the longer in her company walked a little way. And for the first time thought of the 50 cents which had been useful in an emergency. And the thought suffused from head to foot with a delicate pink of shy let the pleasure of being "the longer" in Miss society be increased by any consideration of a nary nature was antagonistic to his whole what should be expected of a gentleman's hand fore, passing a slotted box on which was written the Blind," he dropped 50 cents into it, and felt had been cured of some unclean disease.

"Are you specially interested in the blind, ton?"

"Yes," he said.

"May I ask why?"

"Of course," he said. "If I had been blind never have seen you."

Miss Gardner had come to Charleston fo against pretty speeches. "All the men," she had written, "will make pretty speeches to once, without preamble, and you mustn't mind

But if Miss Gardner was forewarned, she forearmed against Chilton; neither against himself—nor against his voice—that dreamy and was like music in her ears.

only thing I'm afraid of," said Miss Gardner, confidentially, "is that we aren't going to find any treasure."

Chilton laughed merrily.

"That is my fear also," he said, "but at least, Miss Gardner, the ride in the moonlight—the haunted house by the river—the delight of hoping—these things, as I have heard you Northerns say, will be 'pure velvet.'"

Ten minutes later, Chilton had cranked Dr. Mulholland's car and the two adventurers were bumping up Meeting street toward the open country.

"Where is your coat?" asked Miss Gardner.

The night was still moonlit and sharply cold.

"I left it at my uncle's," said Chilton, demurely.

She leaned a little toward him and studied his bold, clean-cut profile.

"When you say your 'uncle,'" she said, "do you mean your uncle or your—uncle?"

He answered her with verse, saying:

"I will make you brooches and toys for your delight,
Of bird-song at morning and star-
shine at night.
I will build a palace for you and me
Of green days in forest and blue days at sea."

For the first time in her knowledge of him, there was in his voice a little of that pathos which goes hand in hand with the poverty that is bravely borne. But she did not dare to offer sympathy. So she mimicked his voice, and his somewhat formal ordering of words, and said, drawling a little:

"When we have discovered the treasure, let us proceed directly to your uncle's."

Chilton laughed like a boy.

"He doesn't open till 9 o'clock in the morning."

"Tell me," she said, presently, "is Mr. Ravenel a cousin of yours?"

"He was," said Chilton, "until he danced with you for the third time."

They turned into an avenue of live oaks, but it was more like a tunnel, for the huge, twisted trees, meeting overhead, roofed the weed-grown roadway and kept out the moonlight. And then the air, damp and motionless, added to the subterranean effect.

"What are you laughing at?"

"I was laughing at the gray moss," said Miss Gardner, cheerfully. "Hundreds of desperate ladies, having jumped overboard in their nightgowns, have been rescued and hung on these trees to dry. You must be frozen!"

"I am very happy," said Chilton. The going was very bad indeed and he drove the doctor's little car at a crawl. "It isn't far now to the treasure. All the gay dancers are wondering what has become of us. Are you sure you aren't cold? You won't be angry if there's no treasure? Dr. Mulholland is always putting up jokes on people. I think this is one. But I'm not sure. Indeed, I'm so uncertain that I'm exciting myself."

They came out of the umbrageous tunnel into full moonlight and saw before them crowning a wavelike rising of the land, a dark house, buried to the waist in shrubs and creepers; beyond they could see a loop of the river, like a great horseshoe of silver. In their nostrils was a strong smell of box.

Carrying one of the car's oil lamps, Chilton led the way into the house and through it. For it had not doors, and was only a shell of a house, kept from falling to pieces by its two brick chimneys and the strong arms of its embowering vines.

They descended into what had once been a formal garden. But its box edgings, unclipped, had grown here and there to the height of a man. And the young people were a long time finding the treasure pool in the midst of the tangle. It was black as ink, and to less healthy imaginations must have suggested all kinds of reptilian horrors and surprises. But Miss Gardner was not afraid even to be left alone while Chilton went with the lamp to find the faucet which drained the pool. He was gone a long time, and then she heard him call from far off:

"Is the water running out?"

And then she saw that the level of the pool was really lower, and so told him. And he rejoined her presently, gleeful with excitement, wonderfully tall, shouldering through the box.

"It wasn't a faucet at all," he said, "but a four-inch pipe with a valve. Look, I'm drenched. The water jumped out at me like a wildcat."

He knelt by the pool and lowered the lamp to the full length of his arm. Already the surface of the water had descended a foot. Another foot and the passageway of which Dr. Mulholland had spoken began to be discovered. Miss Gardner knelt by Chilton and they did not speak.

An owl swinging close to their heads gave a loud and sudden hoot. Chilton let go of the lamp and it was extinguished with a wet and savage hiss. First, he turned to Miss Gardner and told her, in carefully chosen words, what he thought of himself, and then he left her while he fetched the other sidelight from the car. But when he was out of sight and hearing he jumped furiously up and down and swung his arms with much violence, for he was blue with the cold.

As for her, she sat in the moonlight by the empty pool, and wondered if her penniless cavalier could ever bring himself to propose to a girl who had plenty of money. Of course, she thought, there isn't any treasure, and if one person has told me that he has two coats to his back a dozen have done so. But suppose there was treasure, suppose he asked her to marry him, would she say "Yes"? All that survived in her of cautious New England ancestry said: "On a three-days' acquaintance? Not you! What perfect tommyrot! You know him as little as he knows you. And just because his Domingo mahogany-colored hair and exceptional length and pale-gray eyes with the ring of soot around the colored part have disturbed your equilibrium, why! Now, really, my dear child—believe us! Treasure or no treasure, do your hunting nearer home. Why, nobody remotely connected with this young fellow ever so much as burnt a witch—not even a little bit of a witch. Go to! 'Marry! (we mean don't marry!—Come up!'"

At this point Chilton returned with the lamp.

"Have you heard anything—seen anything?" he asked in a whisper.

She shook her head.

"Why?"

And he shook his head; but stood awhile gazing gravely and searchingly here and there into the surrounding shrubbery.

"The water has all run out," she said, "except for a trickle that probably keeps the thing full."

"If you hear anything suspicious," he said, "promise to call to me so that I must hear."

He slipped his long legs over the edge of the now emptied pool and dropped into the slimy, dripping musty-smelling depths.

She leaned over and looked down, holding the lamp at arm's length.

"How are you going to get out again?" she asked.

"If there is a snake down here," he answered, "nobody will ever know; the act will be too swift to be followed by the human eye. Thanks."

He had taken the lamp from her hands, and then, bending double, he had entered the passageway that opened off the pool and disappeared.

He was not gone long. She heard him laugh before she saw him. He emerged carrying by its iron handle as a traveler carries a valise, a compact little chest that appeared to be reinforced by bands of metal.

"I'm laughing," he said, "because they've even left the key in the lock."

"Oh, open it," she cried.

"That is to be your privilege," he said.

"But," said she, "suppose something should pop out of it, a jumping jack, or something. I don't want to die of fright."

"It isn't very heavy," he said. "Do you think you could"——

She could—and did—using only one hand.

"And now the lamp."

She set it on the brick curb of the pool.

"And now you, Mr. Chilton."

Extended to almost his full length, Chilton's hands pressed flat on the curb. He steadied himself, shot suddenly upward and was kneeling at her feet, the chest between them.

"Great work!" she said, being a good judge of form. "I—I'm too excited to think. Must we open it now? I'm afraid."

"Afraid—you!"

Her heart was beating with great rapidity, and she said:

"Yes—afraid—afraid we are going to be disappointed. Let's—let's pretend tonight, and not really find out till tomorrow."

"Of course," he said, "if you wish."

"I don't wish," said femininity at once. "I must know and I can't wait. I'll hold the lamp."

Without a word Chilton unlocked the chest, and threw open the lid.

Their heads touched.

"If they are all five hundreds," said Miss Gardner, presently, "it's really an awful lot of money."

Chilton was laughing softly.

"It was an awful lot," he said.

"Was! What do you mean?"

He pulled a tattered bill from a package of money, and held it close to the lamp, at the same time pointing to the words printed across the top of it in a curve: "Confederate States of America."

"Aren't they any—any good?" she asked.

"Not," said Chilton, "to a girl whose hair curls naturally."

He examined the chest closely. It was quite new; the metal bands but little bitten with rust.

"We are the victims," said he, "of one of Dr. Mulholland's practical jokes."

"An immensely funny one," said Miss Gardner, bitterly. "Ha!—ha!—I laugh. . . . But, if you don't mind, I'll take one as a souvenir."

"We shall take them all," said Chilton; "if I can't spend them in riotous living, I can at least make Dr. Mulholland eat them." A short oath jerked from his lips, something flashed in each of his hands, from these flashes escaped two brighter flashes, accompanied by two sharp reports.

It was over before Miss Gardner could get to her feet. She saw two men fall—crumpled, and she saw Chilton close with and overpower a third. And as she reached her feet she saw Chilton drop this third assailant into the pool.

"Well, I never!" she said, and bit her lips, wishing either that she had not been heard or that she had said something showing more presence of mind.

Chilton was bending over the two men at whom he had discharged the derringers.

"They're still breathing," he said. "Thank heaven for that. Where are you hurt? Can you hear me?"

His answer was a sudden burst of laughter. Chilton snatched the black mask from the man's face and recognized the aristocratic features of his cousin, young Mr. Ravenel.

At this moment the other brigand sat up and removed his mask.

"Willy Cavendish!" said Chilton, in a mournful voice. "But—but I shot to kill."

"You were loaded with blank cartridges, Bob," said Ravenel. "Where's the doctor?"

"The doctor!" said Chilton, grimly, "is in the pool."

"Don't be mad, Bob."

"I'm not mad, but why did you do it? I—I might have hurt somebody."

A voice came from the depths of the pool—a voice reverberant, hollow, unhappy——

"You have hurt me, suh. And I wish to be taken from this place at once."

Chilton laughed, and selecting some peculiarly soiled and tattered bills from the chest, he lay down by the edge of the pool and looked over.

"Hold the lamp, Jack."

HOLLYWOOD RE-VISITED·· Number FOUR

KARL K. KITCHEN.

IT WILL not be long before motorists on the film coast will point to a handsome two-story house in Beverly Hills—and say:

"That's the home of one of the first families in Hollywood, as you drive in."

For this handsome two-story house which is nearing completion on one of the best known Beverly Hills will soon be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin, if there is a Mrs. Chaplin, and the comedian alone if there isn't.

It is merely a coincidence that the new home is being prepared for occupancy as the engagement of the film star is announced. When Charlie Chaplin planned his new home he had no intention of getting married. Pola, like Eve, was an afterthought. However, there is no reason why it should not make a "Honeymoon Hall," and if Charlie brings his bride there it will become one of the most famous show places of California.

"It isn't going to be anything like what I had planned, but what rights has an owner?"

There are few finer sites in the world than the hilltop on which Chaplin has built his new home. Ten miles away lies the City of the Angels, and stretching out in front of it is the Pacific Ocean, with Catalina Island plainly visible on clear days. Behind the house are the Santa Monica Mountains, smiling and greenclad throughout the year, and, as his closest friends, "Doug" and Mary, are his nearest neighbors, it will be seen that the location is almost ideal.

Judged merely as a house there is nothing particularly remarkable about this new 14-room structure that Charlie has built. It is of Californian-Gothic design, so the comedian informed me, probably so-called because it is neither Californian nor Gothic. As a matter of fact, Charlie designed the house himself and as it suits him he is not concerned whether it pleases anyone else.

From the outside the most noticeable feature of the house is the unusually large size of the windows which occupy most of the facade. When Charlie first planned the house he designed usual-sized windows, but when Douglas Fairbanks visited the partially complete structure he told Charlie that he ought to have large windows in the living room and dining room so that he could see Catalina Island without going out on the terrace. Charlie promptly changed the size of the windows, for he has great confidence in Fairbanks' judgment—at least when it comes to house planning.

However, the walls had no sooner been torn apart to permit the large windows than Pola Negri, who was taken to the unfinished home, told Charlie that the alterations would spoil the architectural design.

"But I won't be able to see Catalina unless I have large windows in the front of the house," protested Charlie.

"If you want to see Cafalina you can step out on the terrace," said the practical Pola.

"All right," agreed Charlie, and the next day he had the windows restored to their former size.

But a week later the walls were ripped apart again to permit the large windows. Mary Pickford, after a visit to the house, informed Charlie that it was foolish to build a house on such an expensive site without getting the benefit of the view, and so the large windows were restored—and are still there unless Miss Negri has again revised the plans.

However, there are certain permanent features that may be described with little fear that they will be affected by the comedian's matrimonial plans. Most important of these is the large study, which will be the favorite room of the film favorite. It is a two-story room, with a large open fireplace and a pipe organ. Here Charlie will study the poets and receive his guests.

It must be admitted that this room, when it is hung with rare tapestries and old masters, will be one of the handsomest in Southern California.

The drawing room, on the other side of the house—for Charlie's baronial hall looks out on the mountains in the rear of his home—has been equipped with a full-sized projection room, so that films can be shown in it without disturbing anything.

No film star's house, of course, is complete without a miniature or improvised picture theater, for the greatest pleasure a great movie star can have is to witness the stupid pictures of his rivals.

I motored out to Charlie's new house with the comedian, and he explained its various features as we inspected the uncompleted structure from top to bottom. It was a bright, sunny Sunday morning, and there were no workmen on the job—not even a caretaker.

"What name have you selected for your place?" I asked him.

"Haven't got that far," he answered. "I was thinking of calling it Agincourt, after the battle, you know, but I was afraid that some people would call it A-Gin-Court, and that would never do. I'd rather have it called Alco-Hall than that.

"But there's no hidden meaning behind this place," he went on. "I spent so much time at 'Doug's' that I thought it would save wear and tear on my cars to have a house nearby. This hill wasn't doing anything, so I bought it. I've had a lot of fun letting 'Doug' and Mary change all my plans. It isn't going to be anything like what I planned, but what rights has an owner? When you get into the hands of an architect and interior decorators, to say nothing of friends, you haven't any personality left. You're just the one to pay the bills."

Chaplin is the champion practical joker of Hollywood, but for obvious reasons many of his most amusing exploits have never been published.

Probably the best one he "pulled off" was on the occasion of the visit of King Albert of Belgium to Los Angeles. Chaplin happened to know a Belgian resident of Hollywood who was quite a character, and he sent him a letter that King Albert would call on him during the visit. The Belgian was much excited by the prospective visit of his King, and at Chaplin's suggestion he prepared an elaborate dinner at his home—for the King and a few chosen guests.

It was announced in the newspapers that the King would arrive from Santa Barbara by airplane, and so carefully did Chaplin work out the details of the plot that he actually had an actor who resembled the King arrive by airplane in the presence of the Belgian victim. A guard of four motor police had been arranged for, and as Chaplin had bogus reporters and photographers, the victim was completely fooled—for it must be remembered that King Albert arrived in Los Angeles at the same time and the papers were filled with accounts of his activities.

The joke was so successful that a few days later when the victim was told how he had been fooled, he wouldn't believe it—and Chaplin actually had to bring the bogus King to the Belgian's home to convince him that it was a practical joke.

From which it will be seen that the humors of house building are probably appreciated by Charles Spencer Chaplin. He's too great a "kidder" not to allow "Doug" and Mary—to say nothing of Pola—to have some fun at his expense.

"I'll make them live in this house—that will be my revenge," he said, with a laugh. "It's my house, and I've already spent $150,000 on it to suit them, but, thank God, I don't have to live in it."

But the funny part of it is that he will.

70 Years in an Invalid's Chair

In May, 1921, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Shaver of Evening Shade celebrated their golden wedding. It was a most interesting event. Their children and their grandchildren were present, and many friends gathered at the commodious brick residence which Mr. Shaver had built a few years after his marriage and where the family had resided for about 46 years up to the time of the golden wedding. The Shaw County Record, edited and owned by the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Shaver, carried a modest account of the celebration. There was every reason for a detailed front-page story, for Mr. Shaver had become the leading citizen of his county. He had served seven years as Postmaster at Evening Shade and 12 years as County Treasurer, being elected six times to that office.

The predictions of relatives that Mr. Shaver "couldn't make a living" if he married had proved altogether unfounded. He had continued in the mercantile business after his father's retirement, with some of his brothers as partners and himself as head of the firm. He had built and paid for one of the best houses in town. He had improved the postoffice service during his incumbency as Postmaster, so that there were 20 mails a week instead of three, and the place was made a money-order office. He had made an efficient County Treasurer. He had been active for many years in the promotion of public building and other improvements. He was a successful man. Though never rich, he had managed to give his four children excellent educations.

The eldest son had been a school principal and was a candidate for public office at the time of his death. The youngest son served his county in the State Legislature for two years before he died. The daughter married and removed to a city to live. The second son still publishes the home newspaper. All of the children, at times, taught school.

About a year after his marriage Mr. Shaver saw an advertisement of a rolling chair of a type then coming into use for invalids. He bought one of these chairs and found that it enabled him to get around considerably better than did his old home-made chair on castors. But when he built his new home he was too far from his place of business to go to and from it in his wheel chair. He bought a small wagon, in which his attendant drew him back and forth. When he reached the age of 70 he retired from active business, but by no means from his church work.

Becoming a member of the Methodist Church in early manhood, he has taken an increasing interest in religious endeavors ever since. His work in the church he regards as the thing most worthy of permanent record in his life.

Mrs. Shaver, also past 80, still lives, and the old couple are happy and hopeful. "It is great fun to be 85 years young," said Uncle Charlie on his latest birth anniversary.

A Carolina Night's Entertainment

"Miss Gardner," said Chilton, "they just did it, because you said you were just longing for an adventure—but somehow I feel humiliated and ashamed. No man likes to show his angry, fighting side without just cause. I was hasty with my weapons—too hasty."

"If you don't stop feeling humiliated and ashamed," she said, "I'll get out and walk."

"I'd rather cut off my hand than have you do that."

There was a short silence.

"Mr. Chilton!"

"Yes, Miss Gardner."

"I was just thinking—maybe you know of some other treasure—that we could look for—a—real treasure."

"Oh," said the young man, confidently, "I certainly do—a sure enough treasure."

"Well," said she, "the night is yet young—is this treasure far off?"

He slowed the car almost to a standstill, and turning his head looked with a certain wistful, beseechingness into her lovely face.

"Miss Gardner," he said, gravely, "I don't know! I don't know! I don't know!"

Let me tell you about the remarkable discovery which removed my superfluous hair at once — then forever

To look at my face today—to see my skin as free from hair as a baby's and as clear and rosy looking as that of a young girl—you would not believe that I was once literally a "bearded woman" with hair on cheeks, chin and lips, and with a skin coarse and blemished.

A Woman's Experience

The transformation has been marvelous—all through a truly wonderful discovery of Science which immediately banished every vestige of the hair and gave me this perfect complexion. This, after I had suffered from embarrassing hair growths for years, and tried numerous ways to relieve the condition—even painful electric needle.

Now I want every woman who suffers from unsightly, embarrassing hair growths, to know about this discovery which removes the hair at once, and with a few applications removes it permanently. I want to tell women how they can use this method themselves, in the privacy of their homes, and prove, without risking a penny, that it is all I claim for it.

I say that this discovery will remove superfluous hair permanently, and that it is the only method I know of which will do this.

The discovery which I have brought to me is unlike anything you have ever tried. It is not a powder, not a paste, not a wax, not a liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It causes no pain—no burning, no itching, no scarring. It not only removes the hair— it gives you a new beauty—makes it soft and rosy, free from pimples, blackheads and other blemishes. It does not have to be applied by a beauty specialist. You use it yourself. It's the simplest, easiest way you can imagine.

My Free Book Tells the Secret—Send for It

I have written a book which tells how I came to discover this amazing method and how any woman can get rid of superfluous hair, and know that it is permanently gone. Don't send a penny—don't make any promise. Just write to me. The book is free. A postcard brings it.

Baby, Seemingly Dead, Saved by Adrenalin

massaged the heart, to prevent the contraction induced by adrenalin from becoming permanent. He had sent instantly for a pulmotor and a tank of oxygen. In a hospital such apparatus is always ready. They arrived quickly and by their means he made the lungs keep on contracting and expanding while he supplied them with more oxygen than they could normally draw in from the air.

But Dr. Miniuberg knew that the contraction of the heart and arteries—for the adrenalin was now flowing through those and making them contract—would raise the blood pressure to an abnormal height and put a strain upon the heart which it might not be able to stand. Accordingly, with the assistance of two nurses, while still operating the pulmotor, he drew half an ounce of blood from the baby's veins, thus relieving the pressure on the heart.

After working for an hour, the infant's heart was beating normally, and its respiration was restored. Its life had been saved. Since then all has passed quite normally. The child nurses with a good appetite and has gained substantial weight.

In connection with this probably unprecedented stimulation of the heart, it is well to remember—which Dr. Miniuberg undoubtedly did—that the heart is one of the last organs to die. To prove this fact, take a frog, kill it and cut out its heart. Put the heart in a watch glass with warm water, and you can watch it beat for many hours. Better still, hang it up under a glass bell in pure air and you can watch it beat until it is almost dry!

Dr. Charles E. de M. Sajous, already quoted, said in a lecture at Bristol, Pa., two years ago, that such collapses as often follow many infectious diseases are really due to exhaustion of the suprarenal glands, which have been more than ordinarily busy sustaining the defensive fever, which includes, of course, unusually active oxygenation. They have worked to their limit and finally given out. As they control the contractile power of the heart muscles, heart failure follows.

"The majority of the patients who die from exhaustion," he continued, "would be saved if the importance of the adrenals were generally realized and adrenalin in eight-minim doses were injected intramuscularly—with a syringeful of saline solution several times a day. I have seen cases virtually snatched from the jaws of death by this practice."

The Insignificant Clue Which Brought Success

been wrong when he saw the man he was watching for slip through the gate into the New York express just the instant before it was slammed shut. Dashing through another gate the commercial detective caught the rear platform of the train as it jerked into motion, and less than a minute later he dropped into the seat directly behind the man with the twitching lip. Then, leaning forward, he tapped Rosenbaum upon the shoulder. The latter wheeled, started and his hand moved quickly toward his hip pocket.

"None of that," growled West. "There's no sense in making a fuss about it. You might get me, but you haven't a chance to get off this train. Besides, what's the use in taking a chance on the chair, when 20 years is the most you can get for that little affair in New York?"

As he spoke he saw the other man's eyes drop, and suddenly he slumped back into his seat—beaten.

* * * * * *

"And all because," Quinn wound up, "of those initials in the lower left-hand corners of his letters. He probably never even noticed that they were there. Not one man in a thousand would. But West did—and he made them tell a story which it was absolutely impossible to gain from any other source.

"Yes," the former secret service man declared, tapping the bowl of his pipe in the palm of his hand, "there's some truth in the old saying that 'murder will out,' but you've got to watch the exits pretty carefully to know which one it's going to use."

The Man Who Works Miracles on Women's Faces

How a noted specialist is amazing experts with simple cream poultice of plants and flowers, containing no "Beauty Clay" or artificial bleach, which clears up a muddy skin in 5 minutes leaving it soft and lovely as a baby's—glowing, radiant!

Can you imagine a sallow skin, one even marred by blackheads and freckles, cleared up and left soft and white and lovely as a baby's in 5 minutes? It sounds like magic. And beauty scientists call it that.

The inventor is an internationally noted beauty specialist, whose miraculous transformations have gained for him the title of "The Man Who Works Miracles on Women's Faces." So many thousands are adopting his method that it is said a woman with anything short of a flawless complexion soon will be a rarity.

PURGES THE PORES

This method is unlike any other ever perfected. Dermatological authorities say it has no parallel in the annals of beauty culture. It is a simple cream-poultice, compounded of plants and flowers called Porolax. It affects the pores like a laxative does the bowels—cleans out the poisonous accumulations.

Containing no bleach, no harsh chemicals, no "Clay," it purges every pore in your face within 5 minutes. You apply it like cold cream and results are unbelievable until you see them with your own eyes.

At the recent Beauty Congress, dark-skinned women and girls, women with mottled, ugly skins were brought in for the Porolax treatment.

In one application their skins were lightened from four to seven shades. Blackheads were removed—every one. Freckles and fine lines disappeared as if by magic. Beauty experts from all the world stood awed before what was done, for instant beauty, an unattractive woman transformed, had become a reality.

FOR HOME USE

This secret preparation—Porolax—used in working these amazing skin transformations is now obtainable for home use at Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Famous-Barr, Vandervoort's, Johnson Bros., Enderle, etc., or we will send direct for a limited time if you mail the coupon below. Send no money, but pay the postman $2.00 when he delivers it to you.

FOUR NEW PANEL PORTRAITS OF NOTED MISSOURIANS, BY GARI MELCHERS AND RECENTLY INSTALLED IN THE STATE CAPITAL AT JEFFERSON CITY

The panel at left in the picture at top of page is a representation of Maj. James S. Rollins, who founded the Missouri State University. One of the original university buildings, is seen in the background. The prevailing tones are green and brown. This panel, like the other three, is 11 feet high and 6 feet wide.

At the right, in the upper picture, is the artist's conception of Eugene Field, who has been called "the children's poet." Field is portrayed as sitting on the edge of a table and looking down up a boy at play with tin soldiers. The reference, of course, is to Field's famous poem, "Little Boy Blue." In this picture blue is dominant.

No Missourian needs an introduction to the principal figure in the picture in the lower right hand corner. All will recognize Mark Twain (Samuel Langhorne Clemens.) The artist depicts the great humorist in the pilot house of a Mississippi River steamboat. The setting is a replica of the pilot house of the St. Louis Harbor Boat, the Erastus Wells. The white of Mark Twain's suit is a striking contract to the blue of the sky and the darker blue of the helmsman's uniform.

"Do you know that the cause of blemishes is—dust?"

To free your skin from blemishes

DO you know that the cause of blemishes is—dust? Dust carries bacteria and parasites into the pores of your skin. The result is an infection—a tiny abscess—and that disfiguring thing known as a skin blemish.

You can free your skin from blemishes by the following cleansing treatment:

EACH night just before retiring, wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, cream-like lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes.

Rinse your face thoroughly; first with clear hot water, then with cold.

Supplement this treatment with the regular use of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your daily toilet, and you will find that you can keep the new skin, which is constantly forming, free from blemishes. Within a short time you will be surprised to see how much clearer, smoother, lovelier, your complexion has become.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

Sand-lots are calling and red-blooded boys the country over are bursting with eagerness to "swat 'em a mile."

How about your boy? If he's lagging behind the procession, look to his food; it may be lacking in a single element the youngster needs to build up strength, energy and firm, healthy tissues.

Yeast Foam Tablets—a pure, tonic food—are the richest known source of a substance essential to digestion, growth and strength.

Have your boy eat these wholesome tablets along with his other food, and watch how he picks up.

Yeast Foam Tablets are made of whole, selected yeast; they keep and, unlike baking yeast, they don't cause gas. Hence they are safe for children and adults. Sold by druggists and made by the makers of the famous baking yeasts, Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast.

How women in big cities defy coal dust and dirt to age their skin

The famous method they use

It is almost surprising that so many women keep their skin young today in cities where soot and dirt hang thick over everything. This treacherous black dust settles on clothes, hangings—faces—makes them dull and old. Yet some women manage always to look fresh. Because they have learned to use this famous method which defeats these coarsening influences.

First this specially light cleansing leaves your face exquisitely clean and soft

Cleanse your skin nightly with this cold cream that is rich in a very fine oil. It takes out every bit of dulling, coarsening dirt and at the same time gives your skin a wonderful suppleness—Pond's Cold Cream. This cold cream is light enough to work in and out of the pores without stretching them and wipes off easily with a soft cloth.

It never leaves your skin heavy with cream. Instead your face is fresh and stimulated. It is this special light consistency of Pond's Cold Cream that makes you prefer it to the heavier creams. You love to use it for the delightfully supple feeling it gives your skin. But although this nightly cleansing keeps your skin soft, one cream alone will not keep your face lovely all through the modern day.

Then—protect and freshen it in an instant

For daytime use there is another cream that protects you delicately but surely against the roughening, ageing effects of wind and cold. Although the damage to you may seem slight at the time, the daily repetition of it inevitably weakens and coarsens your unprotected skin. Your face soon begins to look dull and old.

To avoid this breaking down of your skin, every time you go out smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream.

The minute you put it on you will feel a wonderful difference. How smooth and velvety your face is to your hand! How lovely and fresh it looks in the mirror! Never let it get rough or red again.

Use this cleansing cream made with a specially fine oil—Pond's Cold Cream. The difference in the freshness and feel of your skin will thrill you.

Protect your skin from the coarsening effects of wind and dirt with Pond's Vanishing Cream. At the same time it freshens your skin marvelously—in an instant.

Even if your skin is very oily this cream will keep it perfectly fresh for hours. There is not a drop of oil in it to reappear. Powder clings indefinitely to its smooth surface.

Or if you are fatigued at night, before you go out smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream. See how all the tiredness is smoothed out. Your face is fresh and lovely again almost in an instant.

Begin today to try this famous method that women in big cities have found so successful in keeping their complexions young—Pond's Cold Cream to cleanse perfectly and lightly—and supply just the needed oil for softness—Pond's Vanishing Cream to freshen your skin and save it from the damage of weather. You will wonder at the smoothness and added brilliancy your skin will acquire in only a few days.

Buy a jar or a tube of both these creams in any department store or drug store. They contain nothing which encourages the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Company, New York.

What is the first question your doctor asks you?

Health and life itself may depend on the answer

Men, women and children are its victims. It tears down strong constitutions—generates diseases—wrecks health. It has become a national menace!

That is why doctors everywhere are fighting constipation as a deadly enemy.

The body (like any other machine) is constantly throwing off a great quantity of waste. Unless this waste is got rid of regularly and completely every day, it generates deadly poisons that escape into the blood and flood your whole system. The body in such a state falls an easy prey to disease.

That is why doctors say that nearly all ailments can be traced back to constipation. That is why the first and most important thing your doctor wants to know is—

Are you regularly getting rid of the poisons that gather in the intestines?

Medical science knows that drugs and cathartics offer only temporary relief—and that in time they actually weaken the intestinal muscles so that they cannot act by themselves at all.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which soften and increase the bulk of the waste matter. This greater bulk gently encourages the intestinal muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active, and that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative. It is a nourishing food—not a digestion-disturbing medicine—and like any other food, it must be eaten regularly to achieve results.

Eat at least two or three cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

Send for free booklet, "The New Found Value of Fleischmann's Yeast in Building Health." The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

"And now I never need laxatives"

"I was run-down and badly constipated" writes a business girl, "and had one boil after another. For several months I added 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to my diet every day. The boils disappeared after the first week and now I never need laxatives."

THE DAYS THAT ARE NO MORE

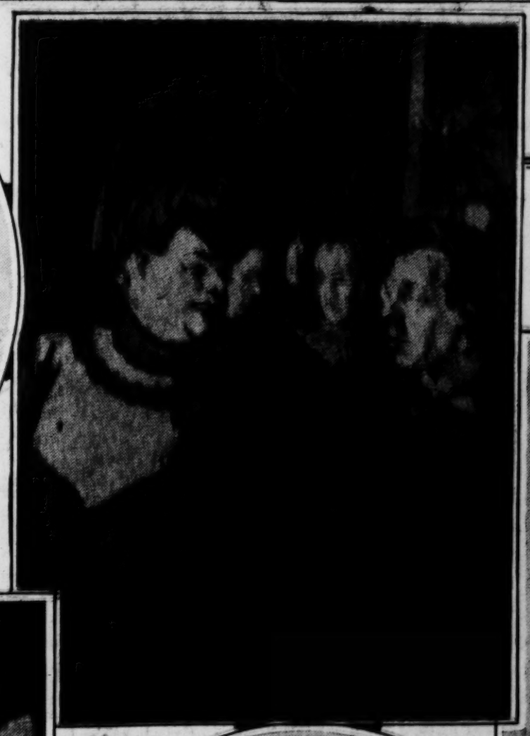
(COPYRIGHT) By W. E. HILL

Sunday evening in the year 1903 was a time of dulcet tones and the closest of harmony. "The Message of the Violet," "The Congo Love Song" and "Bedelia" were prime favorites with the young men who came a-wooing.

A croquet tournament in 1902. The athletic girl from Wellesley—she in the nifty little red tam and the white duck skirt—is about to make a crack shot.

Before and after in 1900. Showing what the advertising pages threatened to accomplish for any lady who dared take a chance with pneumatic shape accessories. Or were they made of wire?

"Really, I don't see what the young people are coming to—staying out till after 10 o'clock at night on straw rides! And only three chaperones!" Even in those days the older generation was upset about the younger generation.



"Pardon me, but does my hat annoy you?" Whether it did or didn't made not the slightest difference to any male in the seat behind, overcome as he must have been by such a vision of beauty

The very last word in sartorial splendor was the shirtwaist man in the oxblood striped shirt and the wash tie, to say nothing of the watch fob and the crash pants.

The sub-debs of the early 1900's, although these were the days before the Chauve-Souris had begun to color amateur shows, made a pretty snappy showing, all rigged out in Dennison crepe paper dresses for the beauty chorus of "The Brownies in Fairyland."

No masquerade party in 1898 was complete without one masker who came as the yellow kid.

A lady very much negligee twenty odd years ago was a different proposition from her sister today. The decorous Mother Hubbard is no more, and the silk knickers have arrived. Likewise the complexion cream has given way to the liquid and massage.

CANAL LOCK IN THE RUHR BLOWN UP BY THE GERMANS

Time Bomb Exploded in Dormund-Ems Waterway Near Herne, Five Miles From Bochum, Seriously Interferes With Occupation Traffic.

MORE MINES AND COKE OVENS ARE SEIZED

French and Belgians Now Hold 18 of These Plants; Funeral at Essen Tomorrow for Krupp Workers Killed in Riot.

By the Associated Press.

ESSEN, April 9.—The explosion of a time bomb destroyed the lock of the Dormund-Ems canal near Herne, five miles from Bochum, early today. The canal was blocked, seriously interfering with the complicated inland waterway traffic in the Ruhr.

This is the most serious case of sabotage yet reported on the Ruhr waterways. The lock that was destroyed is near the junction of the Dortmund-Ems Canal with the main canal that runs down to the Rhine at Duisburg and Ruhrort, where the largest inland port in the world is located.

The intention of the dynamiters apparently was not only to block the canal, but to drain the water from the main Rhine-Herne Canal, which is the main waterway artery of the Ruhr. The French say this main canal has not been interfered with, as the locks on both sides of the one which was dynamited were closed immediately after the explosion to prevent the draining of the main canal.

The Dortmund-Ems Canal, itself an important waterway, is blocked by the destruction of the lock. Guards have been placed at all junctions and locks as a measure for prevention of further damage.

More Coal Mines Seized.

The French authorities announce that seven additional coal mines and coke ovens have been seized by the commission of control representatives, who in each instance of seizure were accompanied by a military escort. These seizures bring the total number of coal mines and coke ovens now in the hands of the French to 18.

The directors of the Krupp works announce that the funeral of the 12 workmen killed by the French troops Saturday a week ago or who later died from their wounds will take place tomorrow morning. The works will be closed the entire day. Only 2000 workmen will march in the procession. They will represent all grades of the trades and also the religious unions of the 54,000 workmen employed by the Kruppa. Provision has been made for other workmen, who will wear special brassards as an identification mark, to act as police and keep order during the funeral. The French authorities have announced they will not interfere with the ceremonies providing there are no disorders.

Simultaneously with the funeral ceremony, a memorial service will be held in the Reichstag in Berlin, attended by President Ebert, members of the Reichstag, State officials and representatives of the trades unions. Chancellor Cuno will deliver the funeral oration.

Occupation Allies Soon to Get 6000 Tons of Ruhr Coke a Day.

(Copyright, 1923.)

DUESSELDORF, April 9. — The taking over by French troops of the coke piles at seven more Ruhr mines means that, in about three weeks more, if all goes well for the French, shipments of coke from the Ruhr to France and Belgium will have reached 6000 tons a day. This will be less than half the preoccupation deliveries made by the Germans and not sufficient to relieve the distress of French blast furnaces in Lorraine. There is enough coke piled around the mines in the Ruhr to last these months at this rate. But, at the end of this month, if German passive resistance does not break into riotous interference and sabotage, French coke difficulties will begin to diminish. At the same time German difficulties will continue to multiply in financial, economical and industrial complications. Under these conditions the longer the Germans hold out the more abject their collapse must be at the end. Although all Germans of all classes still declare that they will hold out indefinitely, a conference of delegates from all the great labor unions has passed a resolution which begins by
